ADDRESS BY THE GOVERNOR

Inaugural Message by Governor Earl Warren

Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, and Members of the Legislature:

In accordance with the Constitution, I desire to report to you on the condition of our State, and to recommend to you certain matters which, in my opinion, call for consideration by this Fifty-seventh Session of the California Legislature. It is a pleasure to welcome you to Sacramento—in this historic Capitol Building where throughout most of our history the laws of this State have been enacted.

This is an important session of the Legislature from many viewpoints. It is the first regular postwar session. It is the first of the annual sessions recently authorized by the people. It is the first session for the Administration that will be serving as California completes one hundred years of statehood. This State Government for which you and I are temporarily the trustees is the one that will be expected to pave the way for a second century of progress. It will be dealing with the problems of a State that has grown and changed more rapidly than any other in the Union.

The responsibility for solving these problems in the interests of a State of over nine million people is our joint responsibility. We can make a partnership of our task if we will—and it should not be difficult for us to do so. In such a partnership, we should be able to find areas of agreement that will make your deliberations fruitful for the entire State.

Such an approach requires a determination to draw a sharp dividing line between public and special interests. It means we must recognize that a thorough consideration of human problems transcends partisanship. It obligates us to cooperate for the common good without regard to party, faction, or personality. In such an atmosphere we should be able to agree speedily upon objectives, and to devote our energies to an honest search for methods of accomplishment. That kind of partnership will pay dividends as long as we keep in focus our vision of a greater and finer California where millions of people can live ordered and happy lives.

I am encouraged by what has taken place in this building during the past four years to propose that we enter upon this session in such a spirit. Those were war years. When I took office in 1943, I told the Legislature that our greatest need was for an era of good will in our State Government. We have had it to a marked degree. There has been little blind partisanship or personal controversy to hinder our attention to the job to be done. I hope that my own approach to our problems has been conducive to that result.

I want to foster the same spirit of cooperation and mutual respect during the next four years, both because it is more pleasant to live in such an atmosphere and because it will contribute to the progress and welfare of our State.

I know that the opportunity to serve at this period of our State's development must thrill you, as it does me. It is a wonderful privilege to be the heirs to California's traditions and the beneficiaries of the progress that has been made in the one hundred years since the Bear Flag and the Stars and Stripes were first unfurled on our soil in 1846.

The second century, if started well by us, will be filled with even greater opportunities for the generations that will follow ours. While, therefore, we are celebrating in these next few years the fulfillment of that which was sturdily pioneered by early Californians, it should be our inspiration to recall that we ourselves are pioneering the California of the future.

The frontier has changed but there can be no retreat or rest from the fight to protect our people against corrosive and destructive forces of both man and nature—against crime; against jeopardy of life and limb on the highways, in industry and in the fields; against preventable illness and disease; against the severities of misfortune among the helpless and handicapped; against the plight of homelessness; against ignorance that results from inadequate facilities for the training of young people; against floods; against the wastage of a precious heritage of natural resources.

These problems should not be left for solution at the hands of an already overburdened National Government. They are essentially home problems. State Government must draw fully upon all its own resources in their solution. Only in this way can we avoid federal bureaucracy, which in the abstract we deplore, but which in everyday life we too often encourage. Only in this way can the tremendous values of a government that is close to the people be preserved.

I realize there are limitations upon State and local government in the solution of the problems of our people. Certainly they cannot be solved at one legislative session. Our people do not expect any such miracle. They do expect, however—and they are entitled to have—sound and steady progress.

We must adapt our framework of law and service to the welfare of two million new residents that have been added to the seven millions who were here prior to 1940. We must also take into consideration the needs of the ten million more who, I firmly believe, will come here during the next few decades. Our task will not be easy, but it can be thrilling.

We have the satisfaction of knowing that even during the war years we were able to make some progress. We improved our humanitarian services, with respect to which delay would have been intolerable. We were able to reorganize the major departments of the State Government for better service under modern conditions. We inaugurated programs for the better conservation of our natural resources. We expanded our system of unemployment insurance for the protection of our working people and the stabilization of our economy. We encouraged business, industry, and agriculture to reestablish themselves on a peacetime basis. We reduced taxes.

All these things constitute a record of some progress made even during the war. Whether they are to be of the greatest value to our people, however, will depend on how we now build upon them. This is a time for introspection and resolution—not for self-satisfaction.

We can plan hopefully for the future. Our State has been able to change over rapidly from an economy geared to war production. At the present time, California is in a period of high employment. Six months after V-J Day it was necessary to pay unemployment insurance compensation to 227,000 persons, but this number has declined to 112,000 and the duration of payments is only 8.4 weeks on the average. We have 2,610,000 people gainfully employed in our State, compared with only 2,514,000 in April of 1940, a relatively prosperous peacetime year.

The manner in which our commercial life has adjusted itself to postwar conditions is a tribute to the resourcefulness of business and industry in our State and to the energy of their leaders.

As a result of this economic activity, our State Treasury will end the present fiscal year with a substantial surplus. The budget to be presented to you for the year ending June 30, 1948, will be a balanced budget, although it will of course reflect the greater needs of our expanding population for state services as well as higher costs. Meanwhile, our estimates show that it will be possible during the coming year to continue the tax reductions made in 1943 and re-enacted in 1945. I believe it is in order to continue these reductions.

In my opinion, any surplus beyond current requirements should be conserved for two vital needs. One of these is to maintain adequate hospitals, educational and other institutional facilities. The other is to provide for the rainy day which sooner or later comes into the lives both of people and governments.

If business should drop off only 20 percent in California, it would adversely affect our revenues by as much as $100,000,000 a year. When I previously proposed to the Legislature that we should set something aside for unforeseen needs, some people said I was taking a defeatist attitude—that I should be thinking in terms of prosperity and not depression—but I am still of the opinion that it is no more defeatist for a state to provide for a possible rainy day than it is for an individual to do so. I am as optimistic as anyone about the economic future of our State, but I think it is elementary prudence to establish a rainy day fund.

During this session we shall have the further advantage of working under a new system whereby the Legislature can now budget for State services on a yearly basis. In order to derive the full benefits from this system, I believe that a thorough study of the tax situation in California, such as I have previously suggested to you, should now be undertaken. Inquiries have already been conducted by your interim committees which will provide a basis for an over-all and adequately financed investigation. Such an investigation should include an examination of the respective responsibilities of local and State Government, and the manner in which they share the tax dollar of our people.

Until this is done—until we have these facts—it will be true that any tinkering with present procedures or allocations merely results in robbing Peter to pay Paul.

On the organizational side of State Government, the time has come to abolish all remaining wartime agencies, and to give consideration to revamping such permanent departments as may require reorganization.

The State War Council has already been liquidated. The State Guard is being disbanded as rapidly as the National Guard can be reactivated. In keeping with our promise made when these agencies were created, I now ask for similar action with respect to the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission and the Farm Production Council.

This decision is supported by the recent declaration of the President ending hostilities. A careful analysis of the effect this proclamation will have upon all our wartime legislation will shortly be available for your consideration.

The Farm Production Council performed an extremely valuable wartime service to agriculture and the public. Its activities with respect to recruiting and housing farm labor were of inestimable value in producing the crops so essential for war purposes. Any of its duties that are still necessary can now be taken over by our permanent state agencies, and the council can be discharged with thanks.

The Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission, created during the war, has served its purpose and in my opinion served it well. It was able to mobilize leadership from every walk of life to prepare for the return of peacetime conditions. It has worked steadily and effectively with our cities and counties and citizen groups representing every phase of California life in developing their postwar plans.

The commission has made exhaustive studies of great value to our people on such subjects as retail trade outlets, new industries, self-employment opportunities, steel and steel uses, aviation, harbors, mineral resources, and our educational system. Many of its recommendations to the Legislature have been enacted into law.

When the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission was created, you gave to it the responsibility for administering the Planning Act of 1935, and the State Planning Commission was abolished. Unless other provisions are now made for state planning, that important function of government will automatically lapse. To say the least, this would be illogical in an expanding State such as ours.

Inasmuch as it was the Governor who formerly appointed the Planning Commission, and inasmuch as he is charged both with proposing and administering programs for the development of our State, I suggest that the responsibility for planning be transferred to his office and that a new Planning Act be enacted to accomplish this.

The Governor's Office should also have the responsibility of assembling the statistical information obtained by our various state departments and integrating it with the research that is essential in evaluating economic trends. Our cities and counties, and the public at large, are entitled to have this information made available to them as a composite economic picture of our State.

An example of the need for constant planning is illustrated by the work we have had to do in preparing a Master Airport Plan for the State. Lacking other means, we called upon the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission, but a State Aviation Commission should now be created.

Within our borders are the plants at which were constructed 50 percent of all the airplanes used by our Nation's armed forces during the war, and we should be the peacetime capital of the aviation world. Surprisingly, however, we are one of only five states that have failed to establish an aviation authority. Until we do so, the State can neither help our cities and counties in planning for the air age, nor in turn receive help from the Federal Government.

Of all the problems in our State, housing remains the most critical. Jurisdiction over building materials, priorities, and surplus housing has been in the hands of the Federal Government, but its programs so far have been marked by confusion and frustration.

Last year, you appropriated $12,000,000 for participation in several Federal-State-local programs of utilizing surplus housing in California. Recently, the Federal Government summarily abandoned its emergency housing program for veterans—leaving between seven and eight thousand units in various stages of construction.

This clearly demonstrates that we cannot place ourselves wholly at the mercy of the Federal bureaus in this matter, and I wish to present to you a proposal that has been studied by our Department of Finance, Department of Veterans' Affairs and the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission. These state agencies have ascertained that large quantities of dwelling units and housing materials not heretofore declared surplus are now becoming available. The material is usable not only for temporary housing purposes, but also in the construction of good permanent housing.

It is the obligation of State Government to assist in every way to make this material easily and promptly available to veterans who desire to purchase it. In order to accomplish this, I suggest that you make available a revolving fund to be used by the Department of Finance for the purchase of this material and its resale to veterans.

An unprecedented volume of home construction could be under way at the present time if materials were available. The stumbling block is not a lack of money. Our financial institutions and the real estate and building industries of our State are fully prepared to go ahead with their part of the job. We have kept closely in touch with the building materials situation, and will continue to press the Federal Government for action.

In the meantime, we should be giving consideration to implementing the Urban Redevelopment Act which was passed by the Legislature in 1945, because the time will soon come when building conditions will make it possible to eliminate the blighted areas of our cities.

We should also re-appraise our building codes and regulatory services to assure that they are not cumbersome and that they conform to present-day conditions.

The people, acting upon proposals of the Legislature, have approved bond issues aggregating $130,000,000 for the purpose of making loans to World War II veterans for home and farm purchases. Although this program also lags because of construction delays and inflated prices, our Department of Veterans Affairs has been able to make 5,269 loans for a total of $28,383,214. We are ready and able to do our part in placing California veterans in the kind of homes for which they longed while overseas and which they now desperately need.

Our educational program for war veterans is moving forward more rapidly than was anticipated, and I recommend an emergency appropriation to finance it from this date to the end of the fiscal year.

I also recommend a continuation of all our services that help us in our desire to assist our veterans in every possible way.

Comparable only to the distress resulting from the housing shortage is the tragic situation in which we find ourselves as the result of an outgrown highway system. Our streets and roads have become places of frightful danger, and our economic development is being retarded.

To enable the Legislature to give its undivided attention to this problem, and to hasten the effective date of the statutes enacted relating to it, I am calling you into special session next Monday. At that time I shall submit my views more fully for your consideration.

We must also work for the greater safety of life and limb in industry. Tremendous increase in the use of machinery makes it imperative that we keep industrial safety abreast of industrial methods.

We have put into effect badly needed safety regulations and have written new safety orders for various occupations. We will continue to try to protect life and limb in preference to compensating for the loss of them. Unfortunately, accidents cannot be eliminated entirely. We can, however, in accordance with our obligation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, make adequate provision for the victims of accidents.

Consequently, I recommend that the act be studied with a view to restoring California to its former enlightened place among the states in this program which so vitally affects our working people.

Our families must also be protected as far as possible against preventable illness and disease. The first line of defense on the public health front is in the local community. Every county should be in a position to provide communicable disease control, maternal and child health services, environmental sanitation and food inspection, public health laboratory facilities, adequate health records and community health education. These are the minimum essentials.

At the present time, 26 counties in California do not have a full-time health officer. Over half of the counties having full-time health officers are unable to provide even the basic health services. In nearly every county, there is need for improvement.

In order to step up our health services throughout the State, the State Government should offer not only consultation, but financial assistance to those counties that have full-time health officers and comply with reasonable standards. These funds should be allocated so that the counties least able to finance health programs will be given a special opportunity to bring themselves at least up to minimum levels. The joint operation of health departments by two or more small counties should be encouraged where this will be more economical and still result in better service to the people. I recommend that an adequate appropriation be made for this purpose.

It has also become necessary for the State to lend a stronger helping hand to the counties in their fight against tuberculosis. In 1945, tuberculosis was responsible for 3,840 deaths—40 percent of all deaths due to communicable disease in California. This disease can be eliminated as a major cause of death if all cases are found early and treated properly.

However, the cost of hospitalization has increased to such an extent that additional state aid to the counties is necessary. This assistance should be proportionately greater to the smaller counties, and especially designed to assist those that have no facilities or inadequate facilities for the care of tubercular patients. If this is done, uniform care may be made available and another step taken toward the ultimate eradication of this disease.

Our fight on the public health front is not limited to physical illness. California is now caring for 30,000 extreme cases of mental illness in its state hospitals, and thousands of others are in need of medical care. Through the acquisition of Hammond and DeWitt General Hospitals from the United States Army, we will be able to relieve the congestion of our mental hospitals to some extent, and through other provisions in the budget we propose to improve their services to our afflicted citizens. A great deal of this waste of human usefulness could be avoided, however, by early and intelligent preventive action.

We are operating out-patient clinics at San Francisco and Los Angeles, where people undergoing mental strain may obtain treatment in time to prevent a complete breakdown. I am convinced that these clinics can save thousands of people from a lifetime of suffering, and that they can actually save dollars for the State by decreasing the number of people that must be hospitalized at state expense. Therefore, I request you to give serious consideration to the establishment of additional clinics at San Diego, Fresno, and Sacramento, and a second clinic at Los Angeles. The staffs of these clinics will also be able to furnish mental hygiene service to the smaller communities on a mobile basis.

Higher standards of public health in California require more and better hospitals and laboratory facilities. Many of our people must travel long distances and beyond their county borders in order to reach an adequate hospital. This travel time can easily represent the difference between life and death. In an enlightened State like California, a hospital within an hour of every resident should be the ultimate goal. To achieve it, the assistance of the State is necessary.

In the opinion of public health authorities, there should be 4.5 hospital beds for every 1,000 people, which means in California that we should have not less than 41,000 beds. We actually have 34,000, of which 10,000 are in substandard hospitals. Consequently, California should have 17,000 new hospital beds to take care of the present-day normal requirements of its people, and even this does not take into consideration the fact that our population is increasing at a rate of 27,000 people each month.

We have been fortunate in recent years that no epidemic has descended upon us such as the influenza that swept our country following World War I. If this should occur, particularly in view of our swollen population, California would be confronted with a disastrous situation.

Recognizing the need for adequate hospital facilities, the Federal Government has initiated a national program for the construction of hospitals. Each dollar of federal money must be matched to the extent of $2 by the local communities. The government has allocated approximately $2,000,000 per year to California for the next five years. I recommend that the State participate in this program by assuming one-half of the required local contribution.

We have the machinery through which to work in carrying out such a program. I refer to the Hospital District Act, enacted by you in 1945, under which 15 community hospital districts have been formed, with many others in some stage of development at the present time. These 15 districts are distributed from Del Norte to Riverside, and from San Luis Obispo to Inyo Counties.

I believe this federal program will be expanded and that eventually every California community, with state and federal assistance, can have a hospital if it really wants one. When these funds have been exhausted, I believe our State should be willing to appropriate more money on the same basis until our objective of a good hospital within an hour of every resident is achieved.

It is not sufficient, however, to have medical services, hospitals, clinics and laboratories—no matter how expert or modern and no matter how conveniently located—unless the people have economic access to them, not as charity but as something for which they have willingly and individually paid.

The very fact that great strides have been made in medicine means that medical and hospital care are becoming increasingly expensive. The cost of hospitalization in California, according to a recent publication, is the highest in the Nation—$12.84 per day on the average. This is only part of the cost of a serious illness, but it is clearly beyond the ability of working people to pay.

When serious illness or injury strikes the home of the average Californian, the impact on the family finances results either in exhaustion of savings, heavy debt for the future, or a resort to public charity.

Through normal channels of business, we have applied the familiar principle of insurance to protect our homes and our property, but no adequate means exists for insuring the most precious thing in life—the health of our family. This principle of insurance must be applied to the health of our people, and because there is no reasonable prospect of such insurance becoming available in any other way, the State should provide a system for making it available by encompassing all the working people of California.

If everyone could now obtain adequate insurance at rates within his means to protect himself and his family against the heavy expense of illness or nonindustrial accident, just as he insures his home against fire or his automobile against theft, I would not make this proposal. Attempts, however, to apply the insurance principle to health have failed, and will fail, because plans to accomplish this do not operate within a sufficiently large field to really average the risk and spread the cost. Without some action on the part of State Government to broaden these plans by enlarging the field of contribution, no progress can be made commensurate with the urgency and scope of the problem.

I am not unmindful of the discussion this will again provoke, because the memory of the controversy engendered by my similar proposals two years ago is still fresh in my mind. But certain other things also remain in my mind—first, that there was no refutation of the need for spreading the cost of medical and hospital care through some prepayment plan, and, secondly, that there was no alternative program offered to accomplish the desired results. These facts alone justify resubmission of the question.

I have previously submitted two separate proposals, one for a comprehensive system of prepaid medical care, and the other for a more limited system of hospital and laboratory insurance. I have never claimed to have the precise answer to this question.

I have always been ready, however, to discuss methods for accomplishing the desired result, because I believe that if all who recognize the need for improving the public health by reducing the cost of medical care will honestly search for the answer, a way will be found. I am sure it can be done without injuring anyone, and at the same time that it will relieve millions of our people from the spectre of bankruptcy and indigency which are the present-day results of the cost of illness.

Ranking in importance with the health and safety of our people is the education of our children. California should not be satisfied with any educational standards but the best. The best should be made available to every child whether he lives in the city or the country, and whether he lives in a rich or a poor school district. We still have 1,019 one-room schools and 440 two-room schools, most of them in poor districts and unable to furnish adequate standards of education.

By the equalization of school funds, the consolidation of districts, and state financial assistance in the construction of school buildings, these poorer districts can be placed on a firm foundation. I therefore renew my recommendation of last year that funds be made available to impoverished school districts for this purpose.

Among the 1,500,000 children of school age in our State, 32,000 stand in need of specialized attention in order to overcome mental backwardness. I have studied the report of your interim committee on this subject, and I favor its proposal that the State provide a substantial part of the cost of this special education.

To train these retarded children to be self supporting is not only an investment in citizenship. It will be an actual saving in dollars, because otherwise many of them, eventually would be dependent upon the State for support.

Looking forward to the growth and development of California as a western empire with twice its present population, we must use our best foresight in making sure that the natural resources with which we have been so abundantly blessed are carefully conserved and intelligently used.

Until recent years we did little to conserve our timber supply beyond maintaining a fire suppression program. Fire, insects, blights, and bad cutting practices have denuded millions of acres, and our consumption of lumber exceeds replenishment by a half billion board feet yearly. If we take practical measures now, we can harvest timber from our sixteen million acres of forest lands much as we harvest agricultural crops, and thus maintain a permanent source of construction and packaging materials. California uses almost a billion board feet of lumber each year to package its agricultural products alone.

We should make provision for acquiring additional portions of idle cut over lands that once were our most productive forests, and for stepping up our blight rust control program in order to protect the valuable remaining stands of sugar pine trees in our State.

A service to the 18,000 small owners of timber lands in our State comparable to the work of our farm advisers should also be provided. Such a service, performed by forestry advisers, would assist these small owners, whose timber lands often are adjacent to their farms, in substituting sustained-yield methods for wasteful practices.

It is also time that the State assumed its proper place of leadership in realizing maximum values from our opportunities for outdoor recreation. I renew my recommendation for creating in the Department of Natural Resources a Division of Recreation to coordinate the activities of the various state agencies which have an interest in this field and to serve our cities and counties in developing a more effective use of our mountain parks and our beaches. It is my belief that our state parks are of no greater value than the use that is made of them. That greater use by our people should be encouraged and made possible. This is becoming increasingly important as our cities continue to grow and their congestion increases.

In terms of the essentials of life, the agricultural lands of California constitute our greatest natural resource. For the fourth successive year, we have surpassed every other state in dollar volume of crops.

The day has arrived, however, when California must make more effective use of research and its results in meeting the increasing competition of other regions. Our farmers are faced with higher costs than most in getting their crops to the consumer, because of our distance from the great markets of the eastern states.

This factor can be offset, not only by keeping abreast of every new production method, but also by constantly improving handling, processing and marketing techniques to bring about delivery to the ultimate consumer of the full nutritional and taste values of our agricultural products.

The report of the Agricultural Research Commission created by you a year ago confirms the need for an accelerated program, and I recommend an appropriation of $1,500,000 for this purpose during the coming year. As in the past, this research should be made by our university, and in order to assist the university, the Agricultural Research Commission should be made permanent and given the responsibility of keeping the university constantly informed of the practical, every day research needs of California farmers.

The future of agriculture, and to a great extent the future of all California, depend upon the manner in which we conserve, distribute and use our supply of water. The ingenuity of our farmers and water conservationists has developed the vast amount of water now in use throughout the State. Most future water conservation projects, however, will be beyond the jurisdiction and resources of local regions. They are large public projects that call for federal, state and local cooperation.

Although a great deal of work has been done by our State Division of Water Resources and other public agencies, it is time that we bring our State Water Plan up to date, and determine what kind of management would best serve the orderly growth and development of our State.

This matter has not heretofore been dealt with comprehensively. Public opinion has been divided, and in many instances conclusions have been based on emotion rather than on fact. To continue in this way would inevitably retard the development of California, because the federal appropriations that we obtain will depend largely upon a united front being presented by us in the Congress.

We must begin now to clarify our thinking on this subject and organize our efforts. For this purpose I recommend that the Water Resources Act of 1945 be amended to empower the State Water Resources Board, within its appropriations, to initiate water surveys upon its own motion, and to report to the Legislature and the Governor upon the comprehensive and orderly development of our water resources.

Every war has its aftermath of hatred, discrimination and persecution. World War II is no exception. Even now, as people of good will strive to prepare a world order based upon justice and fair dealing, we find race hatred disturbing world peace. Here in free America, fanatics are already at work to divide us by preaching that doctrine. I am sure cosmopolitan California does not condone such practices, and I also feel certain that in rejecting Proposition No. 11, at the recent election, our people intended only to withhold their approval from a measure they considered unworkable. I believe they would like to eliminate discrimination so far as is humanly possible.

Two years ago, I recommended the establishment of a Commission on Political and Economic Equality. A bill for this purpose failed of passage because there were on the one hand, those who were unwilling to take any action, and on the other hand, those who insisted on doing more. The commission which I then proposed, and which I again recommend, would not be an administrative agency. It would make no regulations and enforce no laws. It would investigate, study, and report conditions as they find them to the Legislature and the Governor for action. This would be extremely helpful because at the present time, I have no means, and I am sure you have none, of obtaining objective information on this subject.

In its transition from wartime production to a peacetime economy, our Nation is passing through an inevitable period of inflation and similar economic difficulty, and this has tended to aggravate differences between management and labor and multiply the number of work stoppages.

Under the National Labor Relations Act and the decisions of the Supreme Court, the Federal Government has jurisdiction over most labor disputes, and it is my belief that the major effort of the State should be to promote free collective bargaining and the avoidance of a war of legislation between management and labor. Such a state policy paid dividends during the war, and I am of the opinion it will do so now.

We can contribute additionally to industrial peace in our State by making our services more readily available as mediator and conciliator in local labor disputes. Unfortunately, we are not able to do so under our present statutes.

Section 65 of our Labor Code provides that the State can mediate only when all parties to a dispute so request. I know that many people have wondered why the State does not use its good offices in this regard, and I recommend that Section 65 be amended to permit us to do so upon the request of any party to the dispute.

I trust that this Legislature will create a commission to coordinate on a statewide basis the celebrations that will be held in California during our next four centennial years. This will make our rich past live again, and it will accentuate the greatness of our hopes for the future.

In a real sense, however, this session can do more than merely arrange the ceremonies with which we shall honor these anniversaries. In a spirit of humility and trust in Divine Providence it can prepare the solid groundwork of a more lasting monument, one that will be as great and as broad as California itself—an exemplification of what a people can do to create for themselves the social, economic and spiritual conditions that make for better living. I ask nothing more than to work with you in such a spirit and toward such a goal.

OATH OF OFFICE ADMINISTERED TO LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Lieutenant Governor-elect Goodwin J. Knight then took and subscribed to the following oath administered by Hon. Phil S. Gibson, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court:

I do solemnly swear that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the Office of Lieutenant Governor of the State of California, according to the best of my ability, so help me God.

INTRODUCTION OF LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Hon. Sam L. Collins, Speaker of the Assembly, then presented Lieutenant Governor Goodwin J. Knight to the Joint Convention.

ADDRESS BY LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR

Lieutenant Governor Knight then proceeded to address the Joint Convention as follows:

ADDRESS BY LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR GOODWIN J. KNIGHT

JANUARY 6, 1947

Four years ago when a new Governor and Lieutenant Governor were inaugurated in this room our Country had been engaged in the second World War for a little more than a year. Our new leaders spoke of the task of conducting the State Government on a war basis.

That administration, led by Governor Earl Warren, has faced great problems and has given to our State fine leadership, and California's contribution to the victory of our armed forces was notable; all the more so because we here in this western area had not only all of the complexities and burdens of many of the other states in wartime, but in addition we were practically a vast supply depot for the whole Pacific theater in the Japanese conflict, and at that time, though it seems remote today, we were exposed and close to the front of actual fighting.

Throughout the great war with its controls, disruptions and hardships free government of free men in California was maintained. Today we meet as citizens who are proud of the achievements of the administration, the Legislature, the civil service departments and the judiciary from 1942 to 1947.

The Federal Union and all of the states, including our own, are striving today to return to orderly peacetime living. We are doing this, but with one new factor. During the war we funneled through our cities and towns to and from the battle fronts perhaps eight million men and women in uniform. They came to know, appreciate and love California. Many thousands have returned to make their permanent homes here—and the flood of new people has not receded. This element in our lives must be a basic concept of all our work in government. It is not projected in the future. It is here now.

As an administrative officer and a part of the executive department, I shall work with the members of the State Senate—whose duty and right it shall be, along with the members of the Assembly, to form and pass legislation. There will be a serious responsibility, all the while being under the white hot light of public scrutiny, open debate and vigorous approval and equally, in some cases, determined opposition. The other constitutional duties of the Lieutenant Governor are well known. I approach this new work with a firm conviction in the eternal soundness and verity of a democratic republic.

Three hundred and twenty-six years ago a small group of people landed on the wintry shores of New England, bringing with them as their greatest power for a new life a belief. That belief was a deep determination to exercise self government, guaranteeing certain personal freedoms. Many others came and added strength and numbers to this political philosophy; the dignity of human personality, the creation of a state for the benefit of the people and a denial of the practice of man living in fear of, and only for, the power and security of a king, a regent or a group of masters.

These fundamentals were the cornerstones of the first civil government in California. They have remained so ever since. They are the whole structure we call constitutional government. They have been attacked, misrepresented, denounced and condemned. They will be again, but you and I and countless clear-headed Californians will defend them and keep them. The priceless treasure of a sovereign people stimulating in their daily lives the highest aspirations of freedom under law and good will toward all men.

By Senator Powers :

Senate Resolution No. 9

Creating the Senate Legislative Process Committee and defining its powers and duties.

WHEREAS, Many of the legislative proposals involve problems within the jurisdiction of more than one standing committee of the Senate, and the adequate consideration of such measures requires the cooperation of such several committees in order to avoid duplicating the work of one such committee by another, and much delay in the legislative process could be avoided if it were possible to eliminate such duplication of effort and provide a means for expediting the consideration of such measures ; and

WHEREAS, There is need of a committee equipped to ascertain facts and secure facts and secure information upon assigned topics from time to time during the session, a committee acting in aid of and in collaboration with the several standing committees of the Senate ; now, therefore, be it

GENTLEMEN: I herewith transmit the Report of the Senate Interim Committee provided for in Senate Resolution No. 158, studying the Problem of Mental Deficiency in the State of California.

REPORT

Senate Interim Committee Named Under Senate Resolution No. 158 of the 1945 Session of the California State Legislature for the Purpose of Studying the Care and Education of the Mentally Deficient in the State of California

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Senate:

Pursuant to appointment by the Senate, your committee authorized to conduct an investigation into the Mental Deficiency Problem in California, Senate Resolution No. 158, wish to submit our report and recommendations. At the outset, may we say that we believe the time has arrived when a very important undertaking, too long neglected, shall receive definite consideration and to this end we will present legislation which we trust will meet with approval and which will deal with what is unquestionably a most important matter.

The resolution providing for the Committee of Investigation was presented at the earnest request of people who were thoroughly convinced the matter of providing special education for mentally retarded boys and girls and who by reason of their official contact and personal observation were entitled to request action in the providing of a state-wide program, could no longer be delayed.

At previous times prior to 1945, various agencies, including the State Department of Education and the State Department of Institutions, now the State Department of Mental Hygiene, had tried to secure the passage of legislation making it mandatory that special provision be made in our law for the education of the mentally deficient in the Public School System of California, that is, those that are educable. These efforts failed and in consequence it was determined to ask the Legislature to conduct an official investigation which would more pointedly indicate that something should be done.

At the outset of the committee inquiry and at the first meeting, we decided to name a professional consultant committee to make a study of the entire problem and present their views at the conclusion of the same, to this committee. This was accomplished and Dr. Fred O. Butler, Medical Superintendent of the Sonoma State Home for the care and training of feeble minded children was asked to assume the chairmanship of this subcommittee in which he graciously concurred. With him on the committee were Helen Heffernan, the Director of Elementary Education in the State Department of Education, Doctor Olga Bridgman of the University of California, and Dr. Lillian B. Hill, of the State Department of Education, all thoroughly equipped to perform what we requested them to undertake. Before they commenced the mission, your committee discussed at length with them the complete picture of what was desired, namely, the outlining of a state-wide program of real helpfulness.

Your Senate committee and the professional consultant committee decided to forward a questionnaire dealing with the subject of inquiry to each county, district and city superintendent of schools, the probation officers, the Director of Social Welfare, as well as the county directors of social welfare throughout the State, as the first method of ascertaining estimates as to the number of mentally retarded children in their respective sections. Your committee, the subcommittee, the Department of Education, and the Department of Mental Hygiene were much impressed with the replies which were returned from the persons interviewed by the questionnaire and letters. It indicated definite interest in a state-wide program to aid in the education of the mentally retarded throughout California, just as it furnished your committee with definite belief that the State should embark upon the work contemplated at the time your committee was appointed.

For your information, the questions covered in the questionnaire were these:

1. In your opinion will the needs of the mentally-handicapped children in your school be best served by grouping such children in special classes?
2. How many children in the elementary schools of your city are now securing education in special classes for mentally-retarded children?
3. How many children in the elementary schools of your city represent a sufficient mental deviation from normal to justify grouping in special classes?

Other questions submitted sought information as to how many persons had been classified in case records as mentally defective between the ages of 1 to 8, 9 to 16, 17 to 21, and above 21, and also:

- a. Increased availability of State Institutions
- b. Expanded State supervision
- c. Provision for education in special classes
- d. (Suggest others)-----
- e. -----

Your committee has ascertained the number of mentally retarded of the type at which our investigation was directed was in excess of 32,000 and of this number, only 5,000 have been undergoing special instruction in special classes and in special schools in a very few school districts in California. The 32,000 children referred to were of the educable type, according to the information gleaned from the questionnaires and from other sources of information. We earnestly feel, and it is a unanimous sentiment of the professional consultants and certainly of the parents of the mentally retarded children, many of whom appeared at our hearings, that something must be done for the 27,000 mentally retarded children which heretofore and now are in the neglected class. Only in a few educational centers, as previously stated, have special classes or special schools been established. The time is now here, we believe, when a mandatory state program should be established. Your committee certainly is in agreement that it is much more economical to educate the type under consideration in the public schools and allow them to remain at home rather than to commit them to an institution. This program, if carried out, will not interfere with the education of the normal child. It probably will cost more to carry on the special classes and provide trained teachers. The financial side has also been considered and it is our recommendation that the State bear 75 percent of the increased cost and the district 25 percent of the excess cost of educating the mentally deficient in their respective communities. It must be remembered the type of children under consideration have a far more difficult time in carrying on through life, no matter how we help them, than the normal child.

Your committee contemplates the introduction of a bill providing for the education of the mentally deficient in our public schools and in it will be set forth, we hope, what will prove an intelligent dealing with the proposed state-wide program and it will also furnish you in detail with the provisions deemed essential to start the objective for which our investigation was instigated. This bill sets forth the recommendations of your committee.

We are certainly indebted to Dr. Butler and the other members of the professional consultant committee for their great help, as well as to the State Department of Education, the State Department of Mental Hygiene, the University of California, and the Legislative Counsel's Department for their extreme courtesy and helpfulness.

We are also indebted to Governor Earl Warren for having twice given us an opportunity for conference and explanation of the work we had in hand and for his acknowledged interest in the contemplated program as outlined in this report, as well as his assurance of support.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL REORGANIZATION

Appointed under Senate Resolution No. 142 of the Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature. Adopted June 16, 1945 (Senate Journal p. 3986)

MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE

JERROLD L. SEAWELL, Chairman

THOMAS F. KEATING, Vice Chairman

RANDOLPH COLLIER

THOMAS MCCORMACK

HARRY L. PARKMAN

In accordance with provisions of Senate Resolution No. 142, we submit herewith a report of the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization.

INTRODUCTION

The Senate Committee to Investigate the Department of Motor Vehicles filed a report with the Senate on April 16, 1945 (Senate Journal, Fifty-sixth Session, page 1609). Senate Resolution No. 142 established the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization, with the same membership, but outlining its duties in broader scope.

This committee was directed to study all facts relating to the organization, functions and administration of State Government, of any department, agency, or subdivision thereof, for the purpose of recommending changes and proposed legislation in order to promote efficiency, to reduce or eliminate costs, to provide for the consolidation of functions and removal of duplication, including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Senate, including in the report its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

During 1945 this committee received a request from the Chairman of the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets and Bridges to study two problems relating to the work of the joint committee but which it was decided more properly should be studied by the Senate committee. It was agreed by the members of both committees that the Senate committee would study two phases of motor vehicle administration: (1) modernization of motor vehicle registration procedures, and (2) traffic law enforcement.

The committee arranged with the Legislative Auditor for a study to be made of registration procedures to effect a more efficient and economical method of registering motor vehicles, and requested that this report be submitted to the committee not later than October 21, 1946.

The committee also arranged with Lt. Col. Franklin M. Krenl, Director of the Safety Division of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, Evanston, Illinois, to study traffic law enforcement in California with particular emphasis on the legislative, organizational, and administrative requirements of the California Highway Patrol. The results of the two studies on which the committee focused its attention are attached to this report as Appendix I (Modernization of Motor Vehicle Registration), and Appendix II (Report on the California Highway Patrol).

MODERNIZATION OF MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRATION

The committee recommends the adoption of the proposals set forth in the Legislative Auditor's report and urges action on the part of the Legislature at the earliest opportunity in order that the administrative adjustments and other changes may be made in time for the next registration period. This committee is convinced that in addition to rendering more effective and satisfactory service to the public, that substantial money savings will accrue to the State, and that statistical information necessary to certain phases of motor vehicle administration will be available both to the Department of Motor Vehicles and other state agencies at minimum cost.

CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY PATROL

This committee, after consideration of Colonel Krenl's recommendations and after hearings in the State Capitol at which state administrators and other interested parties were called to testify, has concluded that a reorganization of the California Highway Patrol is necessary in order to bring about more efficient use of present manpower and equipment. The committee is convinced that this reorganization should be effected simultaneously with an increase in the number of patrolmen and other personnel.

The committee recommends that the Highway Patrol be separated from the Department of Motor Vehicles and be made a separate department under a director appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the Senate.

This new department will be vested with the same powers and duties as are vested in the present Division of Enforcement in the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The committee recommends that the Chief of the Patrol be exempt from civil service and that he shall serve under the supervision of the director. It is also recommended that the Chief of the Patrol be appointed by the Governor upon nomination by the director for a term of four years, but may be removed by the director after notice and reasonable opportunity to be heard.

In general, the committee is in favor of the objectives stated in Colonel Kreml's report, and is in favor of the methods used to obtain those objectives, but it does not agree with the line of command suggested by Colonel Kreml. In this connection, there is attached for the consideration of the Legislature, an alternative chart of departmental organization submitted to the committee by the Association of Highway Patrolmen.

In conclusion, the committee wishes to express its appreciation to the Legislative Auditor and to Col. Franklin M. Kreml for their efforts and very thorough studies. They also wish to thank the many persons both in and out of the state service who have cooperated with the committee.

The following report of the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization is approved by all members of the committee.

Respectfully submitted.

APPENDIX I

MODERNIZATION OF MOTOR VEHICLE REGISTRATION

Report to the Senate Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization

By Rolland A Vandegrift, Legislative Auditor

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

ROLLAND A VANDEGRIFT, Legislative Auditor
CAPITOL, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA

November 14, 1946

*Senate Interim Committee on Government Reorganization*HONORABLE JERROLD L. SEAWELL, Chairman
State Capitol, Sacramento, CaliforniaRe: Modernization of Registration Processes of the Department of Motor Vehicles

GENTLEMEN: Accompanying this letter of transmittal is a proposed plan for mechanization of the processes by which motor vehicles are registered in California.

This report states that the utilization of punched cards and electrical accounting machines for registration of motor vehicles in California is both feasible and desirable. The report further states how this mechanization can be accomplished and why it is desirable. Every effort has been made to keep the report as brief as possible and to provide adequate visual aids for comprehension of the registration processes outlined. The following functions are within the scope of the proposed plan:

- a. Issuance of Registration Cards
- b. Issuance of Ownership Certificates
- c. Rating of registrations for Vehicle License Fees and Registration Fees
- d. Accounting and statistical analyses of registrations and fees
- e. Maintenance of adequate files and records

Under the present manual methods, the Registration Division finds it necessary to employ approximately 2,137 workers during the months of February, March, April and May of each year. Adoption of the proposed plan will reduce the total number of workers required during February and March by 590 units of personnel, since under that plan only 1,547 workers will be required. The greatest difference in the units of personnel required between the existing and proposed methods of operation occurs during the months of April and May. In those months approximately 2,137 workers are required by the present manual methods as compared with an estimated 600 workers who will then be required under the new plan. Thus, during these two months the mechanized plan will require 1,537 fewer workers. For further details see Exhibit III, Personnel Needs.

The reduction in the number of units of personnel resulting from the adoption of mechanized registration processes is caused by the fact that machines manned by a few operators will do the work now performed by both permanent and temporary workers. For example, in the month of February in each year there would be 370 fewer permanent workers required and 220 fewer temporary workers, thus producing a decrease of 590 workers as mentioned above.

After the initial installation period, the personnel required for all of the mechanized operations combined will be approximately as follows:

Period	Maximum Number of Persons
March through October-----	73
November and December-----	93
January and February-----	337

From approximately 93 people in December the number of units of personnel will begin to rise in early January, and by about January 20th there will be 337 people working. This number of employees will continue until about February 20th when the number will fall off abruptly to about 73 by March 1st.

It is difficult to determine the exact amount of savings which will be realized through the adoption of the proposed plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles, but it is safe to say that the savings will exceed $500,000 annually. For further details regarding the computation of the annual savings, see Exhibit II. The difficulty in estimating savings stems from the fact that the Department of Motor Vehicles does not now maintain accurate functional cost data. The Director of Motor Vehicles stated that “* * * it is not possible under our present accounting system to obtain the actual cost of each function performed, due principally to the inevitable overlap of activities * * *.” This statement was made by the Director of Motor Vehicles in a letter which conveyed the department’s estimates of the cost of the various phases of registration processes.

Outstanding characteristics of the proposed plan are the speed and accuracy with which essential operations can be performed. It is commonly known that substantial backlogs of registration work are accumulated each year during the period in which renewals are processed. This delays the release of registration cards and certificates of ownership for long periods of time. Under the mechanized procedures the maximum number of days which will elapse from the time a complete, original application for registration is presented to the time the registration card is mailed will not exceed four days not counting Saturdays, Sundays and holidays which intervene. The plan provides for this speedy processing of original registrations throughout the entire year without any backlogs accumulating even at renewal time.

The mechanized plan also provides for the processing of corrections, such as transfers on the same basis. The plan also provides for the processing of renewals on the same four-day schedule throughout the entire year with the exception of the period from approximately January 28th through February 20th. During the latter period a small backlog of renewals will accumulate temporarily. This backlog will reach a maximum on about February 5th. Even at the maximum this accumulation of work should never exceed four days' work. Thus, during the period of about three weeks each year an additional four days will be required for the mechanical processing of renewals.

Within four days after any transaction occurs, however, the Department of Motor Vehicles will be able to provide all services required by the public from its records.

The plan for mechanization also provides for the mailing of potential registration cards in duplicate to owners just prior to renewal time each year. An owner will present these cards with the necessary fees to renew his registration. The department will stamp the registration card indicating receipt of the fees and showing the new license or tab number and will immediately return the registration card with the license plates to the owner. Thus, the registration card will be immediately available for use in transferring ownership, etc. The duplicate copy of the registration card will be used by the department as the basis for correcting its records.

The attached plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles is presented in two parts. Part 1, the body of the report, includes a statement of legislative and administrative actions which should be taken if the plan is to be executed, cost estimates, and sample forms. Part 2, which is printed separately, contains flow charts and plans for machine room and file room layouts.

Sincerely yours,

ROLLAND A VANDEGRIFT
Legislative Auditor

INTRODUCTION

Although it has been the subject of much interested thought and discussion, the basic system of registering motor vehicles in California has undergone only minor changes during the last 20 or 30 years. The changes which have been made thus far have resulted from revision of laws or from availability of new devices and equipment: complete modernization of the entire registration process has not been attempted. Today, the Department of Motor Vehicles is registering over 3,200,000 vehicles annually—the greatest motor vehicle registration work load in the world. Manual and semi-automatic accounting, filing and statistical methods are no longer adequate for treatment of this great work load. Such methods are relatively slow and costly and do not provide the measure of service required by the public, enforcement officials, and other interested persons.

Being cognizant of this condition in the affairs of the Department of Motor Vehicles the Senate Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization requested the Legislative Auditor to seek an answer to the question: Can California's methods of registering motor vehicles be modernized to provide improved service attended by a reduction in administrative costs? Assuming that the answers to the foregoing question would be in the affirmative, the committee also expressed the desire for:

- (1) A plan through which the objectives expressed in the question could be realized, and
- (2) A statement of the executive and legislative actions required to execute the plan.

Pursuant to the committee's request, various methods and kinds of equipment were considered to determine which offered the greatest overall advantages. It was the considered judgment of the committee's representatives that punched card methods and use of electrical accounting machines offered the greatest advantages. Therefore, the following plan for modernization of the processes used in registration of motor vehicles in California contemplates use of punched card methods.

Originally, it was intended that this survey and any resulting proposals would be limited to registration activities in the Department of Motor Vehicles but during the detailed review of the procedures presently employed from the counter and incoming mail desk through to the final registration and accounting operations, it became apparent that the accounting for fees and the analyses of fees and registrations were so directly related to the registration activities as to make it unwise to exclude these activities. Consequently, this report presents plans for mechanizing the procedures for:

- a. Issuance of registration cards
- b. Issuance of ownership certificates
- c. Establishing and maintaining adequate registration records and files
- d. Accounting for fees collected
- e. Analyses of both registrations and fees

In addition, the plan provides for follow-up of registrations which are not renewed thus furnishing delinquency control not now existing. This survey has resulted in the development of a carefully drawn plan which covers all operations. Motor vehicle administrators and tax administrators throughout the Nation are currently considering numerous controversial proposals for improving the functioning of Motor Vehicle Departments. In the hope that this plan for streamlining operations would not be confused with such proposals, the plan herein proposed has been designed to follow present procedures to the greatest extent compatible with good administrative practice and the objectives of the move toward modernization. The plan is flexible, however, and can be easily adjusted to legislative changes. The objectives of the plan herein proposed are the utilization of modern machine methods to provide greater service to the public, enforcement officials, and other interested persons. This report shows how the objectives can be economically achieved.

Perry L. Stauffer, Principal Research Assistant to the Legislative Budget Committee, has been responsible for the technical aspects of this report and will be available for advice and consultation during the period of installation and initial operation under the mechanized procedures.

Acknowledgment is gratefully given to the Director of Motor Vehicles and his staff officers who so whole-heartedly cooperated in the preparation of this report by furnishing basic data; to the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators whose representative contributed valuable suggestions and encouragement; and to the administrators in the motor vehicle departments of other states who so helpfully provided information regarding their laws and operations.

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

The facts disclosed in the committee's survey of the operations now employed in processing Motor Vehicle Registrations clearly indicate a recommendation that the use of punched card methods be adopted for registering motor vehicles and for analyzing such registrations.

Pursuant to this recommendation, the following specific suggestions are offered in order that the Legislature and administrative officials may clearly comprehend the actions by which they may execute this plan. Fortunately, only minor changes of law are required to make the benefits of the plan available. Thus, it follows that the major part of the action required to execute the plan falls within the existing power of the Director of Motor Vehicles.

A. LEGISLATION NEEDED

The following actions are desirable if the Legislature wishes this plan to be executed by the Department of Motor Vehicles:

1. Amend Sections 160 and 164 of the Vehicle Code

Objectives

To add a provision to the existing law which will allow renewal of the registration of a vehicle by presentation of a potential registration card provided for this purpose by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

Advantages

The potential registration cards would be mailed to the registered owner in duplicate during November and December just prior to the renewal period. Immediately upon payment of the required fees, the original copy would be validated and returned to the registrant with the license plates. Thus, the registration cards will be immediately available to the registrant to be displayed on the steering post of the vehicle or for use in transferring his equity in the vehicle or the ownership thereof.

The preparation and advance release of potential registration cards would occur when the work load is ordinarily low. Since the registration cards would be accompanied by request that the department be immediately notified if any information shown thereon is incorrect, much of the correction work would also occur when the work load is ordinarily low. This will simplify and expedite the renewal processes which follow.

Amended Language

Amend the language contained in Sections 160 and 164 of the Vehicle Code as follows:

SECTION 160. "Application for Renewal. Application for renewal of a vehicle registration expiring on the date above mentioned shall be made by the owner between January 1st and midnight of February 4th succeeding said expiration date and shall be made by presentation of the registration card last issued for the vehicle or by presentation of a potential Registration Card issued by the department for use at the time of renewal and by payment of the full annual fee for such vehicle as provided in this code."

SECTION 164. "Department to Renew Registration. (a) The department upon renewing a registration, shall issue a new registration card and license plate or plates to the owner as upon an original registration. In lieu of issuing a new registration card the department may indorse or authorize the indorsement of receipt or validation upon payment of the required fees, such receipt or validation to be stamped upon the registration card last issued for such vehicle during the preceding registration year, or upon a potential registration card issued near the close of the preceding year which registration card when endorsed or validated shall constitute the registration card for the ensuing registration year, and the department may, in place of issuing a new license plate or plates for the ensuing year, issue in lieu thereof a symbol or other device indicating the year number for which issued, which symbol or device shall be attached to the license plate or plates issued for such vehicle for the preceding calendar year, and, when so attached, said license plates with such symbols or devices shall for the purpose of this code be deemed to be the license plate or plates for the ensuing registration year.

The foregoing is intended to provide alternative methods whereby the department may issue usual registration cards with usual license plates or symbols or devices, as above stated, or may issue such symbols or devices to be attached to the license plates for the preceding calendar year and issue usual registration cards or may endorse or authorize the endorsement of a receipt or validate the registration card for the preceding year, *or validate a potential registration card issued by the department for use at time of renewal * * **

2. Amend Section 10755 of the Revenue and Taxation Code and Section 373 of the Vehicle Code

Objectives

To provide that the following fees always be expressed in terms of even dollar amounts even when prorated for part of a year :

- (a) Registration Fees,
- (b) Weight Fees, and
- (c) Motor Vehicle License Fees

Advantages

Under the existing system this would eliminate writing, typewriting, and verifying two digits in the amount of each tax and in the total tax due, particularly when fees are reduced by reason of nonoperation of the vehicle during part of the year.

Under the proposed plan which this suggestion accompanies, key punching and verifying would be appreciably reduced if this idea were adopted and furthermore several columns on the punched cards would be available for more productive use.

3. Delete Section 164(b) of the Vehicle Code

Objectives

To discontinue present practice of notifying legal owners when the registration of a vehicle is renewed by the registered owner. In the event a legal owner loses contact with a debtor and wishes to know the current license number and address of the registered owner, the information could be readily obtained from the Department of Motor Vehicles. If title and registration records are separated the provision of these notices for legal owners is physically possible but the cost would be high.

Advantages

The Department of Motor Vehicles would be relieved of the cost of:

- (a) Preparing an extra copy of every registration card.
- (b) Selecting from the total, those cases involving legal owners.
- (c) Mailing copies of registration cards showing a legal owner.

This includes cost of sorting cards by post office of legal owner, placing material in envelopes, packaging bundles, and other regular mail room operations. Under the present law, the full volume of registration renewals is being reviewed to select the one-fourth which show legal owners. Of the fourth who are now notified of renewals, it does not stand to reason that many of the legal owners will have lost contact with their debtors who usually will be paying obligations or repaying loans in regular installments.

It appears that a tremendous amount of work is being done for benefit of a few legal owners who could obtain the required information upon request. Furthermore, the information thus obtained would be more current.

4. Change the Word "Affidavit" Wherever it Appears in Sections 164.5 and 675.5(4) of the Vehicle Code to "Certification"

Section 164.5 relates to nonoperation certificates.

Section 675.5 (4) relates to safety glass requirement.

It may be desirable to indicate that misrepresentation as to safety glass or nonoperation is a misdemeanor; then, misrepresentation as to safety glass would be punishable under Section 762. Misrepresentation as to nonoperation is punishable under Section 763, which carries heavier penalties.

Objectives

To discontinue requirement that an affidavit be included in:

- (a) Dealer's report of sale and request for registration, and
- (b) Certificate of nonoperation of vehicle.

Sufficient penalties for false certification are provided by the misdemeanor provisions of the Vehicle Code.

Advantages

Many mail applications must be returned for addition of a notarized affidavit. This delays the registration for the dealer or other applicant and, since it necessitates correspondence, it is costly for the Department of Motor Vehicles.

A rating clerk now must witness the signature on the affidavit when the applicant signs at the window and then must add his signature. If this proposal is adopted, the Department of Motor Vehicles' clerks will be relieved of the task of affixing their signatures and the date on these documents. In 1936 when Section 675.5 (4) regarding safety glass became effective, safety glass was not universally used; today it is. The item requiring a statement of the type of glass should remain on the application; and if left blank, the application should be returned for completion just as is done at present.

No one has ever been charged with perjury for a false statement under either Section 164.5 or 675.5 (4) of the Vehicle Code.

B. ADMINISTRATIVE ACTIONS NEEDED

1. Decision Relative to Extent of Decentralization

In considering the plan, it will be essential for the Director of Motor Vehicles to decide upon the extent to which the mechanized operations outlined in this plan would be decentralized. The plan has been presented on a centralized basis for the sake of simplicity in presentation but a considerable measure of decentralization will be feasible and will permit the Department of Motor Vehicles to draw upon the labor market throughout the State, particularly for processing of renewals. Probably, greater decentralization will be desired in cashiering activities relative to issuance of licenses than in the subsequent mechanical processes.

2. Creation of Bureau of Tabulating Services

It is essential that the Department of Motor Vehicles create a new Bureau of Tabulating Services to be headed by a supervisor who has the training and experience required for administration of a large tabulating installation and who, by his experience, has proved his ability to satisfactorily discharge the duties which would thus be imposed upon him. The creation of this separate bureau is dictated by the need for the Bureau of Tabulating Services to function in accordance with the highest standards and best known practices with respect to use of punched card methods. It is contemplated that such officers of the department as the registrar or the financial advisor would determine the nature of the reports and other information to be furnished by the Bureau of Tabulating Services but that the manner in which the operations are performed within the Bureau of Tabulating Services would fall entirely within the authority of the supervisor of the Bureau.

3. Preparation of Operating Manuals

Operating manuals should be prepared detailing the operations presented in the plan as originally drafted or amended during its consideration. It is recognized that the Division of Budgets and Accounts in the Department of Finance will be invited to assist in the development of the manual of operations but only a short period of time should be required for this.

4. Preparation of Statement of Budgetary Needs

During the course of the development of the manual of operations, the Department of Motor Vehicles should prepare a statement of its anticipated budgetary needs, particularly for the year in which the conversion from the present to the new system occurs. It is not anticipated that any additional funds will be required even during the installation year, but of course, any upward or downward budgetary adjustments will be presented to the Department of Finance and the Legislature for clearance in the usual fashion.

5. Dissemination of Effective Publicity

The Public Relations Officer of the Department of Motor Vehicles can render a great service through effective dissemination of information to the public informing them as to their part in the plan, explaining the objectives of the plan, and indicating the benefits to be derived.

6. Discontinue Present Policy of Delaying Release of Registration Cards and License Plates on Mail Renewals Paid by Checks

At present, the release of many license plates and registration cards plus a lesser number of certificates of ownership is delayed by a financial policy of the department.

This policy requires the withholding of registration cards and license plates of mail renewals for a period of approximately two weeks to allow ample time for the checks to be paid by the drawee banks or for dishonored checks to be returned to the department.

It is true that this very conservative policy precludes the release of license plates and registration cards for which dishonored checks have been tendered by mail, but likewise, the great majority of owners who renew their registrations by mail are inconvenienced by the withholding of their registration cards and license plates.

This withholding is undesirable from an enforcement standpoint, since the owner has submitted his registration card for renewal and hasn't even a receipt on the steering post of the vehicle in such cases. The immediate releasing of registration cards and license plates where payment in full is received with a mail application would have the following administrative effect:

(a) Masses of such cases would not be stored pending time for release.

(b) There would be some decrease in correspondence asking where license plates and registration cards are.

(c) There would be fewer requests for duplicate registration cards, since owners would receive their registration cards promptly for use when transferring title.

(d) There would be fewer references to the license number file because registration cards would be returned to the steering posts of the vehicles more promptly.

(e) The department would have to bill owners and otherwise pursue collection of amounts of dishonored checks plus the attendant penalties. At present, the department computes the additional and total amounts due in such cases and corresponds with the owners to collect. Thus, the proposed change would add nothing to present costs of these operations. Under the proposed policy, there would be an additional cost entailed in suspending licenses where the owners fail to respond to billings and collection letters. Such additional costs would be justified by the prompt release of license plates and registration cards. Under the prompt processing of the mechanized procedures, it is expected that fewer checks would be dishonored, since part of the existing difficulty may be attributed to the delays in processing encountered under existing procedures.

GENERAL PLAN FOR MECHANICAL REGISTRATION OF MOTOR VEHICLES

A. ORIGINAL REGISTRATIONS

The majority of original registrations of vehicles will cause the punching of the following cards:

a. Punched Registration Cards

- (1) Name and Address Card containing name and address of owner.
- (2) Description Card containing the full description of the vehicle.
- (3) Name and Address Card containing name and address of legal owner. (25 percent of registrations.)

b. Account Card

(1) Account Card containing accounting information. From the account cards, cross-reference cards will be mechanically reproduced for the cross-reference files for the Los Angeles and Sacramento offices. From the name and address cards and the description cards, cards will be mechanically reproduced for the alphabetical file and engine number file. The name and address cards together with the description cards will be used to mechanically write registration cards and certificates of ownership.

B. RENEWALS OF REGISTRATIONS

Advance Issuance

Near the end of each year the punched registration cards from the license number file can be used in electrical tabulating machines to write potential registration cards in duplicate. These potential registration cards would be mailed to registered owners. Each owner will then present the potential registration card when he pays his renewal fees. The original copy, that is the registration card, will be stamped with the new license or tab numbers by the cashier and returned to the owner immediately for use on the steering post of his vehicle.

The renewal of registrations will cause the punching of an account card only from the duplicate copy of the potential registration card.

The account card will be used in the mechanical correction of all files to reflect the renewal.

From account cards, cards for the cross-reference files in the Los Angeles and Sacramento offices will be mechanically reproduced.

C. CORRECTIONS

Miscellaneous corrections will cause the punching of an account card. Each account card will be reproduced for the cross-reference files for the Los Angeles and Sacramento offices. The majority of corrections will only require the punching of one punched registration card; i.e., either a name and address card or a description card to be added or substituted in the files. Furthermore, in many instances where a lien is paid off the only action required will be the use of the account card to mechanically remove the name and address card of the legal owner followed by the listing of the new registration cards and certificates of ownership.

D. SPEEDY PROCESSING

Essential characteristics of the modernized methods will be speed and accuracy. Below is shown the maximum number of days an owner may be without a registration card or ownership certificate following the time a batch of registration transactions occur. There is also shown the time required to reflect these transactions in the files counting from and including the day the transactions started.

1. Processing Original Registrations

Explanation	Working days
a. Cashiering transactions in a local office, plus mailing time to the central office_	3
b. Preparation of punched registration cards followed by use of these cards in listing registration cards and certificates of ownership. Lastly, the registration cards and certificates of ownership will be mailed. The time will be six hours for machine processing and two hours for mailing_	1
Maximum number of days elapsing in issuance of registration cards and certificates of ownership_	4*
c. Cross-reference file
Simultaneously with the processing of the sets of punched registration cards, the cross-reference cards will be reproduced from account cards and filed as indicated in Chart 2. Thus, these operations will occur during the same four days required for issuance of registration cards_	4
d. License number file
During the last two hours of the four day processing of punched registration cards these cards will be placed in a "working file" where they will be available for reference or use in processing transfers or corrections. Not later than the fourth day thereafter these sets will be filed in the license number file_	4
e. Engine No. File and Alphabetical File
The cards for the engine number file and alphabetical file will be prepared during the last half of the day on which a registration is received in the Central Office and the cards for each of the files will be available in separate working reference files by the close of that day which will be the 4th working day after the transactions occurred. Then, by not later than the close of the 4th working day thereafter the cards will be filed in the Engine No. File. Thus, by the 8th day items will be in Alphabetical and Engine No. File_	4

2. Processing of Annual Renewals of Registrations

With the equipment provided in the cost estimates relative to mechanization, the processing times will be the same as for original registrations except that during the peak period from approximately January 28 through February 17, a backlog will accumulate temporarily. This accumulation should never exceed four days work. Thus, during a period of about two and one half weeks each year, an additional four days would be required for processing renewals.

3. Processing of Changes

The processing of changes will be performed daily even during the renewal period. The processing times required will be as indicated above for processing original registrations.

E. PERSONNEL NEEDS

Under the present manual methods, the Registration Division finds it necessary to employ approximately 2,137 workers during the months of February, March, April and May of each year. Adoption of the proposed plan will reduce the total number of workers required during February and March by 590 units of personnel, since under that plan only 1,547 workers will be required. The greatest difference in the units of personnel required between the existing and proposed methods of operation occurs during the months of April and May. In those months approximately 2,137 workers are required by the present manual methods as compared with an estimated 600 workers who will then be required under the new plan. Thus, during these two months the mechanized plan will require 1,537 fewer workers. For further details see Exhibit III, Personnel Needs.

The reduction in the number of units of personnel resulting from the adoption of mechanized registration processes is caused by the fact that machines manned by a few operators will do the work now performed by both permanent and temporary workers. For example, in the month of February in each year there would be 370 fewer permanent workers required and 220 fewer temporary workers, thus producing a decrease of 590 workers as mentioned above.

After the initial installation period, the personnel required for all of the mechanized operations combined will be approximately as follows:

Period	Maximum Number of Persons
March through October.....	73
November and December.....	93
January and February.....	337

From approximately 93 people in December the number of units of personnel will begin to rise in early January, and by about January 20th there will be 337 people working. This number of employees will continue until about February 20th, when the number will fall off abruptly to about 73 by March 1st.

F. COSTS

It is difficult to determine the exact amount of savings which will be realized through the adoption of the proposed plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles, but it is safe to say that the savings will exceed $500,000 annually. For further details regarding the computation of the annual savings, see Exhibit II. The difficulty in estimating savings stems from the fact that the Department of Motor Vehicles does not now maintain accurate functional cost data. The Director of Motor Vehicles stated that " * * * it is not possible under our present accounting system to obtain the actual cost of each function performed, due principally to the inevitable overlap of activities * * * " This statement was made by the Director of Motor Vehicles in a letter which conveyed the department's estimates of the cost of the various phases of registration processes.

G. PERMANENT REGISTRATION OF MOTOR VEHICLES

Registration of vehicles for periods of more than one year would reduce annual operating costs under this proposed plan since the annual reconstruction of files would be eliminated. The registration cards could still be mailed prior to each new year. Notices of renewal could be issued by entirely automatic processes since account cards would be used to mechanically select the related sets of punched registration cards from the license number file. After having been used to list the required notices, the sets of punched registration cards would be refilled by machine.

Registration of vehicles for periods of more than one year would necessitate a cross-reference between the current tab number and the registration number similar to the cross-reference file used during the war years. The cross-reference file referred to throughout this report would serve this purpose.

This proposed plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles would provide for complete treatment of the cross-reference file by machine processes.

H. DECENTRALIZATION

Greater decentralization of window operations will have no effect upon the modernized operations outlined in this plan since mechanization of registration processes starts after the completion of cashiering and other window operations.

Actually, part of the mechanized processing may also be decentralized since some keypunching, reproducing, and filing could be performed by machine in area (issuing) or local offices. During the renewal peak the department could thus draw on the labor market in San Diego, Los Angeles, and San Francisco as well as Sacramento.

CHARTS OF OPERATIONS

The nine charts which are shown in Part 2 afford a comprehensive visual presentation of the plan for modernization of registration operations and the related accounting operations by use of punched card methods and electrical business machines. The following comments relative to each chart supplement the information shown on the charts.

CHART 1. GENERAL WORK FLOW

A. Basic, Original Documents

Under the proposed plan, as with present operations, the original source documents for issuance of registration cards and ownership certificates or for entries correcting the records of the department will be: Dealers report of sale and application for registration of vehicles of all types, indorsed * registration cards and certificates of ownership, and notices of change or correction. For renewals under the proposed plan a duplicate copy of a potential registration card mailed just prior to renewal time will serve as the basic document in lieu of the registration card for the preceding year which has heretofore been required by the Vehicle Code.

Under the proposed plan these original documents would also provide information as to the city and/or county in which the vehicle is garaged (information urgently needed by other legislative committees), revenue type which will be a statistical code to facilitate mechanical analyses of registrations and fees, and a place for application of a cashier's stamp which will include the new license number, the Great Seal of the State of California and date payment is received together with area number, office number, and employee number of the person making the validation.

If the Legislature amends Section 10755 of the Revenue and Taxation Code to provide that the amounts of tax determined shall be lowered or raised to the nearest dollar amount, the entries on the original documents will be expressed in even dollars as contrasted with the present practice of expressing these amounts in dollars and cents where fees are computed for a part of a year rather than for a whole year.

If the Legislature amends Section 164.5 pertaining to nonoperation certificates and Section 675.5 (4) by substituting the word "certification" for "affidavit," this change will also be reflected on the original documents.

As shown in Chart 1, applications and other original documents will be filed in the title file when they have passed through the necessary processes and punched cards have been prepared from them. It is proposed that the data contained in the title file be arranged in order by the body serial number and by make of vehicle where there are several identical serial numbers. The body serial number has been chosen as the sequence of the title file because it changes less than the license number, engine number or name. Furthermore, there is currently a nationwide movement which is tending to place greater emphasis upon body serial number and less upon engine number. A separate series of permanent title numbers was discarded as the basis for a sequence of this file to avoid the cost that would be incurred by use of a seven-digit series of numbers. The use of a separate title number in addition to the other information now provided on registration cards and certificates of ownership would not provide any additional control and would entail the cost of punching the extra number in addition to body serial number and make of vehicle.

The establishment of a separate title file containing applications and other original documents as shown in Chart 1 will eliminate the existing necessity for checking the files for as many as five successive years in order to trace the various changes which have occurred in the registration of a given vehicle because all documents for each vehicle would be filed together in the proposed title file. In short, the title file will provide a source for the quick preparation of abstracts of ownership of a vehicle. This file can be purged upon receipt of a report that a vehicle has been junked, upon receipt of notice that the vehicle has been registered in a foreign state, or when there has been no renewal of registration for several successive years.

B. Punched Cards

For each vehicle registered there will be a set of punched registration cards plus one account card. It is estimated that there will be an average of 2.5 punched registration cards for each vehicle registered.

From the account cards, cross-reference cards will be reproduced mechanically for the cross-reference files which will be maintained in Los Angeles and Sacramento. From the master set of punched registration cards there will be automatically reproduced a card for each vehicle for use in the alphabetical file and a card for each vehicle for use in the engine number file. The master set of keypunched registration cards will be filed in the license number file.

From the punched registration cards, certificates of ownership and registration cards for use on the steering posts of vehicles will be prepared together with notices for commercial concerns, the Board of Equalization and the Controller. It is significant that after the registration of a vehicle has once been reflected in the files of the Department of Motor Vehicles, these records may be corrected to reflect new license numbers at the time of renewals of registration by the keypunching of a single card—an account card. By use of the account card, the registration files for the new year together with the analyses of registrations and fees will be automatically completed. This is one of the salient features of the proposed plan since the manual keypunching and verifying of the single account card will consume much less time and will therefore cost much less than the present practice of manually typewriting and verifying the complete registration card for each vehicle each year. It follows that, since there will be less manual work, fewer temporary employees will be required during renewal periods and those temporary employees who are required will be primarily keypunch operators. In a relatively short period of time typists can be trained to perform this type of work.

C. Registration Cards and Ownership Certificates

The registration cards and certificates of ownership to be employed under the proposed plan will conform with those now in use. The only changes will be the addition of the information regarding the city or county in which the vehicle is garaged as this information is urgently needed by other legislative committees; revenue type which is the statistical code which will make possible the analyses of registrations and fees by mechanical methods in lieu of the manual methods now employed thus expediting the analyses and insuring greater accuracy; and addition of space for a cashier's stamp which will contain the Great Seal of the States of California and will indicate the new license number, batch number, area, office, cashier and date of the transaction. If the advance mailing of unvalidated registration cards referred to as potential registration cards is adopted, the registration cards will no longer carry the total fees for the following year since the fees for such following year will appear on the potential registration card issued for that year. If registration and title records are separated, a punched card ownership certificate may be used with advantage as indicated in the comments relative to Chart 2.

D. Statistical and Accounting Reports

All required statistical and accounting reports will be prepared by machine methods as indicated above in "B" and in Chart 9. A salient feature of the plan for mechanization is the flexibility of the system and equipment which will permit adjustments to meet changing legislative and administrative needs.

E. Files

It is in the establishment and maintenance of files that some of the most significant advantages from mechanization will be realized.

The basic registration files will consist of:

- (1) A license number file containing the master set of punched registration cards in license number order.
- (2) An alphabetical file containing a card for each registered owner containing all registration information for each vehicle in alphabetical order.
- (3) An engine number file containing a single card showing all registration information for each vehicle in order by engine number and make of vehicle together with cards providing cross-reference between old engine numbers and new engine numbers where changes have occurred.
- (4) A cross-reference file providing a cross-reference between license or tab numbers and registration (license plate) numbers for permanent registrations and permitting immediate referral from new license number to the information contained in the department's records under the old license number, particularly during renewal periods. This file would contain a card for every fee paid transaction performed by the department since the cards are automatically reproduced from account cards or miscellaneous transaction and fee cards.
- (5) A title file containing the original documents which were the source for establishment of the other files and records in the department including evidence of ownership, liens, notice that vehicle has been stolen, etc.

The stolen vehicle file has not been shown in the charts presenting the new plan due to the movement toward elimination of this file. However, if the file is not abolished economies can be realized by substitution of machine methods for the present manual methods. At present when a request that the files be "flagged" is received by the Registration Division, one card is filed in a master "stolen vehicle file" and another in the engine number, license number, or alphabetical file depending upon the circumstances of a particular case. In any event at the close of the year these files become obsolete and so a complete new set of "flag" cards is typewritten from the master "stolen vehicle file." These new "flag" cards are then used in the registration files for the new year.

If it is necessary to "flag" the files for control or correction purposes, the "flags" could be placed in the title file. Since this is a permanent file, these flags will not have to be prepared again each year. This will eliminate the present necessity for a separate master file or stolen vehicle file.

If other files in addition to the title file have to be flagged, punched cards and electrical business machines can be used as follows:

- (1) The license number, engine number, or name and code showing the reason for the "flag" would be keypunched in a master flag card. On this card would be recorded the essential information. This card would be used in the stolen vehicle file.
- (2) A "flag" card would be mechanically reproduced from the master card and then would be filed in one of the registration files. This reproduced card would not carry the information relative to the cause of the "flag" being placed in the file but the discovery of such a "flag" in the license number file, engine number file, or alphabetical file, would cause a referral to the master card in the stolen vehicle file.
- (3) If "flags" are used in the license number file, engine number file, and alphabetical file, flag cards for a new year can be reproduced from the master set in stolen vehicle file much faster than they can be typewritten at present. Then the "flag" cards could be interfiled by machine.

CHART 2. ORIGINAL REGISTRATIONS

A. Subject

The operations by which all types of original registrations will be processed are shown on Chart 2. To comprehend the operations reference must be made to Chart 2 since the following comments relative to processing and other significant features merely supplement the information provided by the chart.

B. Processing Time

The issuance of original registrations in accordance with Chart 2 will provide for the mailing of registration cards and ownership certificates to the owners within four days after an application for registration is presented to the department. Such registrations will be reflected in the registration files for the current year within four days after the application for registration is presented to the department.

C. Other Significant Features

1. "Ownership Uncleared"

In the case of a foreign application where registration of the vehicle to permit issuance of a license is desirable but title has not been cleared, this fact could be indicated by marking the application, "ownership unclear." Then a name and address card could be punched and used to cause "ownership unclear" to show in the place provided for the name of a legal owner. The card would thus be included in the set of punched registration cards in the manner in which a legal owner card is usually treated. When the title is cleared, the "ownership unclear" card could be removed and a legal owner card could be substituted or not as proper in the particular case. The procedure to be followed in such a correction would be that provided in Chart 5 relating to correction of records not involving a change of license number. In this manner, fees could be collected, a license plate would be provided on the vehicle, and the records of the department would be essentially complete, and a minimum of work would be involved in correcting the department's records. Upon correction of the department's record, a proper registration card and ownership certificate would be issued simultaneously. This same procedure could well be adopted with respect to resident registrations in which questions of title exist. In addition to the account card bearing the regular registration and vehicle license fees and penalties, a miscellaneous transactions card will be punched for the additional service fee charged nonresident applicants.

2. Decentralization Possible

This plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles is presented as a centralized plan for simplicity in presentation and because the greatest economy is possible under a centralized plan of operation, but a considerable measure of decentralization is possible under the plan. For example, operations 1 through 8 on original registrations could be performed in area (issuing) offices, or those operations could be performed in the area office with the exception of the punching of the set of registration cards which could be punched in the central office. In fact, in a large office such as the main office in Los Angeles, operations 1 through 19 could be performed with the exception of operation 15 which then should be performed in Sacramento upon receipt of the set of punched registration cards from the Los Angeles office. These examples show that the plan allows considerable administrative latitude with respect to the extent of centralization or decentralization. If title and registration records are separated, operations 24, 25 and 26 could be performed in the area and local offices to provide the quickest possible delivery of the ownership certificate to the legal owner.

3. Separation of Title and Registration Records

If separation of title and registration records is adopted, operations 24, 25 and 26 as shown would be performed as indicated within the broken-line area in Chart 2 provided a punched card type of ownership certificate and the related mailing card are used. The advantages to be derived from the use of a punched card ownership certificate will be experienced when transfers of ownership or correction of ownership certificates occur. For example, when a change of ownership occurs, the local office would keypunch the name of the new owner in a punched card ownership certificate and then place the old ownership certificate in the same reproducing keypunch machine to automatically complete the punching of the new ownership certificate. This operation could be performed in any office in which the volume of such corrections was sufficiently great to warrant the installation of one reproducing keypunch machine which can be rented for $25 per month, plus one interpreter renting for $75 per month. For all other offices, the total time for issuance of ownership certificates would be one day for the cashing operations and the reproduction of a new punched card ownership certificate plus mailing time from the small local office to the nearest office which has sufficient volume to warrant installation of a machine; thus, the additional days for mailing time would not be as great as that required if the ownership certificates were issued by the headquarters office in Sacramento.

4. Temporary Registration Card in Lieu of Present Receipt Form

As shown in footnote 2 and in the box immediately below operation 1 in Chart 2, an extra copy of an application for registration could be prepared to be validated by the cashier at the time of payment in lieu of the issuance of a temporary receipt. This validated registration card could then be placed on the steering post of the vehicle as a temporary registration card. It may well be that, particularly where the application shows the registered owner to be the legal owner, this document could be treated as a temporary ownership certificate and as such could be marked to indicate that it is void a given number of days after the date of issuance shown on the document. Then, since the records of the department will have been established from the original copy of the application, the "temporary" ownership certificate-registration card could be used to transfer title to the vehicle if such transfer was necessary prior to the release of the machine prepared registration card and ownership certificate. This would provide a means for processing urgent cases but the number of cases would, in all probability, be relatively small due to the short period of time required to issue ownership certificates under the new system. It is true that if title were transferred by use of the temporary ownership certificate, the department would nevertheless issue an ownership certificate to the person who had relinquished title to the vehicle. This is not a desirable aspect but causes no greater decrease in control of outstanding ownership certificates than is occasioned by the issuance of duplicate ownership certificates. Furthermore, such machine issued certificates would be difficult to alter for fraudulent purposes since indelible ribbon can be used. The machine type may be distinctive in form and access to such machines is not universal. The foregoing use of a temporary ownership certificate and registration card in lieu of a temporary receipt is only mentioned in this report for consideration since either the temporary receipt or temporary ownership certificate and registration card will serve the purpose of the proposed plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles as presented in Chart 2.

In operation 16 shown in Chart 2 it is indicated that for each Board of Equalization license plate issued a notice of registration is sent to the Board of Equalization and to the State Controller. The copies sent to the State Controller are forwarded to field offices where they are sorted by B-E permit number and filed. Then when a delinquency occurs with respect to taxes administered by the Transportation Division of the Board of Equalization, the Controller's office is notified of the delinquency and requested to collect the taxes or seize the vehicles from whose operation the tax delinquency arises. If the representatives of the Controller then seize the vehicles, they send a report of seizure and a description of the vehicle to the Sacramento office. As a precautionary measure, the Sacramento office of the Controller then verifies the description of the vehicle with the current registration information shown in the records of the headquarters office of the Department of Motor Vehicles. It is possible that, since the percentage of tax delinquencies to total number of operators subject to the taxes is small, Department of Motor Vehicles is unnecessarily preparing approximately 80,000 notices, and the field offices of the Controller are unnecessarily sorting and filing them. The entire procedure would be simplified if in the few cases where field collection assignments are issued, the Controller's office were to obtain a description of the vehicle to be seized from the records of the Department of Motor Vehicles, or from the records of the Transportation Tax Division of the Board of Equalization. This plan would afford a maximum insurance against the seizure of a vehicle of which the ownership had been transferred.

5. Dealers Codes on New Registration

Special mention is here made relative to the dealers codes now shown on original registration cards for vehicles first sold in California. This identification code is not required for state business. It is purely a specialized service gratuitously given to dealers, which they use in their private business to determine if one dealer has invaded the territory of another. Copies of such registration cards are sold to a commercial concern which makes the determination as to whether or not dealers have sold vehicles outside their assigned territories.

This service should be more than self-supporting and should yield a profit to the State for it materially interferes with the flow of business.

If it is desirable to show these dealer codes on original registration cards, they can be punched in the old license number columns of the description cards and from this source can be printed on the registration cards. In this way, provision of the desired information can be coordinated with the whole mechanized system.

CHART 3. ANNUAL RENEWAL OF REGISTRATIONS

A. Subject

This chart shows how the annual renewal of registrations will be processed under the proposed plan for mechanical registration of motor vehicles.

B. Processing Time

Under the proposed plan a registration card will be immediately handed or mailed to the owner immediately after it has been validated by a cashier. Eight days after completion of the cashiering operations, the renewal will be reflected in the license number file, engine number file, alphabetical file and cross-reference file. Within the same eight-day period the necessary notices of renewal will be released.

In the cost figures presented in this report sufficient machines and personnel are provided to insure the quick processing of renewals in order that the license number file, engine number file, and the alphabetical file will be current on about February 20th of the new year.

Under existing procedures some sorting in these files continued into September during the year 1946.

C. Other Significant Features

Chart 3 contemplates the use of potential (unvalidated) registration cards to be run during the "slack" period near the close of the expiring year and mailed in duplicate to the registered owner prior to renewal time. The owner will present both copies of the registration card for validation at the time the renewal fees are paid. The original registration card will be validated and immediately returned to the owner with the new license plates for immediate use on the vehicle. The duplicate copy will be retained by the Department of Motor Vehicles as the basis for corrections of its records.

In this manner the registration card will be on the steering post of the vehicle for enforcement purposes and would be immediately available for use in transferring ownership or an equity in the vehicle without the delay now experienced during the renewal period because the owner has surrendered his registration card and has only a temporary receipt in his possession.

Mr. Leavitt, the Assistant Postmaster in Sacramento, and his assistants have indicated that at least 85 percent of the potential registration cards sent by first class mail in advance of the renewal date will be delivered to the addressee. The Indiana Gross Income Tax Commission is now controlling income taxes by use of punched card methods and part of the plan involves the premailing of tax returns to the taxpayers. Prior to the adoption of the plan a test was completed by mailing out 100,000 of the preheaded returns. The return on the mailing was 84 percent. It is known that some of those who received returns in the test did not use them in reporting in the hope that they could escape the controls which they knew were being established.

Those persons who fail to receive a potential registration card or who received the card but have lost it prior to paying the renewal fees will, upon visiting or writing any office of the department, be furnished a request for duplicate registration card for renewal. The information for completing this form can be copied by the owner from the registration card for the expiring year. The information copied will not be the entire description of the vehicle; instead, only the information required for the account card will be copied. Then, the owner will print his name and present mailing address on the form. He will then present his registration card for the expiring year and the request for duplicate registration card for renewal at a "rating" (trouble cases) window for verification and application of the fees for the new year.

Lastly, the request for duplicate registration card will be presented to a cashier with the renewal fees. The payment will be cashiered, and both copies of the form validated. Then the original validated copy of the form will be immediately returned to the owner with his license plates. Thus, the copies of the request for duplicate registration card for renewal when validated will serve much the same purposes as the potential registration card would have since the original copy will be immediately available for use on the steering wheel of the vehicle. In these cases, the procedures do not immediately provide the owner with a document which can be used in transferring ownership but this may not be too great a penalty to impose on the owner for failure to notify the department of his change of address or for failure to exercise proper care in retaining the potential registration card for use at renewal time.

For preparing registration cards for validation and mailing in such cases as described above, mechanical matching methods should be used to verify the fees computed manually by the rating clerks.

In those cases where title or equity in a vehicle is transferred near the end of the year and after potential registration cards have been mailed, the new owner would have to delay the renewal of the registration but a few days while waiting for the return of a corrected registration card for the expiring year. The owner, if he does not care to wait, can proceed with his renewal by using a request for duplicate registration card for renewal since the operations to reflect his ownership in the records of the Department of Motor Vehicles will have been completed prior to the time that the renewal transaction will be processed. It should be evident from the foregoing that no owner will be without a registration card under the proposed plan except in those instances where the endorsed registration card has been submitted for a transfer of title or correction. Even in these cases the registered owner will never be without the possession of his registration card for more than a few days.

From the validated duplicate copy of the registration card as batched in the cashiering process a single account card will be punched for each renewal. Reference to the sample account card on Exhibit I, page 13, will disclose that only the old and new license numbers, vehicle license fee class, cashiering information, statistical code, city and county codes, and fees will be punched in the account card. Names, addresses, and the full description of the vehicle will not be punched at the time of each successive renewal of the registration of a vehicle. Thus, that work which is most costly, the manual work, will be limited under the mechanized procedures. From the account card:

1. Punched cards will be reproduced for the cross-reference files.
2. Analyses of registration and fees for administrative and apportionment purposes will be obtained.
3. The engine number, license number, and alphabetical files of the department will be corrected to reflect issuance of the new license or tab.
4. Necessary notices of the renewal will all be prepared by automatic mechanical methods.

D. MECHANICAL RATING FOR VEHICLE LICENSE FEES

At present the vehicle license fees for the coming year for each renewal are ascertained by reference to vehicle license fee schedule. The total fees are then marked on the expired registration card being processed. From there they are copied when the current years registration card is typewritten. The fees thus entered on the registration card in total must subsequently be broken into the various types of fees by a subsequent reference to the vehicle license fee schedule at the time the renewal fees are paid. Under the proposed plan, this final breakdown of fees would be entirely eliminated and the rating in the original instance would be performed entirely by mechanical processes as follows:

1. Cut a master card for each vehicle license fee class for each year. Thus, for each class there would be a master card for each of approximately 10 different years.

Separate sets of these master cards would be cut for:

- a. Automobiles
- b. Commercials
- c. Trailers
- d. Motorcycles

About 2,000 master cards will be required in all.

Each master card would show:

- a. V.L.F. Code
 - b. Year (first sold)
 - c. Registration and weight fees
 - d. Vehicle license fees
 - e. Total fees
2. Reproduce the new, current year description cards from the account cards as shown in operation 11 of Chart 3 punching therein the new license number, old license number, vehicle license fee class, and year first sold.
 3. Sort the new description cards by type of vehicle, by vehicle license fee class, and by year first sold. Each group of cards thus developed should relate to a master card.
 4. Interfile the related master card in front of each group of new description cards; i.e., place the master card bearing a given vehicle license class code and year in front of all account cards punched with same coding and year, and from the master card automatically punch the fees into each of the related description cards as indicated in operation 12 of Chart 3.

In the foregoing manner a description card will have been automatically rated for the vehicle license fees which are to appear on the potential registration cards to be mailed near the close of the year in which this operation is performed for use in renewals for the following year. Hereafter, only original registration applications and a small part of all corrections will have to be "rated" manually. The 3,000,000 renewals will be "rated" mechanically.

E. FOLLOW-UP OF REGISTRATION DELINQUENCIES

As shown in operations 30 through 32 the Director of Motor Vehicles may avail himself of the possibility of issuing delinquency notices with respect to vehicles registered in the preceding year for which no renewal has been received in the current year. This delinquency procedure or follow-up conforms with accepted practices followed by other state agencies charged with the responsibility of collecting taxes.

CHART 4. CORRECTION OF RECORDS INVOLVING COMBINATIONS OF LICENSE NUMBER CHANGES WITH OTHER CHANGES

A. SUBJECT

Chart 4 shows the processes by which combinations of corrections are reflected in the records of the department and corrected registration cards and certificates of ownership issued as, for example, in the change of a truck registration from a regular registration to a B-E registration together with a change in the body and weight of the vehicle. The following comments supplement the explanation of operations provided by the chart.

B. PROCESSING TIME

Within four days after the completion of the cashiering operations, corrected registration cards and ownership certificates together with necessary notices of the corrected registration will be mailed to the owner and other interested persons. Similarly, within four days after completion of the cashiering operations the license number file, engine number file and alphabetical file of the department will reflect the corrections.

C. OTHER SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

Due to the extensive nature of these changes, a complete new set of punched registration cards will be prepared. The account cards punched in these cases will bear both the former license number and the new license number and will be used to pull the incorrect set of punched registration cards from the license number file by matching on the former license number. This will be an automatic process. In accordance with existing practices under which the engine number and alphabetical files are not purged but are simply added to as corrections are made, the chart shows simply the addition of the new description and owner cards to these files. If purging of the files is deemed desirable this can be readily accomplished by mechanical methods.

If the Director of Motor Vehicles wishes the cross-reference file to reflect all the fee transactions in order that the department may readily locate work in process or produce an abstract of the financial transactions during the year with respect to a particular vehicle, the account cards produced as punched in Operation 2 of Chart 4 will be used as a source for production of cross-reference cards. Cross-reference cards can be filed in the cross-reference file within four days after the transaction occurs.

CHART 5. CORRECTION OF RECORDS NOT INVOLVING A CHANGE OF LICENSE NUMBER

A. SUBJECT

Chart 5 outlines the procedures for correcting the registration records of the Department of Motor Vehicles where changes occur which do not involve a change of license number, as for example, a change of registered owner or change in the description of a vehicle or both of these types of changes combined.

B. PROCESSING TIME

Corrected registration cards, ownership certificates, and notices reflecting changes of the type covered by Chart 5 will be mailed to the owners and other interested persons within four working days after receipt of the notice of correction and endorsed registration cards and/or ownership cards. Within the same four days the changes will be reflected in the alphabetical, engine number and license number files of the Department of Motor Vehicles.

C. OTHER SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

This chart discloses that the only manual operation resulting from this type of change will be the punching of the current year license number plus that information which is corrected.

All of the information to be interfiled in each of the files daily will be mechanically sorted in the proper order and then interfiled at one time. Thus, material going into the files from original registration renewals and all types of corrections will be mechanically filed in a single operation.

In each correction transaction of the type covered by Chart 5 an account card will be punched to record the transaction.

If the Director of Motor Vehicles wishes a cross-reference file to reflect all the fee transactions in order that the department may readily locate work in process or produce an abstract of the financial transactions during the year with respect to a particular vehicle, the account cards will be used as a source for reproduction of cross-reference cards.

In cases where the correction consists of or includes an engine number change, an engine number cross-reference card will be keypunched bearing the old engine number and the new engine number. This cross-reference card will be filed in the engine number file under the old engine number.

CHART 6. CORRECTION OF RECORDS INVOLVING LICENSE NUMBER CHANGES ONLY

A. SUBJECT

This chart presents the method by which the files of the Department of Motor Vehicles will be corrected and corrected registration cards, ownership certificates, and notices released when the following types of transactions occur: receipt of requests for duplicate plates, the registration of vehicles entering this State during the same year in which they left, and transfers to or from B-E (Board of Equalization) plates.

B. PROCESSING TIME

As a result of the operations outlined, corrected registration cards and/or ownership certificates will be mailed by the close of the fourth day after the correction is received by the department. The license number file, engine number file, and alphabetical file will reflect the change within the same four day period.

C. OTHER SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

According to the statistical information reported by the Department of Motor Vehicles, the annual volume of this type of correction is less than 43,000 changes of which approximately 38,000 are requests for duplicate plates and 5,000 are transfers to and from Board of Equalization plates.

Chart 6 indicates that the only manual work involved in the correction of the records when a license number change occurs is the punching of an account card.

If the Director of Motor Vehicles wishes, the account card can be reproduced to provide a cross-reference card for these transactions in order that the cross-reference file will reflect every transaction which has occurred during the current year with respect to each license number.

If deemed desirable by the Director of Motor Vehicles, the decentralization of these operations could occur with respect to the punching of the account cards which would then be mailed to Sacramento to be matched with the license number file and used in the reproduction of a corrected set of punched registration cards.

CHART 7. ISSUANCE OF DUPLICATE REGISTRATION CARDS OR OWNERSHIP CERTIFICATE WITH TITLE AND REGISTRATION RECORDS COMBINED OR ISSUANCE OF REGISTRATION CARDS WITH TITLE AND REGISTRATION RECORDS SEPARATED

A. SUBJECT

This chart presents the procedure to be followed in issuance of duplicate registration cards and ownership certificates. Approximately 207,000 requests for duplicate registration cards and ownership certificates are received annually.

B. PROCESSING TIME

Under this procedure, the duplicate registration cards or ownership certificates will be mailed by the close of the fourth day after the request is received. It is significant to note that these cards will not be refiled as a separate group but will be mechanically sorted together with all other sets of punched registration cards which are to go into the license number file on a given day, thus making the interfiling operation a satisfactory machine job.

In the operations shown by this chart as in the case of those shown by previous charts, at the discretion of the Director of Motor Vehicles the special fee cards can be reproduced to obtain a cross-reference card in order that the cross-reference file will reflect all transactions for each account number during the current year.

At the discretion of the Director of Motor Vehicles, the punching of the special fee cards in these cases could occur in local offices. Then the cards could be mailed to Sacramento to cause the preparation of duplicate registration cards or ownership certificates.

If title and registration records are separated the operations shown in Chart 7 should be performed in the issuance of registration cards, but references to ownership certificates should be ignored as ownership certificates will then be issued in accordance with Chart 8.

C. OTHER SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

The only manual work required after completion of the cashing of the duplicate fees will be the keypunching of a special fee card which will be used in accounting analyses and will also serve as the means for mechanically pulling the related set of punched registration cards from the license number file. The set of registration cards thus pulled will be used to list the duplicate registration card or certificate of ownership and will then be mechanically refiled in the license number file.

CHART 8. ISSUANCE OF DUPLICATE OWNERSHIP CERTIFICATES WITH TITLE AND REGISTRATION RECORDS SEPARATED

A. SUBJECT

This chart presents a plan for issuance of duplicate ownership certificates provided title and registration records are separated and provided a punched card ownership certificate is used.

B. PROCESSING TIME

From the time that the cashier releases the mailing cards and batches of requests for duplicate ownership certificates, 24 hours plus the mailing time from the office which handles the transaction to the headquarters office will be required for completion of the ownership certificates and placing it in the mail.

C. OTHER SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

The legal owner in requesting a duplicate ownership certificate would submit a request together with a mailing card on which he would write his name, address and the body serial number and make of the vehicle. Upon receipt of these, the Department of Motor Vehicles would punch the serial number of the vehicle and the make of vehicle in the mailing card and then mechanically sort the cards. The cards thus arranged would be used to pull information from the title file. Using the endorsed ownership certificate or other document from the title file as the source, a duplicate ownership certificate would be keypunched and interpreted. This would require the punching of a single line entry in a single card. Since the material would be pulled from the title file in engine number order and kept in that order, the duplicate ownership certificate can be placed behind the related mailing card by machine and the pair of cards mailed in a window envelope.

Simultaneously with the foregoing operations a miscellaneous fee card will be punched from the batches of requests for duplicate ownership certificates.

At the discretion of the Director of Motor Vehicles these cards can be reproduced to prepare a cross-reference card if it is the wish of the Director of Motor Vehicles to have the cross-reference file reflect all transactions which have occurred during the current year with respect to each license number.

At the discretion of the Director of Motor Vehicles, the punching of the miscellaneous fee cards and the mailing cards can be performed in local offices.

CHART 9. FINANCIAL AND STATISTICAL ANALYSES

A. SUBJECT

This chart presents graphically the important apportionment statements and other accounting and statistical analyses of registrations and fees.

B. PROCESSING TIME

The chief aspect of the mechanical preparation of these reports is the relative ease with which machines can make the necessary sorts and analyses and produce the necessary reports within a very short period of time.

C. OTHER SIGNIFICANT FEATURES

The statistical and financial analyses presented in this chart and included in the accompanying estimates of cost exemplify the potential savings and the ease with which reports and analyses may be obtained as a by-product and outgrowth of the mechanization of registration activities. Speed and accuracy are essential in these operations.

SUMMARY OF BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED FROM MODERNIZATION OF REGISTRATION PROCESSES

ADVANTAGES FOR THE PUBLIC

a. Time at Windows in Local Offices Decreased for Majority

- (1) Public invited to pay by mail using cashier's check or money order and potential registration card.
- (2) Under mechanical processing it will not be necessary for registrant to visit "rating" window to have his fees checked and amount he is to pay written on his old registration card.

b. Registration Card in Owner's Possession Immediately Upon Payment of Renewal Fees

- (1) At time of payment original registration card will be validated thus immediately providing owner with card for use in vehicle or for use in transferring ownership. This will decrease the department's correspondence load and relieve record keeping problems in lending agencies as well as eliminating delay which are annoying to the owner.
- (2) The registration card on the steering post will aid both enforcement officers and the department by reducing reference by license number for the purpose of obtaining name and address of the owner as is now necessary due to the present issuance of temporary receipts when renewal fees are paid. The fact that the owner has the registration card in his possession at all times may prevent his being detained by a police officer until his ownership of the vehicle can be verified with the Department of Motor Vehicles.
- (3) Even during the renewal period registration cards and ownership certificates for original registrations and corrections will be mailed within four days after receipt of these cases by the department. Thus minimizing the time during which owner is without these documents.

c. Quick Completion of New Year's Files

- (1) The lag from date of renewal transaction to time it is reflected in files will be eight days, assuming cashiering keeps current.
- (2) Files will reflect renewals and be current again by about February 20th of each year. The plan and cost are based on the processing of renewals during the period from approximately January 28th through February 20th of each year.
- (3) Complete, original registrations and fees will be processed currently and reflected in the files of the department within four days after receipt of such cases even during the renewal period.

d. Title to a Vehicle Can Be Ascertained and Abstracted

- (1) Abstract of changes in legal ownership, etc., can be quickly prepared by reference to the title file in lieu of the present practice of checking back through as many as five successive years.
- (2) If stolen vehicle control is required the title file can be "flagged." Since this is a permanent file, these flags will not have to be prepared again each year thus eliminating the present necessity for a separate stolen vehicle file for use in the annual preparation of flag cards.

e. Prompt Issuance of New Ownership Certificates

It has been pointed out above that Ownership Certificates will be issued promptly with title and registration records combined as they are at present. If title and registration records are separated, manual processing could be mechanized and the release of new certificates expedited by the use of a punched card Ownership Certificate. A draft of such a certificate is shown in Exhibit I.

ADMINISTRATIVE ADVANTAGESa. Fewer Temporary Employees Under Mechanized System

- (1) Fewer at windows due to invitation to the public to pay by mail.
- (2) Fewer at windows due to elimination of necessity for having fees for the new year checked and the amount to be paid entered on the old registration card prior to presentation of the registration card at a cashiering window. The fees to be paid as shown on the mechanically prepared registration cards will have been adequately checked and controlled prior to their release to the public.
- (3) Fewer in operations subsequent to cashiering due to mechanized rating, filing, etc.
- (4) Fewer in Personnel Bureau and Pay Roll Bureau due to employment of fewer persons.
- (5) Fewer in Accounting Bureau on apportionments and analyses of revenue.

b. Costs and Savings

Several hundred thousand dollars per year savings will result from:

- (1) Reduced operating costs.
- (2) Lower annual training costs.
- (3) Lower costs due to few errors as result of fewer temporary employees.
- (4) Mechanical rating.
- (5) Fewer at windows for both "rating" and cashiering.
- (6) Less correspondence.
- (7) Less enforcement reference.
- (8) Necessary references facilitated through files being in order early in year.

c. Statistics for Legislative Committees

- (1) If apportionment analyses need be made by city as well as county, this can be done for about $2,000 in additional costs.

d. Cross-reference from New License or Tab Number to Old License Number

- (1) Cross-reference files will give immediate access to information available under the old license number thus aiding enforcement officials and assisting the department in the processing of correspondence.
- (2) These files will give reference to transactions by current year license number.
- (3) Cross-reference files will provide one of the controls of work in process. This will be most valuable during the conversion period and first year of full operations.

e. Delinquency Notices May Be Issued Regarding Failure to Reregister Vehicles

This offers a possibility of collection of taxes which are not determined due or collected by the present operations.

f. Decentralization of Window Operations

- (1) No effect on mechanical processing as mechanization starts after the cashiering operations have been completed.
- (2) Mechanization will eliminate ditto operations in issuing offices but some keypunching may advantageously be done in such offices. This will draw on the labor market outside Sacramento.

g. Permanent Registration of Motor Vehicles

This will require a cross-reference file just as would be required under the present methods but since the cross-reference file could consist of punched cards it could be sorted and processed more cheaply mechanically than manually. The file referred to above in "a" will serve this purpose.

h. Registration Cards

Registration cards (pre-listed) will be written during period of low work load.

i. Correction of Records

Correction of records will be performed in period of low work load as a result of advance mailing of registration cards.

j. Expanding Work Loads

Expanding work loads can be absorbed much more easily and at less cost with mechanized operations.

Use

Whenever an engine number is changed or an old engine is replaced by a new engine, an engine number cross index card will be keypunched and filed in the engine number file under the old engine number. Since this card will bear the new engine number also, it will provide the necessary cross-reference from the old to the new engine number.

REQUEST FOR DUPLICATE REGISTRATION CARD

(For Renewal Purposes Only)

REQUEST FOR DUPLICATE REGISTRATION CARD TEMPORARY REGISTRATION CARD CALIFORNIA 1948 DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES		IMPORTANT If address where vehicle is garaged has changed out of or into an incorporated city since this card was issued, show where vehicle is now garaged: City _____ OR County (if garaged outside city) _____		Cashier's Stamp Amount Received License Number
COPY THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION FROM LAST YEAR'S REGISTRATION CARD
License Number for Expiring Year	Date First Sold	VLF Code	City	County	Statistical Code (Trucks and Trailers Only)
PRINT NAME AND ADDRESS: _____ Name of Registered Owner _____ Street Address _____ City _____ State _____
SPACE BELOW FOR DEPARTMENT USE ONLY
Registration Penalty	VLF Penalties	Weight Fee	Registration Fee	Total Fees & Penalties

These forms will be initiated in duplicate by the owner of a vehicle when he has lost or failed to receive his potential registration card. Use of the form will require the owner to copy a limited amount of information from the expiring year's registration card which should be available in his vehicle. Then, the department will compute and enter the fees on the form. The owner will pay the fees and receive his license plates or tabs. At the same time the original copy of the form shown above will be validated by the cashier and returned to the owner for use on the post of his vehicle. The department will correct its records from the duplicate copy of the above form and will then mail a complete corrected registration card to the owner. These corrected Registration Cards will be validated before they are mailed.

It is anticipated that the post office will be unable to deliver between 6 percent and 10 percent of the potential registration cards by reason of the owners' failure to notify the department of their changes of address. Thus, approximately 300,000 of the above forms will be required for this reason.

Some potential registration cards will be lost and use of the form shown above will result. The number of these cases cannot be determined in advance but should be small after the first year.

ESTIMATED ANNUAL SAVINGS IN COST OF REGISTERING MOTOR VEHICLES AND ANALYZING REGISTRATIONS AND FEES
BY MECHANIZED PROCEDURES—Continued

¹ The arbitrary estimate of 80 percent reflects the fact that the volume of correspondence to be processed will be considerably reduced under the proposed procedures due to prompt processing at all times, thus reducing inquiries as to why transfers have not been cleared or inquiries as to where corrected registration cards are, etc. The estimate also reflects the fact that most rating (i.e., determination and entry of fees on applications, etc.) will be performed mechanically under the new procedures whereas this work is now performed manually. For example, the "rating" work-load in 1945 was approximately as follows:

New registrations -----	250,000
Engine number changes -----	70,000
Duplicate plates -----	37,834
Reregistrations -----	149
Transfers to B-E -----	5,312
	263,295	8%
Renewals -----	3,200,000	92%

Under present procedures, each registration card is "rated" for fees twice. The first rating results in and appears on the registration card in the form of the total fees for the following year. Then when that registration card is presented at a window or is mailed in at renewal time, the fees are again determined and entered in the grid at the upper right hand corner of the registration card. At this time the fees are also added manually and the total is entered in the grid. Under the proposed plan this last visit to a "rating" window will be eliminated as the fees to be paid will appear on the potential registration card at the time it is released. Thus, slightly less than half the window contacts at renewal time will be eliminated.

The cost of rating renewals is included in the estimated cost of personnel and machines under the mechanized processing as indicated in item "m" of this statement. However, it is recognized that the 8 percent of the cases requiring manual rating involve relatively more examination time per case than is required for the 92 percent which will no longer be rated manually.

² The arbitrary estimate of 70 percent reflects the fact that there will be 220 or 19 percent fewer temporary employees required at renewal time by the Registration Division, plus the fact that the entire cost of apportionment and accounting analyses of registrations is reflected in the costs of machines and personnel per item "m" of this statement, plus the fact that both of the above reductions will result in a lessened pay roll load and thus will decrease costs in the pay roll bureau. As an example, the Accounting Bureau personnel now fluctuates from a low of around 23 to a peak of 45 workers during the renewal period. Under the proposed plan 70 percent of the work of Accounting Bureau will be performed on the electrical accounting machines.

³ Plus cost of ditto equipment, typewriters, and adding machines with cost of maintenance thereof. Approximately 100 typewriters are now being replaced annually at a cost of about $110 each or a total annual cost of from $10,000 to $11,000. There are about 600 typewriters used at one time in the Department of Motor Vehicles. About 250 adding machines are rented for the four- or five-month renewal peak in the Registration Division and 15 or 20 for the Accounting Bureau for use on apportionments and revenue analyses.

The exact number of mail registrations throughout the State is unknown but it is generally agreed that less than half of all registrations are in that category. Therefore, the cost of first class postage on one-half of 3,200,000 registrations ($0.03 X 1,600,000) which is $48,000 must be deducted from the savings figures as the cost of additional postage incurred by advance mailing of potential registration cards. All other costs of this advance mailing are included in the costs of the mechanized procedures as shown.

⁵ Estimated Cost Under Proposed Plan—$1,856,998 = 76 percent
Present Annual Cost----- $2,433,035

Thus, the estimated costs under the proposed plan are only 76 percent of the annual costs under present procedures. This is an annual saving of 24 percent or $576,037.

⁶ Full cost of registration cards and certificates of ownership presently incurred. See cost of supplies shown on Schedule 3 of Information for the Joint Legislative Budget Committee.

*Mr. Perry L. Stauffer, Principal Research Assistant Legislative Budget Commission,
State Capitol, Sacramento, California*

DEAR MR. STAUFFER: This is in response to your inquiry of September 30, 1946, relating to a functional breakdown of salaries and wages for the Division of Registration for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1946.

While it is not possible under our present accounting system to obtain the actual cost of each function performed, due principally to the inevitable overlap of activities, we are, however, of the opinion that the information contained herein is substantially accurate.

An adjustment in the total salaries and wages paid for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1946 has been necessary. The $1,504,117.98 total has been increased to $2,282,344.00—$630,518.00 paid for temporary help, $153,709.00 contributed for retirement.

The breakdown, in the order as set forth in your communication, is as follows:

* (a) Rating, corrections, correspondence.....	$1,504,844.00 *
(b) Cashiering (mail and counter).....	238,600.00 *
(c) Irregularities. See (a).....
(d) Correspondence. See (a).....
(e) Typing and proofreading registration cards.....	308,350.00
(f) Duplicating and cutting.....	20,850.00
(g) Engine file—setting up and maintenance.....	46,300.00
(h) License number file—setting up and maintenance.....	113,100.00
(i) Alphabetical file—setting up and maintenance.....	56,300.00

Total salaries and wages..... $2,288,344.00

In the event you desire detailed information on any one of the above items, please let us know.

Very truly yours,

EDGAR E. LAMPTON
Director

* Combined these are 76.1 percent of total salaries and wages. P. Stauffer.

* Includes: salaries for general administration; rating renewal and new applications for registrations, transfers, engine changes, duplicates; recording and releasing of chattel mortgages; handling of complaints, information inquiries, correspondence, and other direct services to the public. COST OF INFORMATION FOR JOINT FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE ON HIGHWAYS, STREETS, AND BRIDGES

Analysis of Registrations by Type of Vehicle, City and County

The total annual cost of obtaining apportionment analyses by type of vehicle, city, and county will be approximately $2,976. There will be some additional cost incurred at counters inducing registrant to provide the required information as to where vehicle is garaged. The complete mechanization of registration activities makes it possible to secure the above analyses as a by-product. The above costs therefore cover only those operations in addition to mechanical registration.

The cost of adding city codes on Motor Vehicle Registration Cards as required by the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets and Bridges in lieu of the present use of a county code only, will be approximately as follows:

Explanation	Costs
	Personnel	Machine
Key punching two additional columns in 3,200,000 cards-----	$690	$115
Sorting on two additional columns-----	162	72

Maximum Gross Weight

The substitution of maximum gross weight for unladen weight will add no additional burden to the process costs as it will substitute one set of operations for another set which are practically identical.

Processing Time

Apportionment reports for every month can be sent to the State Controller by the fifteenth day of each succeeding month. Under present procedures the reports for February, 1946, were sent to the State Controller on May 29, 1946.

EXHIBIT IV
INFORMATION RELATIVE TO CONVERSION FROM PRESENT TO PROPOSED PLAN

1. During the eight months required to complete the conversion from the present method to the proposed method for processing registrations approximately 165 workers will be needed in Sacramento. The total cost of conversion to punched card methods will approximate $245,111. This is equal to about half the annual savings anticipated from the change. Of this amount $62,816 will be required in this current fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, in addition to the amount required to operate the present plan. In the first half of the next fiscal year (99th) covering the period July 1, 1947, through June 30, 1948, the conversion will cost approximately $182,295. In the last half of the Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year the registration operations will be performed on a mechanized basis. Thus, some savings should be realized in comparison with past costs when the 1948 renewals are processed. Any such saving would be an offset against the extra costs incurred in conversion during the first half of the year.

The new system should produce an annual saving in excess of $500,000. If only half this amount is saved during the first year under the new system the savings would cover the conversion costs experienced in the Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year. Unfortunately, it is impossible to foresee the extent of difficulty which will be experienced during 1948 when renewals are handled on a mechanized basis for the first time.

With all the foregoing in mind, it is recommended that when the Legislature meets in 1947, the Registration Division be provided an appropriation for support in the amount of $62,816 or such greater or lesser amount as it is then expected will be required for conversion costs during May and June, 1947.

It is further recommended that no amounts be appropriated during the 1947 Session to cover conversion costs in the 1947-1948 Fiscal Year. However, if experience proves that part or all of the conversion costs are not offset by savings resulting from the mechanization, the additional amount actually needed can be appropriated during the 1948 Legislative Session.

Another alternative would be for the Legislature to vote some reasonable sum for additional support of registration activities to be spent only upon justification of the need therefor.

2. In the explanation of administrative actions required to execute this plan, it was indicated that a separate Bureau of Tabulating Services should be created.

3. In the conversion of personnel typists can be trained as keypunch operators and clerks can be trained as machine operators. A part of the file clerks will be required under the modernized plan. Cutbacks in personnel can be accomplished by failure to fill positions vacated, rather than by lay off as more people will be needed in the early months of conversion than will be required after the operations have settled down. Surplus workers can undoubtedly be transferred to other state agencies where they are badly needed.

4. The following comments are not meant to be restrictive but rather are offered to help crystallize thinking with respect to the process of converting from the present registration and accounting procedures to the proposed plan.

Assuming that the processing of the renewals for 1947 are sufficiently advanced by May 1st, initial operations could begin on that date. The major part of the original work required in establishing the registrations on punched card records could be completed by approximately November 30th. There would be a small volume of punching continued through December 10th. This would keep the operators busy until notices of corrections flowed back as a result of the advance mailing of potential registration cards run from the sets of punched registration cards. The advance listing of the registration cards could begin early in November in order that one-half of the total load can be listed by November 30th. Then, during the first three weeks of December the listing of the other half of the total load can be completed.

The sections of the file chosen for the earliest listing of potential registration cards should be those which contain registration cards in the southern end of the State or outlying regions to whom the delay of mail from Sacramento will require the longest time. The first task in converting to the new system will be the coding of registration cards contained in the license number file for the year 1947. The coding will primarily provide information required in the punched card for mechanical analysis for apportionment and accounting purposes.

The codes used will be a two-digit code relative to type of license and applicable to all registrations and an eight-digit statistical code applicable only to commercial and trailer registrations which comprise about 10 percent of the annual registration load. These codes are explained in Exhibit VI. The length of names, addresses and descriptions will also have to be examined and, where necessary briefed to conform with the space allowed on the punched cards.

Upon completion of the coding, mechanization can begin with the keypunching of sets of punched registration cards. The estimated cost and the personnel required for the conversion are shown in the following schedules.

The conversion can begin with any section of the license number file but it might be desirable to start with the motorcycle section, then proceed to the commercial section, then to the trailer section and lastly begin to process the automobile section of the file. Since the processing of the motorcycle, commercial, and trailer sections of the file can all be accomplished during May and June, the processing of approximately one-fifth of the automobile section of the file will be completed during each month thereafter through November, 1947. When the punching of the motorcycle section of the license number file has been completed, cards for the alphabetical and engine number files will be prepared and sorted by mechanical methods. Thus, there will be established the license number file, alphabetical file and engine number files for that section. As the work progresses, and each additional section in the file is converted, the cards for that section will be interfiled with the previously established alphabetical, license number and engine number punched card files.

References to the registration files during the period after conversion begins could be handled as follows:

License Number File References

All references to license number file for information within those sections which have been established on punched cards would be to the punched card file. All other references would be made to the old license number file.

Alphabetical File References

During conversion, references to the registration files by name would be made first to the old alphabetical file and then to the new punched card alphabetical file during May through August. During the period September through December the references would be made first to the punched card alphabetical file and, finding nothing there, reference would then be made to the old file. The foregoing would result in the greatest number of references being satisfied at the time of the first reference without an additional reference to the second file being necessary in most cases. For example, during the last period of the conversion period more than half of the registration records will have been established on punched cards and thus in the majority of cases an initial reference to the punched card records will provide the information required without further reference.

Engine Number File

The references to the engine number file will be made in the same manner as outlined for references to the alphabetical file.

Title File

References for the purpose of tracing title will, in some instances, be satisfied by an initial reference to the separate title file but for several years after the conversion, it will be necessary to refer to the new title file and to the prior year license number files to establish title to a vehicle. Eventually, however, the reference to the title file will produce a complete record of all ownership changes and corrections in respect to the registration of a vehicle.

A REPORT ON THE CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY PATROL

Submitted to the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization
By Franklin M. Kreml

INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF CHIEFS OF POLICE (INCORPORATED)

TRAFFIC DIVISION, 1704 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill.

October 16, 1946

*The Honorable Jerrold L. Seawell, Chairman, and Members Senate
Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization, California Legislature, Sacramento, California*

DEAR SENATOR SEAWELL: We are submitting herewith a report on the California Highway Patrol as requested by you in your letter of April 16, 1946.

We gratefully acknowledge the cooperation given by you and the members of your committee. We received wholehearted cooperation from all state agencies from which we requested information. The Director of Motor Vehicles and the Chief of the California Highway Patrol were especially helpful.

The Honorable Phil S. Gibson, Chief Justice of the California Supreme Court, offered excellent guidance and advice regarding the subject of judicial administration.

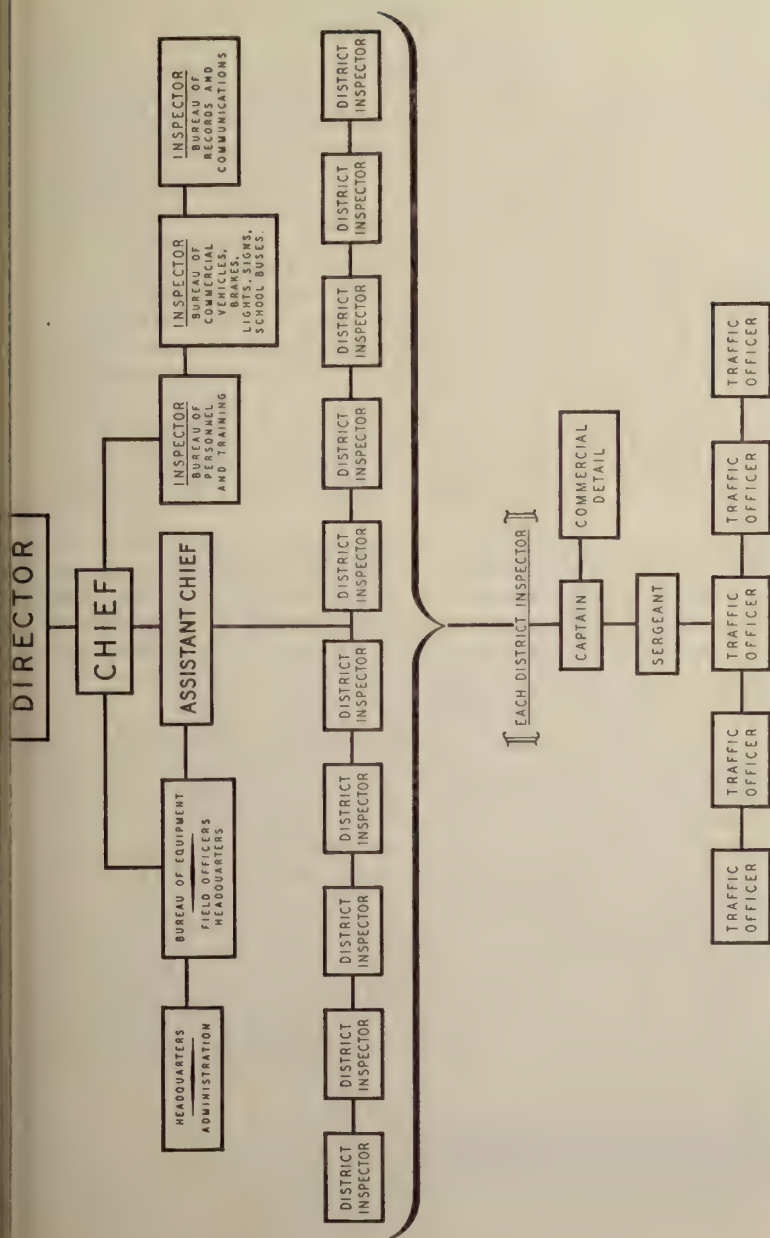

The Honorable Fred B. Wood, your Legislative Counsel, and his deputy, W. L. Kilgore, and other members of his staff gave us most valuable assistance in the preparation and in the digest of summaries of the California Vehicle Code and the comparison of your code with Acts II and V of the Uniform Vehicle Code.

The members of my staff and I wish you and the members of your committee every success in your splendid efforts to improve the administrative efficiency of the State Government.

Yours very truly,

FMK:aah

LT. COL. FRANKLIN M. KREML, Director

Proposed Organizational Chart of a Separate Department Submitted to the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization by the California Association of Highway Patrolmen

INTRODUCTION

On May 20, 1946, this organization accepted the invitation of the Senate Committee on Governmental Reorganization of the California Legislature to study the "legislative, administrative, and organizational requirements of the California Highway Patrol," giving attention to the problems of motor vehicle administration and traffic law enforcement. The subsequent survey and this report were respectively directed and prepared by the undersigned with the assistance of the following staff: Daniel C. Snedaker and Francis P. Lowrey, field representatives of the Traffic Division, International Association of Chiefs of Police, and Dr. David G. Monroe, counsel, Northwestern University Traffic Institute.

California with 3,166,178¹ registered motor vehicles ranks first in the Nation. While national motor vehicle registration decreased during the war period from 34,000,000 to 29,000,000, California's registration increased from 3,163,376 to 3,166,178.² During the first half of 1946, gasoline consumption in the State was 21 percent above 1941 levels. Congestion and an increasing accident experience are retarding the economic and social development of the State,³ which is more highly dependent upon motor transportation than any other of comparable population.

Reliable sources indicate that motor vehicle registration in the United States may reach 40,000,000 by 1960.⁴ In view of past experience and present trends, it is reasonable to assume that California will share disproportionately in this increase, probably having a registration of 5,000,000 in 10 years.⁵ The State's traffic situation is now difficult and perplexing;⁶ it will become gravely critical unless the problem is met, as it unfolds, with adequate and courageous official action.⁷

This report discusses the prevailing traffic law enforcement situation of the State of California and contains recommendations regarding the organization and management of the administrative and judicial agencies charged with responsibility for traffic law enforcement. The report gives major attention to the California Highway Patrol because of its importance in state traffic law enforcement. Some attention necessarily is given to the California Vehicle Code, and recommendations are made therein particularly affecting the enforcement program.

Important consideration also was given to the organization of the state structure for control and coordination of its safety program, substantial responsibility for which extends into each of several departments of the executive branch. Upon such control and coordination depends, to a large degree, the ultimate success, not only of the traffic law enforcement work of the State, but of its traffic engineering, public and school safety education as well.

ACCIDENTS AND ARRESTS
BY MONTH

GRAPH I. City of Oakland, California

The value of traffic law enforcement—including a sound code, effective police action, impartial adjudication and careful driver selection and elimination through examination and license revocation—has been repeatedly demonstrated to be a highly resultful traffic control and accident prevention technique. The accompanying graph, summarizing the experience of Oakland for a five-year period, is illustrative of this point. However, to be productive, traffic law enforcement must result from a planned program, carefully directed toward those factors which are primarily contributing to an adverse experience and are susceptible to correction or improvement by enforcement action. It must, in a word, be of high quality.

In its broad sense, enforcement includes any ethical activity which tends to secure voluntary compliance with the law. The special aim of traffic law enforcement is to deter the violator and potential violator to such an extent that the safe and efficient use of the highways is assured to all. This is true of the various types of enforcement activity, whether it results in the arrest, prosecution and punishment of violators, in the suspension or revocation of the driving privilege or the suspension or revocation of vehicle registration plates, warnings, or admonitions, depending upon the circumstances of the case.

Looking at enforcement from a restricted point of view—that which deals with the arrest, prosecution and trial of traffic law violators—we find that there are certain specific requirements which must exist if the enforcement activity is to be effective. One of these requirements is a code of law, sound and enforceable, as modern as the conditions they are devised to control and which protect the peculiar interests of no special groups. Unless the code meets these requirements the police will be unable to apply uniform pressure upon the violators, and the courts cannot apply the code uniformly—with the result that the purpose of the law will not be realized.

The authority and jurisdiction of the enforcement agency must be sufficient to permit it to operate effectively. Authority must be commensurate with responsibility. The wording of the laws must be such that the intent is clear, and the police must have sufficient authority to enforce each provision of it.

The third requirement is that all enforcement officers must perform effectively. Even within our restricted definition of enforcement, we find that it contemplates the efficient and cooperative action of officers representing three branches of government. The police officer arrests the violator, the district attorney should represent the State in the prosecution of the case and the judge renders the verdict and assesses the penalty. No phase of this process is complete in itself. All three must be performed properly if enforcement action is to be of high quality. Certainly the motorist, whether a resident of this State or any other, is within his rights to insist that these three public officials perform their duties on a high plane.

Another requirement of effective enforcement is alert and competent action by the police agency. Broad policies of procedure must be developed and maintained; basic needs for area coverage must be secured; officers must be assigned throughout the State in proportion to the problems facing them with specific instructions regarding their methods of operation; adequate personnel, properly directed, must be made available; a sufficient amount of equipment, meeting rigid performance standards, must be made available to permit this important arm of government to operate economically and effectively.

Enforcement activities should be uniformly sound throughout the State; they must be directed at common, pre-determined goals. The safety and convenience of the public demand that the State assume responsibility for the development of the program and that it secure participation by the official and public agencies having responsibility for the various phases of traffic control. Without effective leadership by state officers and agencies and the full support of the Legislature, traffic safety, particularly in rural areas, will not be achieved.

LT. COL. FRANKLIN M. KREML, Director

SUMMATION

1. California faces a critical problem of traffic control and accident prevention. The State ranks first in the Nation in the number of registered motor vehicles—3,166,178—and with motor vehicle use increasing, a registration of five million is forecast by 1955.

2. Enforcement is the most immediately effective measure that can be applied for substantial improvement in highway traffic control and accident prevention.

3. The following are the major requirements of a sound traffic law enforcement program for California:

a. Reorganization of state traffic law enforcement.

(1) Detach the California Highway Patrol from the Department of Motor Vehicles and establish it as a separate department.

(2) Place the chief of the patrol under a five-man commission, removing him from civil service status.

(3) Reorganize the California Highway Patrol, providing adequate headquarters staff and sufficient line command and reducing the number of commanding officers through patrol area consolidation.

(4) Reestablish the California Highway Patrol training school, which should provide facilities for the traffic training of municipal officers as requested by local government.

(5) Provide additional patrol men and increase motor equipment and strength commensurately, so that the state highways may be policed with reasonable adequacy.

b. Provision of the necessary facilities within the Department of Motor Vehicles for the following, as provided by law:

(1) Adequate driver examination and reexamination programs.

(2) Past-conviction records for hearing courts.

(3) Suspension of drivers' licenses of defendants failing to appear on previously issued citations.

- c. A study of the inferior courts by the State Judicial Council for the purpose of providing, in principal, a state-wide traffic court system of the type recommended in the Warren report, "Traffic Courts."
 - d. Revision of the California Vehicle Code, bringing it into close conformity with Act V of the Uniform Vehicle Code of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety. The slight language differences in some sections of the Rules of the Road are such as result in wide disparity of principle.
- (1) Provisions of the Vehicle Code enacted to arrest certain administrative practices or to compensate for the lack of executive action are unsound.

4. Present governmental machinery for the coordination and control of the various traffic functions of the several departments of the executive branch is inadequate.

- a. Coordination cannot be effected from within one of the affected departments.
- b. Authority for such coordination should be drawn directly from the chief executive.
- c. Sufficient authority should be delegated to a coordinator to allow for actual executive direction of traffic control activities whenever required.
- d. The coordinator should be permitted to secure outside technical consultative assistance as necessary.

5. The universality of the traffic problem is such that state-county-municipal coordination, particularly in enforcement and motor vehicle administration, is imperative.

- a. Such coordination should be developed cooperatively with the assistance of the state coordinator.

SECTION I

Organization of the California Highway Patrol

A. ITS POSITION IN THE FRAMEWORK OF STATE GOVERNMENT

The California Highway Patrol was established in 1929 under the Division of Motor Vehicles within the Department of Public Works. The division became a part of the Department of Motor Vehicles in 1931, the patrol being then designated as the Division of Enforcement of the Department. It has remained in this position since that time despite several recommendations, by both official and unofficial groups, that it be changed. The matter of placement within the framework of government is of primary importance. Assignment of enforcement responsibility to a department primarily interested in nonpolice functions may result in the relegation of the enforcement function to a minor role not consistent with the public need.

The patrol, operating as the Division of Enforcement of the Department of Motor Vehicles, is required to perform duties which are not enforcement measures. So long as the patrol remains a part of the department it is reasonable to assume that it will continue to be burdened with duties which are those of other divisions of the department, as it has been in the past.

Many arguments have been advanced, in justification of the assignment of the Highway Patrol to the Department of Motor Vehicles, which performs such diverse functions as motor vehicle administration, driver licensing, motor vehicle inspection, and accident record maintenance and analysis. The more important of these arguments are stated below with our observations thereon:

1. "The three functions, registration, driver licensing and traffic law enforcement, are only three phases of one large situation—the control of the motor vehicle. Therefore the integration of these activities within a single unit is logical."

Were this conclusion valid it would logically follow that all agencies operating in the traffic control field should be merged; yet such a merger of activities is unsound because it would combine several different and distinct governmental functions, such as motor vehicle registration, driver licensing, traffic law enforcement, highway construction and maintenance, traffic safety education and adjudication of traffic cases. The present organizational pattern attempts to merge two such dissimilar functions: (1) licensing and taxation and (2) traffic law enforcement. The patrol is one unit of a large governmental agency whose main function is the collection of fees; such departmental functions continue to divert patrol strength from highway supervision.

2. "Merging these three functions, driver licensing, vehicle registration and enforcement, simplifies operation by permitting the head of the department to coordinate activities, with a consequent increase in efficiency."

Single head patrol is per se, no guarantee of efficiency, and the more complex and varied the functions under one head the greater the problems of management. In this case, where the functions differ essentially, the advantages of such control progressively deteriorate.

3. "Merger permits placement of emphasis, in the proportion to the need, on each control function."

The proper balancing of control functions is extremely difficult, since they differ so greatly in application that it is doubted that such balance has been realized at any time since the department was organized. Proper balance of control activities requires full technical knowledge of the program and procedures of each division and an entirely objective approach.

4. "Single departmental operation promotes economy by: (1) permitting joint use of housing facilities and other equipment and (2) makes it possible for work load peaks of one division to be absorbed partially by personnel of other divisions."

Joint use of state offices may be desirable, especially if facilities meet the several demands. This practice could continue under any organizational arrangement.

The equipment requirements of any enforcement agency are essentially different from those of driver licensing and vehicle registration especially in field operations, where dual use of equipment would result in confusion and inefficiency affecting all units concerned.

In the matter of distribution of work loads, insofar as clerical staff is concerned, there may be occasions when permanent personnel of one division may be used to absorb the peak loads of another division. However, the work loads in patrol offices are more uniform than are those of the other two divisions with the resultant inequitable loan of officers to perform duties of the other divisions.

5. "A single department permits better coordination of services to city, county and other state agencies."

Such cooperation results from efforts of the individual divisions. Separation should not result in the diminution of such cooperative effort.

6. "Consolidation results in greater public convenience."

This is true in the field, since the three functions frequently are jointly housed. This arrangement may well be continued. The functions, however, should be separated administratively. In many patrol areas, the captain now has certain responsibilities for driver licensing and registration, and other officers devote an appreciable amount of patrol time to licensing and registration duties to the detriment of the public service in providing adequate highway patrol coverage.

7. "The patrol arm can aid and assist in the over-all program of motor vehicle control."

This is universally recognized and was, of course, the basic reason for the organization of the patrol. Such assistance, however, is not predicated upon absorption of the patrol by another department performing related functions.

Although the patrol was established originally to regulate and control traffic upon rural highways it was saddled early with the title of Enforcement Division and with the duties pertaining thereto. Experience in California has proved once again that where the enforcement agency is so organizationally merged with nonenforcement agencies it becomes a service unit for such other agencies. This produces a major drain on enforcement personnel; strength is dissipated instead of being centered on basic and specific responsibilities assigned by law.

A review, necessarily brief, of the present organizational position of the patrol indicates that the present organizational pattern has hindered operations.

Since establishment of the patrol in 1929 divided authority has cast an unfortunate cloud over sound leadership. Unquestionably, division of responsibility for patrol operation over a period of years has gone far in reducing patrol administration to a level detrimental to the public safety.

Conflicting issues arising from the dual nature of control have resulted from many causes but fundamentally they spring from the difficulties of compromising policy making and administration. It will be recalled that when the patrol was organized, its leadership was vested in the Director of Public Works. Two years later when motor vehicle operations were separated from public works control, the Director of the Department of Motor Vehicles became titular head of the patrol and the chief of the patrol became his subordinate. Then in 1933, on recommendation of the California Code Commission which drafted the California Vehicle Code, administrative authority, with certain reservations, was transferred to the chief of the patrol. At that time the conflicting authorities of director and chief were compromised with this philosophy of management: "It may be conceded that the Director of the Department of Motor Vehicles is directly in charge of the Chief of the California Highway Patrol and as such exercises all authority over the patrol. On the other hand, the patrol is so organized that the chief is regarded as its head."

This dual nature of command continued, with all the difficulties it entailed, until 1937. With establishment of civil service, an effort was made again to clarify the question of patrol leadership. The Director of Motor Vehicles then attempted to bring control of the patrol within his office by appointing the chief as his confidential officer, a position then exempt from civil service. The Attorney General ruled, however, that the office of chief came within civil service; consequently the chief continued as the principal administrator of patrol action. This situation prevailed through ever-increasing perplexities until 1945. At that time the Legislature transferred administrative control over the patrol from the chief to the director.

The Attorney General has been called upon frequently by both the director and chief, to clarify the relationship between them. This relationship would, of necessity, change with each legislative action.

Frequent attempts by the Legislature to remedy this situation have been laudable, and its failure has been understandable. The failure does not stem from personnel or inability to devise a workable combination, but from the fact that the system is wrong. The attempt to divide authority between the director and the chief is organizationally and administratively unsound.

The national trend is to place the state enforcement agency in a separate unit of the State Government; arguments advanced to justify placement within a department of motor vehicles or other department do not stand up. Certainly the history of the California Highway Patrol plainly indicates that the present position of the patrol hinders its proper administration. Therefore, it is recommended that the patrol be separated from the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The California Highway Patrol Commission

It is recommended that the patrol be placed under a commission of five persons, appointed by the Governor, that they serve staggered terms whereby one member of the commission will be appointed each year and that reappointment be permissible.

The present organization of the State Government justifies the creation of a Patrol Commission. In considering 47 of the more important boards and commissions, we find that 16 are composed of five members and that the members are appointed by the Governor in 20 cases. Hence there is ample precedent for these recommendations.

Responsibilities. Considerable care should be used in the allocation of the commission's duties and responsibilities, as well as in the exercise of the powers and obligations it will assume. Only the first of these considerations will be discussed here. The confusion and inadequacy under the present organization must not be carried over into a commission type of control. Areas of authority and responsibility for both the commission and the chief must be carefully designated.

Fundamentally, the actions of the commission should be limited to a statement of objectives and program planning; the chief should have the authority to command all resources—personnel, equipment and facilities—in order to attain his objectives.

The commission should not have administrative power as such but should determine policy. Complete administrative responsibility must rest with the chief.

Here again precedent justifies our recommendation. Of 33 major state agencies 28 are administered by an executive and only five by a board or commission. In the latter cases they are composed of full-time, paid members.

The following duties are indicative, but not all-inclusive, of those which should be performed by the commission.

1. It should approve the patrol budget before it is submitted to the state financial officers. The right to approve, of course, implies the power to disapprove which should be true in this instance.
2. It should formulate patrol objectives. The power to determine objectives means authority to determine the development and effectiveness of the patrol.
3. Program planning. This refers only to the direction in which patrol activities should develop. The manner in which this development is affected and the procedures and techniques followed are matters for the chief.
4. Program evaluation. The commission should have the right, at any time, to request information and data covering any phase of patrol operations. Certain regular summaries and analyses should be prepared by various staff units of the patrol and copies should be forwarded to members of the commission. If the commission wishes to learn of other matters, it should request this information.

This also implies the right to be informed concerning the manner in which policies, formulated by the commission, are being carried out.

However, it does not give to the commission the privilege of dictating to the chief the procedures and techniques to be used in the field nor does it mean the right to interfere with policies and directives sent to the field governing patrol operations. At this point the spheres of authority of the commission and the chief must be clearly understood. Otherwise, the present undesirable situation simply would be continued in a new form. The commission may determine the direction of patrol action, and formulate major objectives, whereas the administration of the patrol and the manner by which objectives are reached are the responsibility of the chief.

Until the commission can be established, and while the patrol remains a part of the Department of Motor Vehicles, the above relationships could exist by substituting the word "Director" for "Commission." The above statements then indicate the relationship which we recommend should exist between the director and the chief.

It becomes increasingly obvious that these relationships must be based upon something more than friendliness and good will. The commission must have sufficient authority over the chief to make sure that its policies will be carried out. If the chief retains his full civil service status he will not, in any direct manner, be amenable to the commission. It is therefore recommended that:

1. Appointment to fill a vacancy in the position of Chief of the Highway Patrol shall be made by the Governor upon nomination by the commission.
2. The Chief of the Highway Patrol may be removed from office, for cause, by the commission.

As the commission would not be a full-time, administrative body but would meet only at regular times, there would be a distinct need for a full-time, salaried executive secretary. Among his duties should be:

1. The keeping of minutes of all meetings of the commission.
2. The collection of information relating to commission activities; and transmittal of such information to the commissioners.
3. To serve as the avenue through which commission activities are carried on with the chief.
4. To perform other official duties as may be directed by the commission.

The executive secretary should have no power or authority in his own name except as he represents the commission. Because of this fact he should be appointed by, and be subject to removal by, the commission. However, the position should be of considerable importance and the Legislature should attach to it such a salary as will attract capable, well qualified persons.

Recommendations Regarding the Positioning of the Patrol

It is recommended that:

1. The patrol be separated from the Department of Motor Vehicles and be established as a separate department of the State Government.

2. The patrol be placed under a commission of five, appointed by the Governor; that they serve staggered terms and that reappointment be permissible.

3. Specific authority and responsibility for patrol administration be delegated to the Patrol Commission and the chief of the patrol.

4. Appointment to fill a vacancy in the position of Chief of the Highway Patrol be made by the Patrol Commission.

5. The Chief of the Highway Patrol shall be removed from office, for cause, by the Patrol Commission.

6. The Patrol Commission be empowered to appoint a full-time, salaried executive secretary.

7. Sections 102, 103, 106, 108, 113, 116, 124, 126, 128 of the Vehicle Code be revised to conform to the above recommendations.

8. Legislation be enacted governing the appointment and tenure of the chief of the patrol on a noncivil service basis in keeping with the above recommendations; this will include the amendment of Section 111 of the Vehicle Code.

B. PATROL DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Following is a review of the major duties delegated to the patrol either by legislative action or departmental regulation, with evaluation of each assignment. Such an evaluation and recommendation thereon is essential to the subsequent discussion of the organization and operation of patrol headquarters.

Vehicle Code Sec. 44. Authorized Emergency Vehicle. The chief of the patrol is granted specific duties and authority relating to the issuance of emergency vehicle permits. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 133. Seizure of Documents and Plates. This authority is given the department, but has been exercised by the patrol only upon notice from the director. Although this results in servicing "briefs" issued by the other two divisions of the department, and accounts for some officer time, it can best be performed by officers. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 135. Police Authority of Members of the California Highway Patrol. This section grants to patrol officers the power of peace officers, but only in enforcement of the provisions of the Vehicle Code and other acts respecting the use or operation of vehicles upon public highways and in certain other specified cases, all relating to the use of the highways. This authority is essential to effective work in traffic control and accident prevention and should be retained by the patrol.

Sec. 135e. All members of the California Highway Patrol shall have the power to serve warrants relating to the enforcement of this code. Patrol officers should have the power to serve warrants but this power should be limited to warrants which may result from patrol enforcement action. This section should be revised to empower members of the patrol to serve warrants issued as a result of patrol action in the enforcement of this code.

Sec. 135.5. Investigation of Accidents by Highway Patrol. This section grants to members of the patrol the authority to investigate accidents resulting in personal injury or death and to gather evidence for the purpose of prosecuting for violations contributing to such accidents. This authority should be extended to cover all traffic accidents.

Sec. 135.8. Reporting Damage to Fences. Members of the patrol shall report any observed damage to any fence along any highway. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 220. Police Reports of Stolen and Recovered Vehicles. The duty to maintain certain records of stolen and recovered vehicles is placed upon the department but has been assigned to the patrol. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 221. Reports by Owners of Stolen and Recovered Vehicles. This is a similar situation to that existent under Sec. 220. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 222. Action by Department on Report of Stolen or Embezzled Vehicle. The patrol maintains records of stolen or embezzled vehicles but all activity concerning registration and, or transfer of ownership is performed by the department. This arrangement should be continued.

Sec. 489. Department to Tabulate and Analyze Accident Reports. The tabulation of accident reports and the summarizing and dissemination of statistical data should remain a departmental responsibility. The analysis of accident data should be performed by other governmental units as required by their specific needs. The patrol should analyze accident and enforcement data for the purpose of evaluating past performance and planning future activities; the Division of Highways should study accident data for engineering purposes; the Department of Public Instruction should analyze accident information for use in safety educational activities; the Division of Driver Licenses may require special studies of accident prone drivers, etc. It is recommended that the department continue to tabulate accident data and prepare routine and special summaries desired by other interested governmental units having traffic control responsibilities. It also is urged that the Department of Motor Vehicles, the Highway Patrol, the Division of Highways (or the Department of Public Works) be authorized to conduct such further analysis so as to determine more fully the cause and control of highway accidents, and to conduct experimental field tests to prove the practicability of various ideas advanced in traffic control and accident prevention in their respective area of responsibility.

Sec. 606. Policing of Vehicular Crossings by Highway Patrol. This section extends the highway to include certain bridges, making the patrol responsible for the regulation of traffic thereon. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 651. Test of Light Equipment Regulating Light Emitted from Light Sources. This, and following sections, make the department responsible for setting certain standards and for approving vehicular lighting equipment, thereby assuring that such devices used on vehicles are of approved design and efficiency. This activity has been delegated to the patrol. However, the setting of such standards and the approval of such devices, not being enforcement functions, should be performed by the department. The patrol should enforce the provisions of the code relative to all safety devices and/or the standards set by the department.

The same principle should be made to apply to other vehicle safety devices and appliances.

Sec. 663. Members of Highway Patrol May Inspect Lamps. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 665. Official Lamp and Brake Testing Stations. The department is granted authority to designate, furnish instructions to, and supervise official stations for adjusting vehicular light equipment and brakes. These activities have been delegated to the patrol. Modern practice establishes these as functions of the Department of Motor Vehicles, outside the policing sphere. The department should perform this duty as soon as it is provided with the necessary field staff. Until this time the work should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 675.5. Safety Glass Required. The department is required to approve types of safety glass that may be used in cars registered within the State. The patrol has been performing this duty. In accordance with discussion of Section 651, it is recommended that this responsibility revert to the department.

Sec. 680. Members of Highway Patrol May Inspect Vehicle and Its Equipment. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Sec. 709. Officers May Weigh Vehicles and Enforce Removal of Excess Loads. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Caravan Act (Chapter 788, Statutes of 1937, revised). It is recommended that the department handle all functions relating to the issuance of caravan permits and that the patrol apprehend and prosecute violators of this act.

School Busses—Educational Code 16262. (Chapter 71, Statutes 1943.) The patrol is required to enforce all regulations adopted by the Department of Education and approved by the chief of the patrol, relating to the construction, design, operation, equipment and color of school busses. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Trailer Camps and Trailer Coaches. Health and Safety Code, Division 13, Part 2. (Chapter 60, Statutes of 1939.) The Highway Patrol enforces Section 18602, which prohibits the overnight parking or camping of trailer coaches upon any public highway, including the right of way. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Vending from Roads and Roadways. Streets and Highways Code, Section 731. The patrol enforces the provisions which prohibit the vending of any article from a vehicle or structure which is wholly or partly within any state highway. This should continue as a duty of the patrol.

Itinerant Merchants. Business and Professions Code, Division 7, Part 1. (Chapter 4, Article 2, Section 16346.) This article requires itinerant merchants to carry their licenses when itinerant and to display such licenses upon demand by a member of the patrol. While this act is not a highway regulation, the display of such licenses aids driver identification and this duty should remain with the patrol.

These, then, are among the major responsibilities given the patrol by legislative action and departmental regulation. Basically, the patrol has complete and exclusive¹ authority to enforce the provisions of the Vehicle Code; to regulate the use and operation of motor vehicles upon the highways; to determine that these vehicles are in safe operating condition; to insure an individual's right to vehicle ownership and to insure, by enforcement action, the free and uninterrupted use of the highways. That these basic functions may be performed with vigor and effectiveness, it is recommended that:

1. The patrol retain those duties and responsibilities now delegated to it, the performance of which will increase the safety of motor vehicle operation or the efficiency of highway use; the following sections remaining unchanged:

- a. Vehicle Code Sections: 44; 135-a, b, c, d, f; 135.8; 606; 663; 680; 709.
- b. Education Code 16272, Chapter 71, Statutes of 1943.
- c. Health and Safety Code, Division 13, Part 2.
- d. Streets and Highways Code, Section 731.

2. Duties now given the department be delegated specifically to the patrol. These are contained in the following sections of the Vehicle Code:

- a. Sections 133, 135e, 220, 221, 665.

3. The following sections be amended as follows:

- a. Vehicle Code Section 135.5—the authority of members of the Highway Patrol be extended to include all traffic accidents.
- b. Vehicle Code Section 222—the patrol maintain records of stolen or embezzled vehicles but all activities concerning registration and/or transfer of ownership remain a departmental function.
- c. Vehicle Code Section 489—the responsibility for tabulating accident data and preparing routine and special summaries desired by other interested governmental agencies having traffic control responsibilities rest with the Department of Motor Vehicles; said department, the Highway Patrol, the Division of Highways (or the Department of Public Works), the Department of Public Instruction, be authorized to conduct further analysis and necessary detailed research to determine more fully the cause and control of highway accidents, and to conduct experimental field tests as desired to prove the practicability of various ideas advanced in traffic control and accident prevention, within their respective area of responsibility.
- d. Business and Professions Code, Division 7, Part 1. (Chapter 4, Article 2, Section 16346.) This should continue as patrol duty.

C. ORGANIZATION OF PATROL HEADQUARTERS

Effective employment of patrol facilities and personnel requires that the chief have complete, current information in usable form on the problems facing the patrol. This means that he have enough assistance from qualified personnel to prepare information to map plans and programs for patrol operations, to handle the operational details of patrol headquarters, to provide in general for effective performance. Staff assistance is essential to the operation of any large, decentralized organization. An inadequate or poorly operated headquarters staff places an impossible administrative burden upon the executive. Inefficiency in field operations results. The California Highway Patrol is now inadequately staffed at headquarters. Chart I shows the recommended organization of patrol headquarters; a brief discussion of the major points follows:

Assistant Chief. It is recommended that the position of assistant chief be continued, and filled; that he act as a chief of staff, directing, coordinating and commanding all staff activities and staff personnel in keeping with policies of the chief; that he be not in the line of command except in the absence of the chief.

Headquarters Staff Bureaus. It is recommended that three staff bureaus be created: the Bureau of Personnel and Training, the Bureau of Operations, and the Bureau of Communications and Equipment, each to function under the command of an inspector.

This will decrease the number of bureaus and will group staff functions according to type of activity. Thus, the Bureau of Personnel and Training would perform duties relating to the control of patrol officers; the Bureau of Operations would be responsible for planning and evaluation of patrol operations including the dissemination of information and instructions to the field; and the Bureau of Communications and Equipment would provide control over property, equipment and communications.

Bureau of Personnel and Training

The problems of personnel and training are so inter-related and the administration of each is so complementary that they may be combined successfully under one bureau director.

Training. This important staff function is essential to the development and maintenance of a training program which will insure operating effectiveness by training and indoctrinating each member in the patrol's own school.

Personnel. As a separate department of the State Government the patrol would maintain all records pertaining to patrol personnel. Personnel activities performed by this bureau should include:

1. The maintenance of personnel records and files.
2. Supervision of personnel rating forms and procedures.
3. Investigations of all patrol personnel.
4. Reassignment of personnel for the good of the service, or as called for in programs developed by a Bureau of Operations.

RECOMMENDED ORGANIZATION OF PATROL HEADQUARTERS

Bureau of Operations

Fundamental activities of this bureau should include:

1. Maintenance and analysis of records pertaining to patrol operations.
2. Development of operational programs.
3. Checking program progress to determine validity; program revision, where indicated by such analysis.
4. Determination of standards and procedures for field operations.
5. Supplying information to officers in the field and to the public.

Although the activities to be directed by this bureau have been performed by the patrol for some years, the activities and responsibilities of one unit therein warrant special notice.

Operating Records, Analysis and Information. Recording and analytical duties, if properly performed, will furnish the foundation for the programming of patrol activities on an integrated basis whereby all field units are coordinated so that personnel and equipment are gainfully employed in the attainment of common objectives determined by the headquarters staff by analysis of accident reports and other traffic data originating in the field. This unit is therefore of great basic importance to the development of an effective enforcement program, predicated upon the demonstrated public need.

Bureau of Communications and Equipment

Although these activities differ they are both supporting functions and can, for the present at least, be supervised by one commanding officer. Development of the state-wide patrol radio net recommended later in this report will increase materially the responsibilities of the commanding officer of this bureau. Eventually, separation of these two units may be required.

Chart I indicates the minimum number of officers recommended for each bureau as well as their proposed rank. The qualification of officers assigned to these positions is more important than the rank they hold.

The staff integrity of these bureaus must be maintained; otherwise, they will not provide the service which is intended. Their basic functions should be:

1. Planning, program development, service and support so that the field may operate effectively.
2. Formation of directives which, when approved by the chief, go to the field as orders.
3. Regular visits to the field to inspect, consult, advise and report, but not command.

It shall be the responsibility of the assistant chief to coordinate and direct these bureaus within the limits of departmental policies.

Certain headquarters activities necessarily must be performed directly from the chief's office; these should be the responsibility of an adjutant and a legal advisor, as discussed below:

Adjutant

It is recommended that the position of adjutant (staff aide) be continued, with his responsibilities as follows:

1. To draft and transmit to all patrol officers or units the orders, directives and other communications as approved by the chief.
2. To expedite the handling of all official correspondence.
3. To supervise the budget officer, who may be a civilian.
4. To act as personal aid to the chief.
5. To manage the details of the chief's office.

Legal Advisor

Patrol headquarters receives many requests from the field for legal information. A prompt reply from a qualified source will improve the quality of the work performed in the field. At present such questions are answered by uniformed officers in headquarters, frequently by heads of the interested bureaus. The fact that answers have been of such high quality is a credit to these officers, but those questions which pertain solely to interpretation of the law should be answered by counsel. It is recommended that the position of legal advisor be established and that a representative of the Attorney General be assigned to the patrol for this purpose.

Recommendations Regarding Patrol Headquarters

It is recommended that:

1. The assistant chief be responsible directly to the chief for the coordination and direction of headquarters staff functions and personnel.

2. Three staff bureaus be created: The Bureau of Personnel and Training, the Bureau of Operations, and the Bureau of Communications and Equipment.

3. An inspector responsible directly to the assistant chief, be assigned to command each staff bureau.

4. In the assignment of officers to these bureaus, the following is recommended as the minimum personnel necessary for effective performance:

A. Bureau of Personnel and Training:

1. Personnel—1 captain.
2. Training—1 captain and 1 sergeant.

B. Bureau of Operations:

1. Operating Records, Analysis and Information—3 captains and 2 sergeants.

2. Commercial Vehicle Enforcement and Inspection Stations—1 captain and 2 sergeants.
3. School Bus Inspection and Emergency Vehicles—1 sergeant.
4. Auto Theft, Caravan Enforcement, Impounded Vehicles and Laboratory—1 captain and 3 sergeants.

C. Bureau of Communications and Equipment:

1. Communications—1 captain.
2. Equipment and Supplies—1 sergeant.

5. In assigning officers to staff activities the qualification of officers be given greater weight than their present rank.

6. The position of staff aide, or adjutant, be retained with this officer responsible for the functioning of the budget officer and the chief clerk.

7. The position of legal advisor be created and that it be filled by a representative of the Attorney General's office.

8. Section 106 of the Vehicle Code be amended to permit the chief of the patrol to appoint and, with the approval of the Department of Finance, fix the salaries of such officers, deputies, technical experts and employees as may be necessary for the proper discharge of the duties of the patrol.

9. Legislation be enacted authorizing the chief of the patrol to organize the patrol in such manner as he may deem necessary in order to carry out the responsibilities of the patrol as determined by the Legislature and the Patrol Commission. This requires amendment of Section 108, Vehicle Code.

.D. FIELD ORGANIZATION

Organization is the grouping of related functions for the attainment of a common purpose; geographically, it is division of the force into units in a manner that will promote the efficient and economical attainment of such purpose.

Four principles of organization are worthy of special consideration here. First, the patrol should be so organized that lines of authority and responsibility are distinct throughout the entire organization. The most effective means of providing for uniformity and integration of activity is through the strategic placement of command and subordinate personnel with definite lines of authority.

Second, officers having similar command and responsibility should have corresponding rank and authority.

Third, in evaluating the organization of a state enforcement agency, problems of geography and topography must be considered. In California this problem of geography is a primary determining factor.

Fourth, the span of administrative control never should be expanded beyond workable limits. Experience indicates that, with rare exceptions, an administrator cannot supervise effectively the activities of more than six to eight subordinates.

There are now two levels of field command in the patrol—captains commanding patrol areas and district inspectors supervising patrol activities in district areas. The latter is composed of two or more patrol areas. (Chart II)

In evaluating organizational problems constantly facing the patrol administrator, it is clear that centralization demands considerable attention. Believing that centralized control over all patrol operations is essential, the question arises—how far is it necessary and/or practical to decentralize authority and responsibility?

Centralization often results in remote control of field operations especially in distant parts of the State; contact between the headquarters and the local area commander is very infrequent. This is the present situation. The tendency of the enforcement unit is thus to divide into several parts, each operating more or less independently. This situation should be arrested, establishment of a position of command level between the office of chief and that of district inspector—namely a supervising inspector commanding a division containing several district commands.

Patrol Areas

The county always has been considered, both by the public and many members of the patrol, as the basic organizational unit for patrol operations. Historically and politically this has been the policy. However, the traffic problem does not coincide with political boundaries. A departure from the county area concept of organization is essential to operational efficiency and development of the patrol.

The patrol command long has been aware of the defects in making the county the basic patrol area. In 1939, the boundaries of patrol areas were established on the basis of public need and operating efficiency; county patrol areas in some cases were united and in others divided for purposes of competent administration and the number of patrol areas reduced from 60 to 50, with a corresponding reduction of command personnel. In November, 1945, these changes were rescinded, apparently for considerations other than the good of the service. We recognize that the present organizational situation cannot be remedied at once. However, it is recommended that, as rapidly as possible, the boundaries of patrol areas be determined upon the basis of need, considering the highway system, the traffic problems existing thereon, topography and efficient administrative control.

A captain commands each patrol area. It is essential that his authority should be commensurate with his responsibility and that the extent of each should be understood specifically both by himself and all others concerned. The captain directing the front line activities of the patrol should be familiar with the entire battle plan as it affects him; he should be assisted by staff direction and information and yet have enough authority to realign and redirect his forces to meet shifting or emergency problems. He should also be aided by a sufficient number of qualified supervisors and patrolmen to ensure smooth functioning operation.

PRESENT FIELD ORGANIZATION OF THE CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY PATROL

Patrol Districts

The State is divided into 14 administrative districts, each comprising two or more patrol areas. There is a 15th district, the commander of which directs technical enforcement and investigations within Los Angeles County and its contiguous areas. District inspectors are assigned as commanders of the districts.

The California Highway Patrol Manual outlines the duties of the district inspector in these terms: "Upon him shall rest the full responsibility and authority for the operation and conduct of the patrol in his respective district" and "He shall regulate, plan, and manage operations throughout his district by issuing orders to his captains. * * *" It is recommended that the position of the district inspector be defined and clarified in accordance with the following:

1. Upon him shall rest the responsibility and authority for the operation and conduct of the patrol within his district, subject to (a) orders of his superiors and (b) policies and orders of the office of the chief.

2. He shall plan the operations of the various squads in his command; manage and coordinate operations by acting through the squad commanders; and review and revise plans and operational procedures—but only within the limits of his authority, in keeping with patrol policies and orders from higher authorities. It is also recommended that the districts be reduced to a number consistent with good administration.

Patrol Divisions

Normally, a chief should contact subordinates often to know them well, understand the problems of each district and give them direction, assistance and encouragement. A dilemma arises, however, when a chief must direct and supervise as many as 15 field commanders as well as the supervising inspector in charge of staff operations. This is the situation in the California Highway Patrol. It violates the accepted principle of organization that no administrator can supervise competently the activities of more than six to eight assistants. The administrative weaknesses resulting are critical; the fact is that it is impossible for the chief to adequately administer field operations. Even if these 16 assistants were situated at one place so as to be most accessible, the amount of work involved and the diversity of their problems would prevent the chief from giving necessary administrative direction. The size and topography of the State alone prevents one man from contacting inspectors often enough.

The chief should not be burdened with directly supervising field operations; other duties relating to directing, planning and evaluating patrol operations put ample burden upon his time and energy.

The report submitted to the California Highway Patrol by this organization in 1940 urged that another level of field command be established between the chief and district inspectors. The experience of the patrol since that time has strengthened this position.

Partly because of the above recommendation and partly because of the increase in the number and severity of patrol problems during the war, a third level of field command was created. Orders from the office of the chief on October 31, 1944, effective November 10, 1944, established three "Field Sector Commands," each to be under a supervising inspector. A study of this basic change in patrol organization indicates two interesting results. First—criticism, which in some instances was stimulated by considerations other than the good of the service. Second—the longer the plan operated the more effective it became. However, orders issued on November 13, 1945, effective November 15, 1945, abolished the sector commands. We regard this as an unfortunate and retrogressive action operating to the detriment of the public welfare.

It is again recommended that the level of command of supervising inspector be established between the chief and district inspectors.

The recommendations call for creating offices of field command. Supervising inspectors in these positions would represent the chief in directing, supervising, coordinating and inspecting patrol operations in their respective commands. They also would exercise, within certain defined limits, the authority of the chief in developing patrol efficiency. In short, they would direct and review activities in accordance with patrol policies. The position of a division commander with the patrol organization, his basic duties, responsibilities and authority must be stated specifically and understood fully if he is to function effectively.

The size and topography of the State and the relative concentration of problems requiring patrol attention, make it mandatory that three divisions be organized for effective field control. (See Map I.) Division headquarters should be located centrally in view of the area, problems, communications, transportation and geography.

The supervising inspector must be in the field a considerable portion of the time if he is to adequately perform his duties. He must, therefore, have the assistance of a small number of uniform and clerical personnel to evaluate data and reports submitted by the field and to put them into usable form; to supervise and study operating conditions and needs within the division so the supervising inspector may be equipped to intelligently inform headquarters of his problems and needs and in turn to ensure field performance in accordance with headquarters directives.

It has been recommended that the chief be responsible for management of the patrol. We take the position that responsibility should be centralized in the office of the chief (but that certain defined authority must be delegated to subordinates, i.e., supervising inspectors.)

Headquarters staff will be responsible for receiving, studying and analyzing all information from the field; developing programs for the field; checking performances and results against plans and policies; preparing plans to increase patrol effectiveness; coordinating the patrol program with the official state traffic control program; and maintaining routine office functions. With the assistance of such a staff, properly directed and coordinated, the chief will be in a position to command and administer the patrol in an effective manner.

For proper field administration the chief must delegate authority and responsibility to the various levels of field command. The supervising inspectors should be in frequent contact—at least bi-weekly—with the chief, and should be responsible to him. As the immediate superiors of the district inspectors, they should have the authority to insure full application of patrol policies.

RAND McNALLY

LOOSE LEAF OUTLINE MAP

District inspectors, the immediate superiors of the captains, should have the authority to supervise and command the work of the captains and to coordinate activities within their districts.

The captains have immediate supervision over the men assigned to their squad areas and should have the authority to enforce high quality performance.

Sergeants should not be commanding officers. Their primary function will be to provide field supervision necessary for efficient officer performance.

Thus a definite line of command would be drawn from the chief to the traffic officer, with specific duties, authority and responsibilities delegated to each level. For efficient operation and officer morale, such a chain of authority should be maintained. Obviously, attempts to by-pass any level of command on official matters should not be tolerated.

RECOMMENDATIONS

It is recommended that:

1. The patrol be reorganized to include three levels of field command: Supervising inspector, district inspector and captain.
2. The State be divided into three patrol divisions: Southern Division, Coastal Division and Central Division, as shown on Map I, in this report.
3. Supervising inspectors be assigned to command patrol divisions.
4. Supervising inspectors be provided with offices and limited office personnel.
5. District inspectors continue to command patrol districts.
6. Patrol districts be reduced to the smallest number consistent with service to their areas.
7. Captains continue to command squad areas.
8. The boundaries of squad areas be determined on the basis of efficient operation, disregarding county lines.
9. Squad areas be reduced to the smallest number consistent with efficient field operations.
10. The position of sergeant be continued.
11. The Highway Patrol Manual be revised to state specifically the authority and responsibility of each level of command.
12. The chief assume full responsibility for patrol management.

SECTION II

Personnel Administration

Following the subject of organization, the following section will deal with specific recommendations on man power, personnel management and equipment needs. Topics will be discussed in that order.

A. PERSONNEL STRENGTH

The list of duties and responsibilities delegated to the patrol indicates the broad scope of patrol activities and demonstrates that it is intended to be a strong and effective agency in the prevention of traffic accidents and the control of vehicular traffic. Full effectiveness will be realized only when the patrol has enough personnel strength, properly assigned by area and time, and efficiently directed and supervised. While direction and supervision result largely from internal administration, personnel strength is distinctly a legislative consideration.

The personnel recommended herein has been determined on the basis of the number of officers required to effectively perform the duties now assigned to the patrol. Since September, 1940, the patrol has used an Officers' Activity Report on which each officer records the time spent upon certain activities.¹ Table VI shows the average yearly number of officer hours used on each activity for the 1941-1945 period. A study of patrol operations and field conditions reveals that two situations existed—1, there is heavy competition for officer time with the result that 2, sufficient man-hours cannot be assigned to any one activity to permit proper performance.

Table VI also indicates the minimum number of hours which we conclude are reasonable for creditable performance. Under Item 1, Patrol Duty, we have included only the minimum time necessary for two activities—on-scene accident investigation and traffic law enforcement.

TABLE VI

No attempt has been made here, or under any other item, to include the time required for actual patrolling of the highways. The method used to compute the number of officers needed for accident investigation and enforcement is essentially the same as employed in our 1940 report on the Highway Patrol.²

It has been estimated that the minimum acceptable performance of these duties will require the expenditure of 3,598,647 officer-hours. This is equivalent to 1,233 officers working eight hours every day of the year. Officers are not constantly on duty because of days off, holidays (actually, time is taken off for each holiday worked), vacation, sickness, injury and suspension. Each officer is off duty approximately 26.5 percent of the time. Following our practice of citing minimum figures, we use the corrected figure of 1.25 indicating a need for 1,542 officers.

² See Exhibits, pages 205-206, for explanation of methods used.

This should be considered the minimum number of officers required. No attempt has been made to adjust personnel needs to the demands of highway coverage or to provide for 24-hour coverage of highways even where fully warranted by traffic volume and accidents.

Total Personnel. A headquarters staff of 23 officers has been recommended. Field command should include three supervising inspectors, 14 district inspectors and 55 captains. Thus, a total commissioned personnel strength of 1,637 is recommended.

The immediate need for controlling serious problems now facing the patrol warrants an early increase in patrol strength. Recruits should not be added to the patrol, however, faster than they can be properly assimilated. It is suggested that further recruiting be launched as soon as possible and that the patrol call up qualified applicants for training in classes not to exceed 50.

B. PERSONNEL CONTROL

The patrol administrator should establish the organizational framework which will carry out planned objectives while providing within this framework the levels of command and assigning personnel wisely. Patrol administrative authority and responsibility should be clearly established. Then management can turn its full attention to the development of effective plans that will advance the objectives of the organization.

Recruitment

Medical Examination. No applicant for the position of traffic officer should be considered unless he is in fine physical condition. While the State Personnel Board agrees with this position, applicants may now submit a certificate of physical examination signed by a private physician. Many states refuse to accept such certificates and require candidates to undergo a thorough examination under supervision of the State Board of Health. It is recommended that this procedure be adopted in California; that before an eligible list for the position of traffic officer is prepared, all candidates be given complete medical examinations conducted or supervised by the State Board of Health. Failure to meet specified standards should disqualify the applicant.

Age Limits. Under Section 18932 of the Government Code (Statutes of 1945, Chapter 123) the Personnel Board may not establish minimum or maximum age limits for any civil service examination, except in positions involving public health or safety. For these the board may set a minimum age limit, which, for the position of traffic officer is 21. A maximum age limit cannot be set and the board is forced to rely upon the severity of physical tests to eliminate men in higher age levels.

A study of the ages of present patrol personnel shows that the board has not been highly successful in eliminating older applicants. Table VII reveals that although 318 traffic officers have been on the patrol four years or less, only 32 are less than 30 years of age and seven of them were over 40 when appointed.

Many considerations support the setting of both minimum and maximum age limits. For example, a maximum limit permits longer individual service; it attracts men before they become established in other professions; it discourages older men who have failed in other vocations and who might be attracted to the service for security reasons and it draws men eager to advance in the profession who are more adaptable to training and direction.

Enforcement officers should be selected from the 21-29 age bracket. It is recommended that applications for the position of traffic officer from men less than 21 or more than 29 years of age not be considered. Section 18932 of the Government Code (Statutes of 1945, Chapter 123) should be amended accordingly to permit the Personnel Board to establish both minimum and maximum age limits for civil service examinations in positions involving public health or safety.

Applicant Investigation. Section 18930 of the Government Code permits the board to determine the qualifications of applicants for state services. Examinations may be of different types including investigation of character, personality, education and experience. Thus, the Personnel Board is granted wide latitude in establishing the kind of examination necessary to recruit capable personnel. It has not as yet taken full advantage of the right to conduct or order character investigations of applicants before placing them in the patrol eligible list. It is recommended that this step be taken.

Examination subject matter. Some attention is given by the board to testing an applicant's knowledge of police techniques and skills. The success or failure of the applicant should in no way depend upon such knowledge. Rather, the examinations should disclose, or tend to disclose, his mental competence and stability, his attitudes, abilities and physical condition. It is the duty of the board to turn over to the patrol the best raw material; it should be the task of the patrol to fashion this material into capable officers.

Standards now established and practiced by the Personnel Board, augmented by recommendations contained herein, should assure the patrol the highest type of recruit.

Probation

Examinations conducted during the recruitment stage can determine the applicant's physical characteristics, mental abilities and alertness. It is much more difficult to measure the desire to succeed, the courage to proceed in the face of criticism or danger, and such qualities as determination and resourcefulness. Nor can willingness to submerge personal considerations for the betterment of the service be measured beforehand. These attributes are revealed only by performance in the field.

This situation has been recognized by both the Legislature and the Personnel Board. Section 19170 of the Government Code (Statutes 1945, Chapter 123) provides for a probationary period of not less than six months nor more than one year. The board has established a six-month period.

Certainly, the aim of both Legislature and board is to make the probationary period reveal characteristics and abilities which can be adequately tested only by performance. Considerable evidence indicates that the present probationary period is not long enough since, in the first place, one or two months of this period is devoted to the training of the recruit. Obviously, work situations cannot be devised to test specific abilities or attitudes in the relatively brief period of probation remaining.

Within the patrol itself there is considerable belief that the probationary period should last for one year. This attitude results from experience. Too often major defects were not brought to light until after the expiration of the probationary limit.

The national trend in recent years has been to lengthen the probationary stage. It is recommended that it be lengthened to one year in California.

Unless the probationary period is properly used for dismissal of unfit recruits it will serve no practical end. Apparently, full use has not been made of this administrative device, partly because of two operational weaknesses: a. An inadequate personnel rating system; b. Action is taken in too few cases.

The present personnel rating form is considerably better than is the employment of it. Each member of the patrol is rated twice a year by his immediate commanding officer while probationers are rated every two months. Of course, each person who fills out a rating chart has his own standards. While one captain may give valid ratings to the men in his command, he may also employ higher or lower standards than another captain and in this way discriminate for or against his men. This is a weakness inherent in this type of report. The inspector in charge of the bureau of personnel should work with the Personnel Board in developing a rating form that will assure a more uniform analysis of patrol officers.

On many occasions probationers will reveal their unfitness for patrol service. Administrative policy should insist that action be taken to dismiss these men. In many cases mistakes of the probationer may be due to misunderstanding and improper application of principles; with proper supervision and direction the quality of his work should improve. However, since his actions influence the lives and welfare of so many persons continued incompetence should result in dismissal.

Probation has tended to become more or less a formality of civil service procedure because the probationer, under Sections 19174-5 (Statutes of 1945, Chapter 123), has about the same general protection against dismissal as the permanent employee. This condition should be changed. The period of probation should be only a tentative period of service, with severance subject to the will of the appointing authority as provided for in Section 19173. We recommend that insofar as patrol probationers are concerned dismissal be governed exclusively by the provisions of Section 19173 and that Sections 19174-5 not apply; and that the patrol administrator make every effort to insure that only qualified officers become permanent members of the patrol.

Promotion

The California Highway Patrol, an organization of considerable size, operates within a large sphere, both geographically and functionally. Hence the scope and variety of patrol activity, in headquarters and in the field, demonstrates the necessity of having positions of command filled by officers with expert capabilities. Commanding officers should display a wide knowledge of patrol problems, policies, and responsibilities; the ability to direct and supervise men; the ability to make valid decisions; and the ability to direct all functions of their office in an efficient manner. Effective operation of the patrol depends upon the promotion of officers with these abilities.

All positions in the patrol are under State Civil Service. Thus responsibility for promotional procedure rests primarily with the State Personnel Board. The Government Code makes this clear, Section 18950 stating "Vacancies in positions shall be filled insofar as possible and consistent with the best interests of the State, by promotion from among persons holding positions of lower classes, and appropriate promotional eligible lists shall be established to facilitate this purpose." Section 18953 states, "By board rule, competition in promotional examinations may be limited to employees with permanent status who have superior qualifications as shown by their performance reports * * *."

It is a truism to state that the higher the level of command and the greater the authority and responsibility, the more vital is possession of police knowledge, leadership ability and administrative skills. Admittedly, the development of procedures which will disclose such disqualifications is difficult, but it must be accomplished if the patrol is to have quality of command personnel. Knowledge and the growth of abilities, of deep concern to the patrol, may be realized through its training program and through experience in patrol service. The prime responsibility of the Personnel Board lies in the use of methods which will measure the abilities of candidates for promotion. It is recommended that the Personnel Board continue to develop types of promotional examinations which can disclose the qualifications needed by all levels of patrol command.

Personnel Assignment

One of the duties of the patrol administrator is to control and direct patrol effort in a manner that will provide the necessary public security. The law, either now or as recommended, places specific obligations upon the patrol administrator. It is axiomatic that the authority vested in administration must be commensurate with the responsibilities.

The Legislature has also enumerated certain methods by which the patrol shall or may be organized for operation. For example, Sections 124 and 126 of the Vehicle Code states that the patrol administrator:

1. Shall make adequate provision for patrol of the highways at all times, both day and night.
2. May (a) create patrol districts for the efficient administration and enforcement of the code, and (b) adopt rules and regulations relative to all patrol activities.
3. Shall establish—with certain restrictions—headquarters or sub-stations for the efficient performance of patrol duties.

These powers were granted the patrol administrator with the intent of increasing the efficiency of patrol operations. Unfortunately, this design did not determine all legislation affecting patrol administration. In this connection a section of the code prohibits the patrol administrator from exercising a power which is essential to good administration and patrol efficiency.

Section 123 of the Vehicle Code states "No member of the California Highway Patrol, appointed to serve in any county, shall be assigned for service outside said country for a longer period than one week, except:

1. Pursuant to a request of a member for transfer; or
2. As necessitated by temporary traffic emergencies requiring an increase in the number of members in one locality or seasonal changes making expedient a decrease in the number of members in one locality but in such latter events no assignment shall be made for disciplinary purposes.

It is impossible to "make adequate provision for the patrol of the highways at all times" under such a restriction; and it is impossible to shift the forces of control in order to combat the ever changing problems of traffic control. If the patrol administrator is to be held responsible for the smooth operation of the patrol, he must be granted authority to mobilize all the forces at his disposal as he sees fit. Therefore, it is recommended that Section 123 of the Vehicle Code be amended, that restrictions now placed on the power of the administrator in the assignment and transfer of patrol personnel be repealed. However, the right to transfer personnel for disciplinary purposes should be denied.

Discipline

The problem of discipline is of primary importance in personnel management. Discipline is inseparable from morale and high morale aids operational efficiency. Observations made during this study indicate that, on the whole, patrol morale is good. Most expressions of discontent were caused by weaknesses in organization and management. Neither good morale nor discipline are self-sustaining; each must become a full-time objective of administration.

Provisions in effect under Article XXIV of the State Constitution provide for adequate disciplinary action against an employee by the appointing power, and, at the same time, give protection to the employee. These provisions assure maintenance of both high morale and firm discipline. Section 19571 of the Government Code states that punitive action may be taken against any employee or person whose name appears on any employment list. Section 19572 defines acts which are just cause for disciplinary proceedings; for the purpose of patrol discipline they are sufficient and inclusive. Section 19576 provides for the immediate suspension of an employee without pay, pending the filing of charges by the appointing power or any person authorized by him. The appointing power also can maintain discipline through the power to suspend employees. As defined in Section 19501 the appointing power or any officer authorized by him may, for disciplinary purposes, suspend an employee without pay for a period not to exceed 30 days in any calendar year.

Although the control of disciplinary procedures lies primarily within an authority outside the patrol, the rules governing their application are not restrictive. In short, they permit the patrol to initiate disciplinary proceedings.

It will be noticed that provisions of the Personnel Board governing suspension and the filing of charges permit delegation of authority by the appointing power. Thus the patrol administrator may delegate this authority, or portions of it, to officers holding positions of command. A step in this direction already has been taken. General Order 339 provides that a captain of a squad area (upon the approval of his district inspector), or the head of a staff bureau, may suspend an officer for a period not exceeding 10 days. In this case a written report must be forwarded immediately to headquarters. It is recommended that General Order 339 be supplemented by other orders stating specifically the disciplinary authority for each level of patrol command, both in general headquarters and in the field. It is also recommended that the Personnel Board, within the limits of its authority, cooperate with the patrol in its disciplinary measures.

Training

If recommended changes in the present recruitment process are adopted, recruits possessing even higher qualifications than in the past should be selected. Before these men can be assigned to patrol tasks they must receive detailed instruction in all phases of their work. Frequent inspection and evaluation of personnel are necessary. The patrol will be unable to perform its function unless it receives all the advantages which come from an efficient training program.

Section 124 of the Vehicle Code gives the patrol administrator permissive authority to establish "a school for the training and education of the members of the California Highway Patrol in traffic regulation, their duties, and the proper enforcement of this code." Although the Legislature has thus recognized the importance of a patrol training school, the patrol has never received enough legislative support to assure a school of the first calibre.

The patrol has tried to maintain an effective training program, but lack of permanent and adequate training quarters and facilities has handicapped it. Although a full-time training staff was once developed, it was later disbanded in the interests of economy. Even during the war determined efforts were made to continue a training program and all recruits attended school for at least four weeks. However, no in-service training classes have been held for several years.

Of the many factors necessary for a well-rounded patrol training program, the more important will now be discussed.

Full-time training staff. The planning and revising of all curricula; the supervision of all classes; the securing of competent instructors for all subjects; the care of all training equipment and facilities—these are a few of the duties which require the assignment of full-time officers to the training staff.

It has been recommended (page 147) that the inspector in charge of the Bureau of Personnel and Training have at least two officers to assist him with training activities. These officers should be selected because of their interest, qualifications and aptitudes for this type of work.

Housing. Development of a complete training program calls for sufficient building space. One or more buildings of proper construction and arrangement should accommodate staff offices, assembly hall, lecture rooms, trainee living quarters, dining room or cafeteria, locker room, indoor pistol range, gymnasium, equipment and supply space and other activities essential to the program.

The training school should be situated within a reasonable distance of patrol headquarters. The grounds should be ample not only for the erection of the building, or buildings, but for a motorcycle training course, pistol and rifle range, physical recreation areas and automobile storage space.

Sufficient equipment should be provided. Training aids greatly augment the teaching process and help students. A partial list of these aids would include: Moving picture projector, slide film projector, photographic dark-room, sand tables, demonstration rooms, maps, charts, and blackboards.

Types of Courses. The training of an officer is a continuing process, obtained through formal training periods and experience. The school should be based upon this premise, and offer courses to meet the needs not only of the new recruit but also of the seasoned veteran. In this way, it can assist both of them to become more efficient.

Recruit Training. The recruit should receive training in the basic skills and techniques required of a traffic officer. This course should last at least eight weeks. Each student should meet minimum standards of proficiency and deportment in all phases of the training program.

Recruit training classes should not contain more than 50 students.

In-service Training. The very nature of patrol service emphasizes the variety of the work. Duties and responsibilities change; policies and procedures must be modified to meet shifting conditions; the laws themselves are revised and the courts' interpretations vary; new laws are added to the code; and new techniques are developed to meet new situations. The patrol officer must keep abreast of these changes. Squad meetings, conferences, directives and bulletins are helpful but incomplete. There is a definite need for periodic in-service training courses where the officer can sharpen his knowledge and learn of new developments.

Time allotted in-service training depends largely upon the amount of experience and previous training an officer has undergone. Recruits should be called in for a two-week refresher course at the end of their probationary period; all other officers should attend two-week in-service courses every two years.

Separate in-service classes for officers of each rank are preferable. Duties, responsibilities and techniques pertaining to each rank then may be discussed before those who would benefit most from such presentation.

Special Training Courses. Two types of special courses should be available to patrol officers: Those conducted by the patrol training school and those conducted elsewhere.

Members of the patrol can acquire much of the special knowledge, techniques and skills needed in their work from the patrol training school. School bus inspection and commercial vehicle enforcement, for example, come under this heading.

A number of schools throughout the country offer specialized instruction in certain phases of police work. Some of these courses deal with the traffic problem and police control methods. At such schools the officer not only benefits from nation-wide thinking and experience, but discussing common problems with police officers from other sections of the country is distinctly beneficial.

The Training of Local Police Officers. The patrol, of course, is not the only police organization in the State interested in traffic control. Every police department has specific responsibilities for the control of traffic within its jurisdiction. Many of these departments cannot afford to carry on an adequate training program but would be willing to take advantage of the opportunity to send their officers to the patrol training school. The services and facilities of the patrol training school should be available for the training of local police officers. The patrol should also furnish within limits and upon request, competent officers to assist local police in their traffic training programs.

These activities should promote better understanding of common police problems and assist in the development of coordination and uniformity of control effort.

ADMINISTRATION RECOMMENDATIONS

It is recommended that:

1. Patrol strength be increased to 1,542 sergeants and traffic officers for field activities.
2. Twenty-three officers be assigned to the staff bureaus at headquarters.
3. Supervising inspectors command each of the three patrol divisions.
4. District inspectors command each of the 14 geographical districts.
5. Captains command each of the 55 squad areas.

6. Recruits be taken from the eligible list in groups no greater than 50.

7. No name be placed on the eligible list unless the applicant has passed a medical examination given or supervised by the State Board of Health.

8. Minimum and maximum age limits, 21-29 years inclusive, be set for entrance to patrol service, and that Section 18932 of the Government Code (Statutes of 1945, Chapter 123) be revised to so provide.

9. The Personnel Board make a thorough character investigation of each applicant before preparation of the eligible list.

10. The probationary period be lengthened to one year.

11. The Patrol and the Personnel Board cooperate in revising the personnel rating form and in developing a more uniform rating procedure.

12. Probationers who fail to maintain minimum standards of proficiency and conduct, after being assigned to active duty, be dismissed.

13. The Personnel Board continue to study types of promotional examinations which will disclose qualifications needed in all levels of patrol command.

14. Section 123 of the Vehicle Code be amended, retaining only the provision that members of the patrol cannot be transferred for disciplinary purposes only.

15. General orders be issued by the chief stating specifically the disciplinary powers which may be exercised by patrol officers of the various grades.

16. The Personnel Board continue to cooperate with the patrol in its attempts to maintain strict, impartial discipline.

Training

17. A full-time staff of at least three officers be assigned to the patrol training school.

18. The Legislature provide the patrol with sufficient moneys to develop and maintain a permanent and adequate patrol training school, in terms of buildings, grounds and equipment.

19. The patrol utilize the services of qualified instructors from both within and outside the patrol.

20. All recruits be required to attend a training school for at least eight weeks, and that failure of any candidate to maintain minimum standards of proficiency and deportment be sufficient cause for immediate dismissal.

21. All traffic officers be required to attend a two-week refresher course at the end of their probationary period.

22. All other members of the patrol be required to attend a two-week in-service course every two years.

23. Special in-service training classes be conducted for officers of each patrol grade.

24. Members of the patrol be permitted and encouraged to attend schools offering specialized training for police officers.

25. The patrol training school, with instructors and facilities, be available for the traffic training of local police officers.

26. The patrol furnish, upon request, competent officers to assist local police in their traffic training programs.

C. EQUIPMENT

To function in an effective manner the patrol must have high performance equipment in sufficient amounts. Patrol equipment will be discussed under the following headings:

1. Housing
2. Mobile equipment
3. Accident investigation equipment
4. Intoxication testing equipment
5. Photographic equipment
6. Communication facilities

Housing. Patrol headquarters might well remain at its present location in the Motor Vehicle Department building until an increase in the functions performed by the department requires use of space now assigned to the patrol. When this occurs the patrol should be given adequate space and facilities in another place.

At present most patrol field offices are situated in buildings which also house other departmental activities. In many cases, the available space is inadequate. Moreover, there has been an inequitable allocation of space and such conditions hamper efficiency.

Separation of the patrol from the Department of Motor Vehicles may demand revision of the present departmental building program. Separation also should result in the development of a patrol building program. As housing needs of the patrol vary in some ways from those of any other state agency, they should receive special attention.

In order that patrol operations will not be affected adversely by the extent, or location of field offices, it is recommended that:

1. A building program be developed to provide adequate space and facilities for all patrol field command and area offices.
2. A determined effort be made to erect or obtain the use of buildings at locations most suitable for rural traffic law enforcement.
3. Pending the completion of such a building program, full consideration be given to fair allocation of office space among all divisions of the department.

Mobile Equipment. Table VIII shows both the amount of automotive equipment assigned to the patrol and the amount of radio equipment installed as of July 1, 1946.

TABLE VIII
Patrol Automotive Equipment as of July 1, 1946

Type	None	Radio Equipment		No. of Units
		1-way	2-way
Automobiles -----	22	12	340	374
Motorcycles -----	8	426	1	435
Totals -----	30	438	341	809

Many patrol cars and motorcycles should be replaced. The difficulty of obtaining repairs and replacements during past years has worked some hardships upon the patrol.

Without automotive equipment, of course, the patrol would be useless and too few automotive units would result in a sharp decline in efficiency. The Legislature has, in the past, been generous in providing funds for the purchase and maintenance of automotive equipment; it is recommended that this policy be continued.

An increase in patrol personnel should be accompanied by an increase in automotive units. The number of officers of various grades recommended for field duty was based upon the premise that each officer would be highly mobile and capable of performing any patrol duty. To operate most effectively each officer should have at hand one unit of motor equipment. This would require 1,614 motor vehicles. At present,³ there are 913 members of the patrol with 809 pieces of motor equipment. This should be considered as a minimum number of units and the ratio of units to man power should not drop below this ratio of one unit per 1.13 officers, or 88.6 units per 100 officers. When total patrol strength is increased to 1,637, a minimum of 1,450 units of motor equipment will be needed.

Many factors influence the type of equipment most suitable for patrol use. Some of these are: Length of patrol beats or patrol areas, type and surface of roadway, road gradients, type and volume of traffic and nature of patrol activity. The patrol has now the experience and information essential for proper decisions as to type of automotive equipment required. Field experience and headquarters performance evaluations should determine the type of motor vehicles to be purchased for patrol use.

Even within the various types there are units with certain performance characteristics. Here, again, the patrol should list performance specifications for all automotive units, and these specifications should importantly influence the awarding of contracts.

Accident Investigation Equipment. This includes special equipment carried in patrol cars, in addition to that available at central points as aids to the investigation officer.

³ July 1, 1946.

It has been the policy of the patrol to assign to patrol cars certain equipment to assist the officer in accident investigation. This policy should continue. Minimum equipment should consist of:

100-ft. steel tape	Decelerometer *
Flares	Pinch bar *
First aid kit	Short handled broom *
Fire extinguisher	Tow chain *
Blankets

Photographic and intoxication testing equipment also should be available to assure a complete investigation and to carry out fundamental traffic law enforcement.

Photographic Equipment. In accordance with present patrol policy one camera, with photographic equipment, is assigned to each squad area headquarters and is used by officers investigating fatal or serious traffic accidents. This equipment is employed with varying frequency and efficiency. In one area the district attorney gets photographic evidence from an outside agency which is notified by patrol officers to take pictures at crash scenes. This is an undesirable and unnecessary arrangement. In most other localities the securing of such evidence remains a duty of the enforcement officer. This routine should prevail throughout the patrol. For best results the investigating officer should have immediate use of a camera.

The patrol should undertake a study in all parts of the State to determine high accident districts. Photographic equipment could then be assigned to cars patrolling such districts.

Facilities vary for developing film and printing pictures. In some squad areas none are provided for the patrol and the work is done by commercial photographers; in other areas patrol dark-rooms are utilized. It is recommended that enough patrol dark-rooms, fully equipped, be made available to permit the speedy processing of all film taken by patrol officers.

Intoxication Testing Equipment. Testing the driver or pedestrian suspected of being under the influence of intoxicating liquor is both an important and a responsible duty of the police officer. It is important because of the number of accidents in which drunken drivers are involved (See Table IX); it is a responsible duty because of the gravity of the offense and the penalty attached to it.

Furthermore, it is the suspected person's right to be accused correctly. How to accomplish these objectives long has been a problem.

Admittedly, determination of intoxication is difficult. Therefore, the law should be specific and modern in its treatment, the prosecution should be fearless and sincere, and court action should be impartial and firm. Unless these factors exist enforcement action is ineffective.

Many pathological conditions have symptoms similar to those resulting from the drinking of intoxicants. To expect the police, or even a physician, to determine the cause of these conditions by observation alone is illogical. Such a procedure is antiquated, especially since scientific method for deciding intoxication has been formulated. Chemical tests now can ascertain the presence as well as the percentage of alcohol in the body fluids or alveolar air of a suspected person.

* Recommended but optional.

From this percentage the extent of inebriation at the time of the examination can be measured. Whether the substance analyzed is blood, urine, or breath, the result is expressed accurately in terms of percentage of alcohol in the blood.

Chemical tests thus protect the public and the defendant. The public is assured of exact, scientific police action; the driver may be certain that he will not be accused unjustly; and the officer, knowing that he has a sure method of identification, will be more confident in his approach to this problem.

Although city police officers in California are confronted with a greater intoxication problem than the patrol (See Table X), the rural problem is serious enough to deserve more attention than it has had in the past. Using 1945 data only, "had been drinking" persons were involved in 22.94 percent of the state's fatal accidents but only 18.37 percent of the rural fatal accidents. The word "only" is used solely in the comparative sense. Actually the rural drinking-driving problem is not only severe, but increasing. Using accident reports as a basis, the problem increased 43.5 percent in 1944-1945.

* Taken from Statistical Report, Department of Motor Vehicles.

Patrol activity, however, has not increased correspondingly. Table XI shows that the number of arrests for "driving while under the influence" of intoxicants has dropped to a dangerous low.

The patrol knows the advantages of chemical tests to determine intoxication but to use them it has had to depend upon the cooperation and generosity of the medical profession. Wherever physicians, clinics and laboratories were willing to make such tests, their services and facilities have been used by the patrol and other officers. Frequently this cooperation still continues. In other cases the amount of time devoted to police cases, both in the laboratory and in court, was so great that curtailment or cancellation of the service resulted. In one district this was accomplished by charging a high fee for each police case.

Wherever such services are available, they should be used. However, effective enforcement of the "drunk-driving" sections of the code will not be achieved until the patrol adopts a method of chemical testing which can be performed by patrol personnel. Fortunately, such a method has been developed. In order to find the extent of intoxication of all suspects, it is recommended that the patrol adopt the breath-testing procedure.

Communications. Patrol communications between headquarters and field units are carried on through radio, teletype, telephone and the United States mail. Efficient patrol operations, including all enforcement and service phases, are greatly influenced both by the media of communications and by the speed and ease with which messages can be sent and received. Since patrol activities play such an important role in the daily safety of California citizens, the communications system must be such as to expedite these activities.

Radio. There is now no patrol radio net. The patrol is operating with a patchwork system composed of land stations belonging to various governmental jurisdictions. Of the 48 stations to which patrol receivers are tuned, 13 are patrol-owned and operated, 24 are owned by sheriffs, eight by city police departments, two by the Division of Highways and one by the state police of an adjoining state. That the system operates as effectively as it does under this set-up is a tribute to the patrol and the cooperating agencies.

The development of a state-wide patrol radio net is complicated—in its technical and financial aspects—by the size and topography of the State. The money available for the development of radio facilities has been used, in our opinion, judiciously. That is, definite progress has been made toward the planned objective of a patrol network.

At the time of this study, the Governor's Radio Advisory Committee was making a study and preparing a report on the radio facilities needed by various agencies of the State Government. The recommendations contained in this report should receive careful consideration, especially those which would require the development of a state-wide radio net capable of meeting the needs of the patrol.

Teletype. The patrol is now closely linked with the State Teletype System which also serves other agencies of the State Government as well as local jurisdictions. As a result, the system frequently is clogged with messages, and patrol operations are, upon occasion, adversely affected.

More strict supervision of teletype use would relieve some of this congestion; this is as true of patrol messages as of others.

Development of a state-wide radio net will not cut down the importance of the teletype system. Many messages sent by the latter cannot be broadcast and the patrol will continue to be dependent upon the teletype for the transmittal of these messages. Use of the teletype has increased greatly in the past few years; undoubtedly it will increase even more as service functions of the patrol and the Department of Motor Vehicles are developed further. The present system, obviously, will be unable to meet this sharpened demand. Steps should be taken now toward planning the enlargement or modification of the present system or toward the installation of a separate system which will provide the patrol with the service it requires.

EQUIPMENT RECOMMENDATIONS

It is recommended that:

Housing

1. A building program be developed in order to provide adequate space and facilities for all patrol field command and area officers.

2. Patrol field offices be located at places most suitable for rural traffic law enforcement.

3. Pending the completion of such a building program, full consideration be given to an equitable allocation of present office space for departmental activities.

Automotive Equipment

4. With the increase in patrol personnel, the number of automotive units for patrol use never be permitted to drop below the ratio of 88.6 units for each 100 patrol officers.

5. The type of automotive units purchased for patrol use be in keeping with the wishes of the patrol command.

6. The patrol be permitted to list the performance specifications of all motor vehicles purchased for patrol use.

Accident Investigation Equipment

7. Certain accident investigation equipment be assigned to each car used on regular patrol. This equipment to include:

- | | |
|------------------------|-------------------------|
| a. 100-foot steel tape | f. Decelerometer* |
| b. Flares | g. Pinch bar* |
| c. First aid kit | h. Short handled broom* |

| e. Blankets | |

Photographic Equipment

8. Additional cameras be secured and assigned to cars on regular patrol in high accident frequency areas.

9. A sufficient number of dark-rooms, with adequate facilities, be made available to permit the speedy processing of all film exposed by patrol officers in the course of duty.

* Recommended but optional.

Intoxication Testing Equipment

10. The patrol adopt the breath-test method of testing chemically for intoxication, that breath-testing equipment be made available on the basis of need, and that officers be trained in testing procedures and techniques.

Communications

11. The communication needs of the patrol be met by the installation of adequate radio and teletype facilities.

SECTION III

Problems of Integration and Operation of the Traffic Control Program

The preceding portion of this report deals specifically with fundamental state enforcement needs. Unless these needs are met in greater measure than at present enforcement will not and cannot become an effective traffic and accident control factor.

Should the minimum recommendations contained in this report be filled, enforcement in the State will be materially improved; it is, however, only one segment of the official state traffic control program. While efficient enforcement operations are effective in themselves, they in turn must be integrated with many other official activities of the State. Discussion of these follows:

DEPARTMENT OF MOTOR VEHICLES

The nonpolice functions of this department are great potentials for traffic control. Some of these activities are service functions which should be available to other state and local agencies; in others the department exercises control directly over motor vehicle owners and operators. The standards of performance of both types of activities should be substantially raised.

Motor Vehicle Registration. Upon the effective administration of this function depends the establishment and maintenance of rules and procedures governing the classification and registration of all motor vehicles, the yearly registration of such vehicles, the determination of standards for vehicle equipment necessary to safe operation and the maintenance of files, data and information to assist in the efficient enforcement of all pertinent sections of the code.

Services which should be provided enforcement agencies of the State pertain mainly to identification of motor vehicles and their registered and legal owners. The maintenance of records which will make such information available readily requires a substantial clerical staff and adequate filing systems. Such adequate facilities are not now available; consequently requests for information cannot be answered promptly. This is particularly true during the months following the renewal period.

Driver Licensing. Driver licensing includes both service to other governmental agencies and direct control of the licensed operator. Proper performance of these activities will expedite greatly the proper enforcement of the code and will exert a tremendous influence on the entire problem of highway safety through better driver training, selection and control.

The Legislature has granted the department wide authority and responsibility in the licensing and control of motor vehicle operators. On several occasions facilities have not been provided for the performance of specific responsibilities. Three instances are given, one a service activity and two a licensing function.

Section 281 of the Vehicle Code grants the court permission to suspend the license of any person convicted of specified offenses, the length of suspension varying from 30 days to six months depending upon the number of prior convictions for these offenses. To adjudicate properly cases appearing before him, the judge must have the defendant's driving and conviction record. Division of Driver License files do not yield this information now for the reason that the clerical staff is too small.

Although driver licensing is a relatively new method of controlling the motor vehicle operator, it has, in many states, proved most effective. A criterion of effective licensing is the administration of drivers' examinations. Tests given to all original applicants should clearly indicate their ability to operate a motor vehicle safely. At this point the undesirable and the unfit should be discovered.

The Vehicle Code grants the department authority for an adequate examining procedure—Section 268 lists the abilities and characteristics subject to testing; Section 267 states that each original applicant shall be examined; and Section 287a declares that the department may make examination a prerequisite for renewal of licenses.

The department examines each original applicant in addition to persons seeking renewals, if, in the opinion of the examiner, this is warranted.¹ Unfortunately, the department is too under-staffed to give valid examinations. In the Ninety-third Fiscal Year when 1,087,977 licenses were issued, there were 155 examiners. During the Ninety-seventh Fiscal Year, 1,601,054 licenses were issued by 152 examiners. In the official language of the department²—"The Division (of Drivers' Licenses) is now staffed to handle only about 1,000,000 licenses annually or about 83,000 per month. Some months during the last (97th) fiscal year the totals ran between 140,000 and 150,000. If 1,600,000 licenses were issued during the year by a staff equipped to handle only 1,000,000, it may safely be assumed that the quality of examinations given both original applicants and applicants for renewal suffered marked deterioration."

Abandonment of a sound examining procedure will inevitably result in unqualified persons being licensed to operate. This condition will be reflected in a higher accident rate. Considering only the economic loss resulting from accidents, the state's interest would be best served by providing the department with a staff large enough to properly perform the licensing function.

Chapter 2, Division 12 of the Vehicle Code gives undesirable protection to vehicle operators and hinders prompt and equitable enforcement of the code. For one thing, most operators, arrested for violations of code sections, are allowed at least five days to appear in court if they make a written promise to appear. Many persons violate this written promise; this results in the issuance of warrants and the serving of them, if possible. Under this system the citizen having a permanent home, property or position within the State is called to account but the itinerant or visitor frequently escapes without penalty.

Section 278b of the code attempts to force the violator to appear in court by providing that when "any person has for a period of 15 or more days wilfully violated his written promise to appear * * * the department shall suspend the privilege of such person to operate a motor vehicle * * *"³

In 1941 the department began to enforce this section, but the extra work thus created in the Sacramento office of the department took up the full time of 26 clerks. This was such a large percentage of the clerical time available that the regular functions of the department suffered and after 10 months this activity was necessarily abandoned. During this period 6,841 licenses were suspended for failure to appear and of these 3,712 were cleared by the end of the year.

It is recommended therefore that: (1) The sections which place such restrictions upon the arresting officer should be carefully reviewed, and (2) the department should be provided with an adequate clerical staff and facilities to perform effectively the functions required by Section 278b.

TRAFFIC LAW ENFORCEMENT

We have described certain minimum changes which are essential if the California Highway Patrol is to operate soundly. Police action is only one phase of enforcement; it must be supplemented by intelligent, courageous prosecution and by impartial and firm court action. The history of the development of criminal procedure emphasizes the gradual separation of these fundamentally different activities. In the adjudication of cases arising from enforcement of motor vehicle laws, this trend has not only been arrested but reversed. Prosecuting officers are frequently indifferent to these traffic responsibilities, the burden of prosecution falling upon the police. This is an unhealthy situation.

It is the duty of the district attorney to prosecute all cases stemming from violations of the statutes. The general welfare of the citizens of the State is influenced to a great extent from violations of the Vehicle Code. The importance of the prosecution of traffic cases cannot be over-emphasized.

The district attorneys, or their representatives, must prosecute all violations of the Vehicle Code where a not guilty plea is entered and the case goes to trial if a fair and equitable program of traffic law enforcement is to be developed in the State.

Patrol officers must, in most cases,⁴ cite offenders to justice of the peace courts. This justice system was created to meet conditions which do not now exist. As a means of dispensing justice, these courts had lost their effectiveness before the advent of the motor vehicle; since that time the great burden placed upon them by rural traffic law enforcement has only emphasized their inadequacy.

This situation does not pass unnoticed in California. Senator Randolph Collier, Chairman, Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets and Bridges, has requested the Judicial Council, through the Honorable Phil S. Gibson, Chief Justice of California, to make a study of and report on the "inferior courts" of the State, especially as they apply to the adjudication of traffic cases. We concur in the need for such a study and commend it to the Legislature as a matter of first magnitude in the public interest.

COORDINATION OF TRAFFIC POLICE ACTIVITIES

The basic purpose of traffic law enforcement is to encourage voluntary obedience to laws and ordinances enacted for the protection of all users of the highways. The level of enforcement must be raised to the point where operators and pedestrians practice self-discipline and conformance. The accomplishment of this objective demands coordination of effort by all enforcement personnel.

Several situations indicate the need for greater coordination and uniformity of traffic control activities by police agencies. Four of these are:

1. The universality of the problem is evident to those studying the state's traffic volume and accident experience. The problem exists throughout the entire road net although elements vary with the location.
2. The state-wide traffic problem consists of the sum of the problems of all local areas.
3. Traffic problems do not begin or end at political boundaries. Within a metropolitan area there is only one over-all problem, regardless of the political boundaries it may embrace.
4. There is now substantial uniformity of traffic laws and regulations, but there is not uniformity of application. Uniform handling of violators by police in various jurisdictions, and uniform police policies, procedures and techniques are required. The operator traveling from one jurisdiction to another is often confused by different types of controls, differing levels of enforcement, and varying quality in officer-violator contacts.

Many obstacles stand in the way of complete coordination and uniformity of traffic police activities. A few of the more important ones follow:

1. The gravity of the traffic problem is not, even now, fully recognized by all police executives and traffic administrators.
2. No police department has sufficient personnel to assign such a number of officers to traffic activities that maximum reduction of the problem will result.
3. In spite of present conditions, some agencies erroneously believe they are now operating with full effectiveness.
4. The number of police agencies is in itself a deterring factor. This is best illustrated in Los Angeles County where there are 45 municipalities, the sheriff's department and the highway patrol, each carrying on more or less independent programs of enforcement.
5. Each local police agency must operate within county or city boundaries.

6. Each agency has its own internal problems, personnel, equipment and facilities peculiar to its own situation.
7. There are great differences in the amount and quality of training provided police personnel. This results not only in the application of different procedures but in the use of different terminology explaining phases of police problems, operations and accomplishments.

Although these difficulties are serious they are not insurmountable; they should not continue to forestall synchronized police action. Such action cannot be dictated from above. It must come from a common and sincere desire to do the best possible job with available tools; to share experiences with others; to be willing to learn from the experiences of others; and to work harmoniously with others.

To get the desired degree of coordination and uniformity of police policies and procedures will require considerable time, and will be influenced by varying conditions and personnel. The following program is outlined as a basis for the development of such a coordinated program:

1. Become thoroughly acquainted with the Official State Traffic Control Program.
2. Meet regularly with executives and administrators from neighboring jurisdictions so as to:
 - a. Coordinate traffic planning and training.
 - b. Develop mutually acceptable traffic enforcement policies.
 - c. Work out joint assignment for traffic enforcement officers which will necessitate coordination of efforts between:
 - (1) City and county agencies.
 - (2) County and state officers.
 - (3) State and city departments.
 - d. Develop operational coordination:
 - (1) Locally, by use of a coordinating officer, following the example already set in Los Angeles County and the East Bay area.
 - (2) State-wide, by cooperation with Coordinating Committee of State Officials, the Governor's Law Enforcement Advisory Committee and the State Police Chiefs' Association.
 - e. Jointly, through coordinators, evaluate program results.

The patrol should assist fully in the development of this program, taking the initiative where necessary to coordinate police action. The major portion of the patrol's traffic problem is in territory contiguous to population centers; hence, the patrol should be much interested in both the quantity and quality of traffic control in these areas.

The traffic is similar in both jurisdictions. For example, the operator driving south on Western Avenue or Figueroa Street in Los Angeles may not be aware of the fact that he has left the city and entered the county. The width and surface of the roadway remain the same, surroundings are similar, the volume of the traffic does not change and the driver sees no reason to operate differently. It follows that traffic should be subject to the same type of controls on both sides of this political line. Regardless of the type of uniform worn, officers should exert the same influence, use essentially the same procedures in enforcing laws in a uniform manner and obtain the same level of enforcement effort. Such uniformity is never won through chance; it is the result of complete cooperation of thorough planning, training and supervision and the proper assignment of sufficient personnel, trained to its tasks.

Considerable success has resulted from activities of Enforcement Officers' Associations in Los Angeles County and the East Bay area. The organizing of similar associations in other areas of the State would assist materially in the development of coordination and uniformity in local traffic law enforcement.

DEVELOPMENT AND CONTROL OF THE OFFICIAL STATE TRAFFIC CONTROL PROGRAM

The First Traffic Safety Conference was held in Sacramento on May 1, 1946. Called by Governor Warren, the conference formulated recommendations which the California delegation could take to the President's Highway Traffic Safety Conference, held in Washington, D. C., May 8-9-10, 1946.

Governor Warren named a Coordinating Committee of State Officials to prepare and submit a plan for a state-wide traffic control program. Again at the call of the Governor, the Second Traffic Safety Conference was held on June 7, 1946. California representatives to the President's Conference reported on the conference findings. The chairman of the Coordinating Committee of State Officials then presented the committee's report on a recommended state traffic control program. This program was adopted by the conference.

Thus there has been developed an Official California Traffic Control Program. The objectives stated in this program are those of the President's Conference, and are entirely sound.

However, a statement of broad objectives, however desirable, is not sufficient. Machinery must be devised and policies established for translating objectives into action. Certain steps have been taken in this direction. The Director of the Department of Motor Vehicles, who is also chairman of the coordinating committee, has recently created a Bureau of Accident Prevention, one duty of which is "to set up and conduct a state-wide traffic safety program in cooperation with organizations interested in safety, and with other public agencies."⁵

The adoption, by a representative group of officials and citizens, of the Action Program of the President's Conference and the creation of a Coordinating Committee of State Officials charged with activating the official program are important achievements. Equally important steps must now be taken to consolidate these gains and to assure accomplishment of program objectives; the organizational structure should be completed, staffed and financed; procedures of coordination and integration of activities should be developed; and procedures providing for evaluation of traffic control operations and program development should be established.

A full-time, paid executive secretary should be furnished the coordinating committee. The position should not be filled by one holding office in one of the operating agencies. The office should attain such prestige as to assure the proper coordination of all operating agencies; the executive secretary should represent the Chief Executive of the State. It is recommended that the position be filled by appointment by the Governor and that the executive secretary be permitted to select a small staff of assistants.

The duties to be performed by the executive secretary should include, but not be limited to, the following:

1. Develop a detailed program incorporating the recommendations of the President's Highway Safety Conference.
2. Provide continuity of program direction.
3. Assist the committee in developing operational and procedural policies.
4. Assist all operating agencies in developing mechanics of cooperation and integration of activities.
5. Promote interest and participation in the program among civic and commercial organizations.

The above recommendations can be carried out only after receiving favorable consideration by the Legislature. The present incomplete structure, charged with coordinating and effecting the official traffic control program, and with giving direction to and securing coordination among official control agencies, must be completed and given official status and financial support.

It is not desirable for the State to underwrite the entire cost of all state traffic safety activities. Local organizations and governmental units, which are or may become interested in traffic control, will continue to support their own local activities. However, the State is obligated to finance its own projects, to provide for their effective coordination and to furnish nonfinancial assistance to other agencies in the development of the official program. It is recommended that the Legislature allocate sufficient funds for the Executive Secretary of the Coordinating Committee of State Officials and his staff.

The California Legislature has been foresighted in creating two committees authorized to study and submit recommendations on aspects of the motor vehicle transportation situation in the State. Each committee has secured the services of outside agencies to assist it in this task. It is, therefore, recommended that the Senate Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization and the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets and Bridges make available to the Coordinating Committee of State Officials the reports submitted to them by agencies employed to study various phases of automotive transportation within the State. Thus, the coordinating committee can incorporate in the official traffic control program recommended policies and techniques.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE INTEGRATION AND COORDINATION OF TRAFFIC CONTROL ACTIVITIES

It is recommended that:

1. The Legislature provide funds for the Department of Motor Vehicles which will permit adequate services to other official agencies and better control of the motor vehicle operator as provided by law.

2. District attorneys, or their representatives, prosecute all cases arising from violations of the Vehicle Code where a not guilty plea is entered and a trial ensues.

3. The preliminary report of the Judicial Council be supported to the end that a thorough going study of the inferior courts of the State results.

4. Police agencies in the State cooperate in the employment of their traffic personnel and facilities in the development of a state-wide uniform enforcement program, as follows:

a. Become thoroughly acquainted with the Official State Traffic Control Program.

b. Meet regularly with executives and administrators from neighboring jurisdictions so as to:

(1) Coordinate traffic planning and training.

(2) Develop mutually acceptable traffic enforcement policies.

(3) Work out joint assignments for traffic enforcement officers which will necessitate coordination of effort between:

(a) City and county agencies.

(b) County and state officers.

(c) State and city departments.

(4) Develop operational coordination:

(a) Locally, by use of a coordinating officer, following the example already set in Los Angeles County and the East Bay area;

(b) State-wide, by cooperation with Coordinating Committee of State Officials, the Governor's Law Enforcement Advisory Committee and the State Police Chiefs' Association.

(5) Jointly, through coordinators, evaluate program results.

5. The services of a full-time, paid executive secretary be furnished the Coordinating Committee of State Officials.

6. The position of executive secretary be filled by appointment by the Governor.

7. The Legislature allocate sufficient funds for the executive secretary and his staff.

8. The executive secretary be delegated sufficient authority to allow for actual executive direction of traffic control activities whenever necessary.

9. The Senate Interim Committee on Governmental Reorganization and the Joint Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets and Bridges make available to the Coordinating Committee of State Officials the reports, or approved portions thereof, submitted to them by agencies employed to study various phases of automotive transportation within the State in order that the coordinating committee may incorporate in the official traffic control program recommended policies and techniques.

SECTION IV

Legislation

The performance of governing agencies is controlled and influenced by "outer" forces of many kinds and varieties. This is particularly true of traffic policing. A traffic police agency might be established in accordance with the soundest principles of organization. Its administration may leave nothing to be desired. Yet such an agency can fail unless it has the fullest support by the many "exterior" factors which determine police action. Thus, good traffic policing depends upon the establishment of sound motor vehicle registration. It relies to a large extent upon the sufficiency of driver licensing and the controls established over the driver. It is dependent upon sound and enforceable rules of the road. No traffic police agency can hope to operate efficiently unless it is granted essential enforcement authority. And, however well it may perform its allotted tasks, much of the value of its enforcement operation is determined by the quality of prosecution and adjudication. Over all the exterior factors directing the success or failure of police action are the twin forces of cooperative effort among governing agencies participating in traffic direction and control and the full support of the public. While the many internal changes recommended in this report can and will improve the quality and quantity of traffic enforcement in California, they cannot in themselves produce a safe, fluid highway traffic condition.

Because of the significant influence of outer factors on patrol operation, it is deemed necessary in this concluding section to turn attention to one of the principal exterior factors which influences patrol operations; namely, motor vehicle legislation. The discussion is indicative, not inclusive, for comprehensive evaluation of outer factors constitutes a study in itself and one which is beyond the range of this survey. This study deals specifically with the administration and organization of enforcement. In order to point out some of the important legislative problems affecting patrol operation, we must examine the number of areas of operation defined in the California Vehicle Code. The code is the primary guide to traffic action. It is the authority on the registration of motor vehicles, licensing of drivers, rules of the road, and the process of police action. This being the case, the code has been examined to determine whether or not police action could be further improved by changes in sections of the code not previously referred to in the study. A number of procedures was employed to disclose such inadequacies.

The first step consisted of informal though comprehensive discussions with members of the patrol and the department—both at headquarters and in the field. Discussions were conducted with patrol members of all ranks from the patrolman to chief and director. The second step was to study judicial decisions and the opinions of the Attorney General in order to observe whether or not the problem of enforcement as described by line officers were attributable to inadequate legislation or to omissions or commissions by the administrative agencies. The third step was reading of the holdings of the Motor Vehicle Department's administrative adviser and the administrative orders issued from the office of the director of the department and the chief of the patrol. In this way, departmental attitudes could be observed clearly. The fourth step was a comparative analysis of provisions in the Vehicle Code with provisions in the Uniform Vehicle Code.

That series of uniform codes now known collectively as the Uniform Vehicle Code is the most carefully considered and systematically prepared treatment of motor vehicle legislation available. First editions were prepared originally in 1925-6 by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety in cooperation with the National Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. They were reviewed and revised by the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety in 1930, in 1934, in 1938 and again in 1944.¹ In each case revisions were based upon thorough studies by men of exceptional competence in their respective fields, fortified by systematic examination of current needs. Thus, comparison of provisions of the Vehicle Code with those of an excellent "model" act has important value in disclosing particular legislative acts not in accord with recommended provisions. Where such variations coincide with observed difficulties in the State, there is ample evidence that serious attention should be given to change.

The writers of this report worked with the Office of Legislative Counsel, which prepared a section by section comparison of Acts II and V of the Uniform Code with the California Vehicle Code. Act II deals with driver licensing, Act V with regulation of traffic on highways. Our purpose here is to synthesize the findings of the Office of Legislative Counsel and to incorporate certain salient facts from our own studies relative to specific provisions of the Vehicle Code which are causing enforcement difficulty.

In comparing the Vehicle Code with the acts we shall employ the same legends as did the Office of Legislative Counsel for purposes of brevity and clarity. Five legends were utilized: S.D., S.S., N.C.P., Cal., and Sim. Where a provision of the code is substantially different from the act provision dealing with the same subject matter, the legend "S.D." is employed. Where respective provisions are substantially the same, the symbol "S.S." is used. "N.C.P." means that the Uniform Act contains a provision that has no comparable provision in the code. "Cal." means that there is in the code a provision not found in the Uniform Act but is germane. "Sim." indicates that a particular code provision is similar to that in the act but contains certain significant differences.

Definition of words and phrases is of exceptional importance in the field of law. Comparison of definitions in the code and the acts discloses that of 31 definition sections of the Vehicle Code, 23 are in substantial agreement with act provisions and eight are similar.² The acts contain, however, a number of definition sections which are not found in the code.³ There are sufficient variations to warrant review of code definitions. It is recommended also that the various definition sections of the code be more logically grouped together than at present. Grouping of definitions in the acts is an excellent guide.

Issuance of operators' and chauffeurs' licenses is governed by Ch. 2 of the code (Sections 265-279), suspension and revocation in Ch. 3

² Sections of the code in substantial agreement with the acts are: 31, 32, 32.5, 46, 47, 48, 54, 65, 66, 67, 69, 70, 71, 72, 81, 82, 82.5, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89. Sections which are similar are: 33, 34, 36, 37, 38, 44, 83, 90.

³ These sections of Act V are: 7b,c, 8a,m, 9, 10b, 12, 13, 14e,g, 15b, 19a,b,c.

(Sections 291-298), Ch. 4 (Sections 299-317), and Ch. 5 (Section 320). Comparison of Vehicle Code and act provisions discloses marked differences in content and principles of control. Of 63 sections and subsections of the Vehicle Code (Ch. 2-3-4-5) on which some comparisons were made 27 were cataloged as "S.S." by the Legislative Counsel, 32 by "Sim" and 4 by "S.O." In addition there are more than 40 sections or subsections of the code which do not have comparable provisions in Act II.⁵ Note also there are a number of provisions in Act II which are not contained in the Vehicle Code.⁶

Such differences as these are brought to light in order to point out the need for a careful study of Vehicle Code provisions and the need to harmonize them with the Model Acts. A specific example may be seen in a comparison of Section 332 of the Vehicle Code with Section 38 of Act II. Both relate to penalties for driving while license to drive has been suspended or revoked. On the surface the two provisions appear similar. Actually they are fundamentally different. The Vehicle Code states:

"Any person who drives a motor vehicle upon a highway when such person has been refused a license by the department or after his operator's or chauffeur's license or his driving privilege has been suspended or revoked is guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment in the county jail for not less than five days nor more than six months or by fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50) nor more than five hundred dollars ($500) or by both."

While the Model Act provision reads:

"Any person who drives a motor vehicle on any public highway of this State at a time when his privilege so to do is suspended or revoked shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be punished by imprisonment for not less than two days nor more than six months and there may be imposed in addition thereto a fine of not more than $500."

Now, for a comparison of the two provisions:

The Vehicle Code provision specifies that on conviction either a fine or imprisonment (or both) can be imposed. No one form of punishment is mandatory. Thus under California law one who drives while his license is revoked or suspended can satisfy judgment by fine alone. But this is by no means so under the Model Act provision. Imprisonment is mandatory upon conviction with imposition of fine a possible addition to the penalty. The emphatic difference in penalties is obvious. Where fining only is possible, the way is opened for important weaknesses in enforcement, for fining alone does not supply the deterrent that is necessary in prohibiting from driving those whose licenses have been revoked or suspended. Because of this the value of driver licensing as an important control device is seriously impaired. It is recommended that a change be made in Section 332 of the Vehicle Code to make it conform with Section 38 of Act II.

This is one of many examples which indicate the need of a systematic comparison of Vehicle Code provisions with those of the Model Acts. Word for word identity is not essential, but basic similarity of principle is requisite. Need for uniformity and the hazards resulting from the lack of it were emphasized in the President's Highway Safety Conference, and comprehensive attention was devoted to the necessity for uniformity of legislation in the Report of the Committee on Laws and Ordinances. Particular attention should be called to the seven-point statement of advantages and necessity for uniform traffic regulations on pp. 4-5, the exposition of hazards resulting from lack of uniformity on pp. 6-9, and the basic conclusions discussed on pp. 10-16. Thus, while there are doubtless some licensing conditions or other traffic problems which are peculiar to California and might necessitate provisions differing from those of the acts, such differences should be minor only. Where significant variations from act provisions exist elsewhere, they are in many instances influenced by pressure interests. Unquestionable improvement in driver controls will ensue in California if present legislation is changed to match act provisions in all their fundamentals.

The importance of the driver license issue cannot be overemphasized. In many respects the key to traffic safety lies in the screening out of unqualified drivers at the time of license application and the establishment of an alerting system of supervision over drivers whose conduct on the road demonstrates that the driving privilege should be suspended or revoked. The finest traffic policing cannot insure traffic safety so long as incompetent and lawless drivers are permitted use of the streets and highways. Although study of driver licensing was not a part of this survey, observations made indicate the need for much improvement. In part, the difficulty may be traced to code provisions. In part, apparent weaknesses in driver controls through licensing may be attributed to inadequate budgets provided for driver licensing as previously discussed. In part, such weaknesses may also be attributed to a lack of judicial sustenance of the basic principles of suspension. It is strongly recommended that a thorough study of driver licensing be undertaken and means employed to alleviate present shortcomings.

It has been indicated previously how important the rules of the road are in a traffic control program. Rules of the road constitute not only the foundation for police action but are the guides to traffic behavior. They legislatively determine what driving and pedestrian acts are deemed to be contrary to safe traffic practices and their violation forms the controlling base governing police action. If critical traffic practices are not recognized as such by law, police action in controlling them is necessarily throttled. If enactments are unenforceable by the police, prosecutors and courts because of wording, confusion of issues or other factors, the hands of enforcement are tied. It cannot be stressed too strongly that good and enforceable rules of the road are the foundations of sound traffic action and this in turn is the basis of safety and security on the highways. Hence the following consideration of California's rules of the road as promulgated in Divisions 9 and 9A of the Vehicle Code. We shall first draw a comparison of provisions of the code with comparable subjects in Act V of the Uniform Vehicle Code and then will turn attention to certain of the Vehicle Code sections which are sources of enforcement difficulty.

As in respect to previous sections of the Vehicle Code, marked differences in content and principles of control were noticed when code provisions were compared with corresponding subjects in Act V of the Uniform Vehicle Code. Some sections were substantially the same, others were only similar, and so on.⁷ The Legislative Council's reports indicate that there are some 30 sections or subsections in Act V, the contents of which are not to be found in the Vehicle Code.⁸ And in addition quite a number of Vehicle Code sections were not subject to clear comparison with act provisions.⁹ Such indications of extensive differences lead to the conclusion that rules of the road sections of the Vehicle Code should be thoroughly studied and revisions made.

That revisions are advisable was further indicated by the many problems disclosed in conversations with patrol officers and members of the Motor Vehicle Department. Note the sections of the code dealing with reporting of accidents (Sections 480-57). Good reporting of accidents is the foundation of accident prevention, and unless the proper authorities are advised of accident occurrences, a vital cog in the enforcement program is missing. The prime difficulty is that proper reports are not forthcoming. In part this may be attributable to omissions in legislation, in part to weaknesses of the public and officials, in part to a not too fully-developed system of collecting and distributing reports. It is recommended that careful attention be devoted to synchronizing the Vehicle Code provisions with those of Act V (Sections 39-49) and of considering the study now being undertaken by the Motor Vehicle Department.

Sections 488 and 488.5 of the Vehicle Code deal with the confidentiality of accident reports. Section 488 is generally similar to Section 50 of Act V and is fundamentally sound. But this can by no means be said of Section 488.5, particularly with reference to the September 15, 1945 amendment. By this amendment all evidence of an accident secured through police investigation and the signed statements of all witnesses, save those signed by drivers involved, cease to be confidential at the expiration of six months after date of the accident. Time should never be made the essence of confidentiality and repeal of this limitation is urgently recommended. To that end Sections 488 and 488.5 should be reworded to conform to the requirements of Section 50 of Act V of the Model Acts. We also wish to call attention to the need for including in the Vehicle Code a provision calling for the submission of accident reports to municipal authorities and that the provisions of Section 52 of Act V be set up in a new section of the Vehicle Code.

At the meeting of the Assembly Interim Committee on Transportation and the Advisory Committee on Motor Vehicle Legislation held January 5, 1946, it was advocated that a thorough study be given to the subject of drunken driving. Such a study is definitely needed, for all evidence points to the critical traffic problem wrought by the drinking driver and pedestrian. In many jurisdictions justices of the peace refuse to receive complaints under Sections 501-502—the driving under the influence provisions. In some instances, patrol officers are by-passing code sections and are arresting under a county ordinance. Another of the significant difficulties lies in the omission in state law of provisions relative to the use of chemical tests to determine intoxication. It is strongly recommended that such an addition be included in the form of Section 54 of Act V of the Uniform Code.

Statutory prohibitions and regulations relative to speed are always a source of difficulty. On the one hand it is recognized that mobility is one of the invaluable contributions of the motor vehicle and that maximum possible swiftness of movement consistent with safety should be legislatively permitted. That speed must be kept within the boundaries of driving action required by public security is unquestioned. To this end, use of three basic controls is necessary: Maximum speed limits, zoning, and prima facie limits.

There are many difficulties in the way of effecting maximum vehicle movement compatible with safety. In part the problem lies in legislation, in part to lack of patrol equipment, in part to the nonsupport of prosecutor and judge. Sections 510 and 511 of the Vehicle Code are not sufficient. It is suggested that attention be given to the wording of Sections 56-59 of Act V of the Uniform Code.

Overtaking and passing often lead to highway accidents. Difficulties are created by a number of factors. One is the complexity of the roadway structure, comprised as it is of two-, three- and four-lane highways. (See Table XIV). Another is the habit of many drivers of keeping to the center of the roadway—a situation which often compels an overtaking motorist to pass on the right. A third is the difficulty of legally requiring motorists to keep to the right on four-lane highways. For example, one magistrate dismissed a case on the ground that the Vehicle Code does not require traffic to drive in the outside lane on multiple-lane highways except on three-lane highways where the center lane is for passing only. The ruling was sound in view of Section 525 which requires only that vehicles shall be driven on the right half of the roadway except in given situations. It is recommended that Chapter 7 of the Vehicle Code dealing with driving on the right side of highways and overtaking and passing be adjusted to match with the provisions of Art. VII of Act V of the Uniform Code.

6 lanes—	34 miles
4 lanes—	873 miles
3 lanes—	469 miles
2 lanes—	12,224 miles (approx.)

Two other problems were called to our attention. Double passing is not uncommon. Yet potentially dangerous as it is, there is no legislative provision making it unlawful. In practice, patrol members must book either for reckless driving or for not sounding horn or some other minor infraction. The hazard of double-passing warrants separate attention legislatively. Another accident problem relates to Section 627. As an example: A truck was parked within a restricted zone on Route 131 in Yettum. A car ran into the truck, and the occupant of the car was killed. Investigation showed that parking was done without lights. However, the defendant's attorney sought the prosecutor and pointed out that lights were not required under the terms of Section 627. The prosecutor then changed the charge from manslaughter to driving without an operator's license. Note the provisions of Section 136 of Act V in its legislation on the problem.

We have described thus far some of the rules of the road problems which face those responsible for enforcement of the law. This listing of some of the sections that require attention is by no means complete. Our purpose here has been to direct attention to the necessity for a thorough study of legislative needs and revisions of code sections in line with needs. We have made no effort to mention all legislative changes required, for such study is beyond the scope of this survey.

The continuity of effective enforcement is determined by the surety and dispatch with which the accused are brought to trial and penalties in accordance with the law are assessed the guilty. Otherwise due process of law becomes a phrase and not a fact. Unquestionably one of the fundamental problems in the traffic law enforcement procedure in this Country is to assure that due process is fulfilled in all cases where a citation or notice of arrest is issued. This can be aided greatly by the enactment of legislation which will: (1) Make it a misdemeanor to dispose of a traffic ticket in any way except by the appearance in court of the defendant and/or the entering of the disposition on the court docket in open court, and (2) make it mandatory for the state fiscal officer to be responsible for the accounting of all citations issued by patrol officers and the publication of such data. The fiscal officer should be as responsible for the accounting of such tickets as he is for state funds.

Such an enactment will serve to freeze unlawful cancellation of tickets, fix responsibility for the proper maintenance of traffic ticket operation, provide for the proper accounting of the issuance and disposition of all citations, and permit the defendant to be represented in court. Enactments to these ends have been adopted and are working effectively in many municipalities where problems of enforcement are essentially similar to state operation. Such legislation is needed to insure the continuing validity and future integrity of state-wide traffic law enforcement in California and we urge that such legislation be made effective.

These, in brief, are some of the problems which call for legislative action. In our opinion, the process of traffic law enforcement will be greatly furthered if serious attention is given to a critique of present Vehicle Code provisions with a view in mind of remedying the difficulties that now prevent good enforcement.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LEGISLATION

1. The California Vehicle Code be revised to incorporate the standards contained in the Uniform Vehicle Code.
2. Legislation be enacted making it a misdemeanor to dispose of a traffic citation or notice of arrest except as provided by law, requiring a periodic audit by the state fiscal officer of all traffic citations issued by members of the patrol, and providing that the audit report be publicized.

The following explanation of various duties was effective for period covered by this report. Some changes in rules governing the filling in of Officer's Daily Activity Reports are now in effect.

TYPE OF DUTY*

1. PATROL DUTY. Patrol duty is defined as hours spent and miles traveled by the officer patrolling a beat assigned by the commanding officer, in accordance with the location, hourly frequency, etc., of accidents. This shall also include hours spent and miles traveled preparing for and executing "Traffic Checks."

2. FIXED POST DUTY. Fixed post duty shall include all duty where the officer is assigned to a fixed post for the purpose of regulating traffic congestion or other stationary duty and mileage traveled to and from such post.

3. WARRANT SERVICE. Warrant service shall include the hours spent and miles traveled by an officer in serving or attempting to serve a warrant where such service or attempted service takes the officer from regularly assigned patrol duty as defined in paragraph 1. Time and mileage consumed in transporting prisoner shall be included.

4. BRIEF INVESTIGATION AND SERVICE. Brief investigation and service shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by an officer in investigation or service or attempted service of briefs, letters, or memorandums from the Division of Drivers Licenses, Division of Registration, Board of Equalization, etc., except those pertaining to auto theft, when such investigation, service, or attempted service takes the officer from regularly assigned patrol duty as defined in paragraph 1.

5. ACCIDENT INVESTIGATION FOLLOW-UP. Accident investigation follow-up shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by an officer on accident investigation. Except that should such accident occur on the regularly assigned patrol beat of the officer during his tour of duty, as described in paragraph 1, then such time as is spent by the officer at the scene of the accident shall be included as patrol duty under paragraph 1.

6. AUTO THEFT INVESTIGATION. Auto theft investigation shall include those hours spent and miles traveled by an officer in the investigation of auto theft cases when such investigation takes place other than on the regularly assigned patrol duty beat of the officer as described in paragraph 1.

7. CARAVAN ENFORCEMENT. This item shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in caravan enforcement work when such caravan enforcement work is not on the regularly assigned patrol duty beat as described in paragraph 1.

8. COMMERCIAL ENFORCEMENT. Commercial enforcement shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in commercial enforcement work when such enforcement work is not incidental to regular patrol duty as described in paragraph 1.

9. VEHICLE INSPECTION. Vehicle inspection shall include all hours of an officer spent and miles traveled on vehicle inspection work, including lights, brakes, and other unsafe mechanical defects which are not coincident to the regular patrol duty as described in paragraph 1.

10. SCHOOL BUS INSPECTION. School bus inspection shall include all hours and miles traveled of the officer devoted to this work, except any hours which may be spent on the regularly assigned beat coincident to the duties of patrolling as per paragraph 1.

11. SPECIAL HIGHWAY PROTECTION. This item shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by officers on special patrol duty, which assignments are not based on the rule laid down in paragraph 1 but for the purpose of giving special protection for vehicles and persons traveling the highway.

12. ESCORT DUTY. Escort duty shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in preparing for and serving as escort for any purpose.

* Covering rule states: Rule 3, "Type of Duty." In the column captioned "duty" will be inserted the number for a given type of duty as indicated by the list on the inside cover of this book. Example: If escort duty as defined under No. 12 has been performed for two hours on the 4th day of the month, then No. 12 shall be inserted in first blank space in column captioned "duty" and the figure 2 put in the appropriate date column and the miles traveled on that duty inserted on the same horizontal line under the appropriate day.

13. TRAFFIC SAFETY EDUCATION. Traffic safety education shall include miles traveled and all hours of the officer which are devoted to speaking at public gatherings, at schools, or preparing articles for publicity when so ordered. Likewise, shall be included all time spent in the care of exhibits at fairs, etc., and any other similar type of duty where the fundamental purpose is safety education.

14. SQUAD MEETINGS AND SCHOOL ATTENDANCE. This item shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in going to and from the place of squad meetings and inspections when such moving to and from shall not be regular patrol duty as described in paragraph 1. The time of the officer in attendance at the squad meeting or inspection shall be included under this item. Likewise, the time going to and from or attending the highway patrol training school, special school where permission has been granted for attendance on patrol state time, and schools conducted within the squad by the commanding officer shall be shown under this heading.

15. COURTS. This item shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in going to and from court attendance when such going to and from shall not be regular patrol duty as described in paragraph 1. It shall also include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in checking courts for disposition of citations or in any other manner, including testifying or waiting to testify.

16. REGISTRATION DUTY. Registration duty shall include all hours spent and miles traveled by the officer in this type of work other than those accounted for in brief service, paragraph 4, when such duties are not performed on the regularly assigned patrol duty beat as described in paragraph 1.

17. OFFICE DUTY. Office duty shall include all hours of the officer spent and miles traveled, if any, in clerical or other work at the office, when specially detailed to such type of duty by the commanding officer.

18. OTHER DUTY. Other duty shall include all other duty hours and miles traveled, if any, of the officer which are not included in any of the foregoing paragraphs.

NOTE.—Explanation of the type of duty shall be made on the reverse side of the report to cover each entry under this item.

19. ADMINISTRATIVE (FIELD). Shall include all hours devoted and miles traveled by district inspector, captain or sergeant to matters pertaining to the administrative portion of their duties in the field. Illustration: Personnel investigation, surveying traffic, checking officers on beats, etc.

20. ADMINISTRATIVE (OFFICE). Shall include all hours spent in office by district inspector, captain, or sergeant devoted to conferences, study of reports, planning and preparing reports, etc.

NOTE.—Time spent in actual clerical preparation of special reports or orders shall be included under paragraph 17.

21. ON CALL (RAIN). This item shall include all hours which officers spend at their homes or other places on call for emergency during storms. Time devoted to other duties during storms will not be included in this item but only that time when the officer is forced to remain inactive due to lack of proper type of transportation.

MANPOWER

The IACP, Traffic Division, has developed methods for determining the minimum number of city police officers needed to perform certain traffic activities. The effectiveness of these methods has been demonstrated in many cities of various sizes throughout the Country during the past several years. Estimation of minimum number of state officers needed to perform these activities is made by adjusting the formulae to state conditions. The following discussion follows in principle the reasoning contained in our report of the study made of the California Highway Patrol in 1940.

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATION

The number of city officers needed for on-scene accident investigation is found by using the following formula, where X equals the number of men needed and Y equals the number of fatal accidents per year.

$$X = \frac{Y}{5} \times 2 \text{ plus relief}$$

However, in cities, one fatal accident represents at least 185 other accidents. Nationwide experience indicates that for every fatal accident, there are approximately 35 personal injury accidents and 150 property damage accidents. (Thus, the accident frequency ratio is given as 1:35:150.) Higher speeds and other conditions of rural traffic results in a higher percentage of accidents resulting in loss of life than in cities. Nationally, the ratio of rural accidents is approximately 1:20:20. Considering certain characteristics of rural travel in California, it is estimated that a ratio of 1:15:20 is approximated. Thus, one fatal accident on the rural roads of California represents one fifth as many accidents as a fatal accident in a city. To investigate all accidents, one fifth as many men would be needed for the same number of fatal accidents. However, the rural officer faces difficulties not encountered in the city, such as: longer time needed to answer calls; as he frequently works alone, and assistance is ordinarily not readily available; it takes longer to arrive at the scene of an accident; longer time needed for investigations and for cars to reach the scene of the accident. A reasonable estimate is that it takes rural officers twice as long, on an average, to investigate accidents as it does the city officer. Including these factors in the formula, it becomes:

$$\text{Minimum number of officers needed} = \frac{\frac{Y}{5} \times 2}{5} \times 2 = \frac{4Y}{25}$$

TRAFFIC LAW ENFORCEMENT

Traffic law enforcement must be maintained at a level sufficiently high to act as a deterrent to violations and potential accidents. Experience in other states and the present state traffic problem indicates that the minimum enforcement index which will accomplish this is 10. The enforcement index is the ratio of fatal and personal injury accidents to the number of convictions, with penalties, secured for hazardous traffic violations. This means that there should be 10 such convictions for each fatal and personal injury accident occurring upon the rural roads. In this connection, experience must be taken of the fact that a certain number of arrests do not result in convictions. The minimum acceptable standard is that convictions should be secured in 80 percent of traffic cases.

The number of arrests needed to maintain an enforcement index of 10, where the yearly number of fatal accidents is represented by Z, can be indicated:

$$\text{Arrests for hazardous violations} = Z + (15Z) \times 10 + 10\%$$

To find the number of full time men needed to maintain this enforcement level, it is only necessary to divide the above by a number representing the arrests made by a typical officer in a year. Under the existing conditions existing in California—such as volume of traffic, weather conditions, climate and season—it is reasonable to expect that sergeants and traffic officers will, on an average, make two arrests for hazardous violations during each eight-hour tour of road duty, or 790 in the 365 days of the year. The above formula thus becomes:

$$\text{Men needed} = \frac{Z + (15Z) \times 10 + 10\%}{790}$$

Report of Interim Committee Created by "An Act to Create an Agricultural Research Study Committee, Provide for Its Powers and Duties, and Making an Appropriation," Approved March 12, 1946 (Chapter 144, 56th (1st Ex.) Session

This interim committee was appointed to meet with and participate in the activities of the Agricultural Research Study Committee created by an act passed at the first extraordinary session in 1946 to study matters relating to research in agriculture and related industries.

The Agricultural Research Study Committee met a number of times and held hearings throughout the State. It received oral statements from 291 people representative of most of the 140,000 farms throughout the State. It received 179 written reports from industries, farm organizations, state and federal agencies, and individuals. Over 2,000 requests for research were recorded.

The Agricultural Research Study Committee has embodied the results of its studies and its recommendations in a Report on Agricultural Research in California to the Governor and the Legislature, and a supplemental report.

Your interim committee herewith presents said report and supplemental report and recommends that the same be printed as a public document.

Problem 1. Beet Leaf Hopper Control

Beet Leaf Hopper Control as considered herein is primarily directed to the control of weedy hosts which serve as off-season breeding areas and as supplementary to the regular insect control program of spraying perennial hosts in the foothill areas on the west side of the San Joaquin Valley.

DISCUSSION

Beet Leaf Hopper Control, through spraying late fall, winter and spring concentrations in certain canyons and adjacent areas on west side San Joaquin Valley with insecticides has been effective in reducing intensity of beet leaf hopper flights into the northern end of the San Joaquin Valley and Sacramento Valley.

Constant checking of adjacent valley floor areas to observe host plant growth and off-season breeding of beet leaf hoppers has revealed the need each season for varying expansions of the regular spraying program to check breeding on such outside areas. This also involves a more complete suppression of weeds which serve to harbor the hoppers and the curly-top disease transmitted by them.

1945 was a bad year because outside spots had ideal growth and involved an increase in Beet Leaf Hopper population which could not be coped with because of insufficient money and machinery. This fall (1946) an emergency allotment from the Department of Finance permitted spraying outside hazardous areas (9,000 acres). This is indicative of the need for intensive control of Russian thistle and other weedy hosts to give more permanent effect to the winter spraying program.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends:

Since the Legislature has established a policy of cooperation in beet leaf hopper control as an aid to growers of sugar beets, tomatoes, melons, beans, flax, etc., through spraying certain perennial hosts for directly killing the insect concentrations thereon, on the basis that such perennial hosts upon which the insect regularly overwinters are located in remote protected canyon areas—

- (a) Away from cultivated areas;
- (b) On lands operated by livestock people who suffer no ill effects from beet leaf hoppers; and
- (c) Where spraying by individuals is impractical because of the nature of the areas involved and the type of equipment required;

(1) That the added problem of more permanent control of Russian thistle hosts growing upon land intermediate between the cultivated crop area and the regular over wintering points be undertaken to aid in more complete protection to the crops of the San Joaquin, Sacramento, and Salinas Valleys by removing host plants from areas of the San Joaquin Valley proved by seasonal inspections to serve as focal points for the beet leaf hopper to breed upon and spread from;

(2) That there be added to the appropriation for the State Department of Agriculture $60,000 for conduct of a special weed control program (mainly against Russian thistle); and

(3) That wherever local official or private cooperation in such control program can be developed, that it be utilized to the greatest extent possible.

EXHIBIT NO. 2

Recommendations for a Long-Range Program of Beet Leaf Hopper Control

The beet leaf hopper is one of the most harmful of insect pests, not due to its own depredations, but because it is the primary vector for curly top, a virulent virus disease attacking sugar beets, tomatoes, cantaloupes, watermelons, honey dew and other melons, flax, spinach, small white beans, cucumbers, peppers, swiss chard, pumpkins, squash, beets, turnips, cabbage, various vegetable, flower and field crop seeds, and other minor crops.

This disease either kills plants completely or limits their growth so that yields are greatly reduced.

The major breeding grounds of the beet leaf hopper in Northern California are the eastern slopes of the Coast Ranges between the Salinas and San Joaquin Valleys from the Altamont Pass on the north to the Tehachapis on the south. From these breeding grounds, the hopper migrates in all directions for distances ranging from 10 to 250 miles, depending upon temperatures and prevailing winds.

The migrations of the beet leaf hopper occur during the months of April, May and June. In the late summer and fall months, the beet leaf hopper propagates and multiplies on certain host plants. During October and November, they return to the breeding grounds in the Coast Ranges where they over-winter.

Efforts to control beet leaf hopper numbers were first undertaken by the sugar processing companies. The objective of the sugar companies was to protect the major sugar beet producing areas, from the Sacramento Delta north, and from the Salinas Valley north to Napa. Beginning in 1931, the sugar companies undertook an annual program of spraying the breeding grounds and the eradication of host plants. In 1943, the spraying portion of the program was terminated because of the development of partially resistant strains of sugar beets, and because the sugar beet companies did not feel they should be called upon to carry the load for all susceptible crops.

In this year the work of spraying the breeding grounds was undertaken by the State Department of Agriculture as the result of appropriations by the State Legislature for this purpose. ($15,000 per year in the biennium 1943-45; $21,500 per year for the biennium 1945-47.)

Since 1943, the sugar companies have continued to police the areas in which they had previously controlled the host plants in order to keep the numbers of host plants to a safe level.

The area where host plants have been kept under control by the sugar companies consists of approximately the northern half of the breeding areas of the beet leaf hoppers. In the southern portion of the area, no effort has been made to reduce host plant numbers. Due to a favorable series of years, the number of host plants, particularly the Russian thistle, have increased tremendously in this southern area. This has caused the building up of beet leaf hoppers to the level that has resulted in very serious losses during 1946, totaling in the neighborhood of several millions of dollars in the San Joaquin and Salinas Valleys.

Conditions for the growth and propagation of the host plants and beet leaf hoppers have continued favorable through 1946. In order to reduce the hazard of excessive crop losses in 1947, the additional amount of $25,000 has been allocated from the Governor's emergency funds to undertake an expanded spraying program in this area this fall.

If no control work were done, all counties in the San Joaquin Valley would be seriously affected by the ravages of the beet leaf hopper practically each year; in the delta area and in the Sacramento Valley counties, moderate to serious damage would be occasioned each year; in the coastal area, from Los Angeles County north to Napa County, moderate to serious damage would be caused at periodic intervals. The work done by the sugar companies and the State Department of Agriculture has substantially limited damage in the coast counties, delta area, Sacramento Valley and portions of the San Joaquin Valley in recent years.

The most significant effect of the beet leaf hopper problem on California agriculture is not the actual damage sustained, although this is serious, but because substantial areas of the State are unable to grow susceptible crops due to the certainty or possibility of loss from early top infection.

Until recent years producers have avoided planting otherwise lucrative crops in many areas.

Losses which have been suffered in the last few years have been partially due to the change in land use which has occurred, for example, tomatoes in the King City area and melons, tomatoes and flax in the west side of the San Joaquin Valley.

Due to the expansion of susceptible crop production in new areas, and the influence of this expansion on the scope of the problem, a much more thorough and extensive program is needed.

The problem, which was once a sugar beet problem, has, because of the new pattern of crop production, become a problem of a great many crops and a great many producers of those crops.

A spraying program in an area where no host plant control program has been undertaken is of temporary character. The only permanent solution to the problem is the reduction of host plants to the point at which an annual policing job will keep such host plants under control. Under such conditions a supplemental spraying program will assure the prevention of crop losses.

That the control of host plants is an entirely feasible and economical procedure has been demonstrated by the sugar companies' work in the northern portion of the area. Control of Russian thistle is effective because of the relatively short viability of the seeds.

On the basis of estimates made by competent authorities it is estimated that this program could be accomplished under the following schedule of expenditures:

1. During the first two years, $60,000 per year for host plant control plus an annual spraying cost equal to current appropriations for this work.
2. During the next two years, $50,000 per year for host plant control plus an annual spraying cost equal to current appropriations for this work.
3. During the next two years, $40,000 per year for host plant control plus an annual spraying cost equal to current appropriations for this work.

4. In succeeding years, $20,000 per year to police the areas adjacent to the breeding grounds to prevent reestablishment of the host plants, plus an annual spraying cost not exceeding, and possibly less than, the current appropriations for this work.

These estimates are based upon present wage and materials costs.

The research work on this problem has been completed. Present knowledge of the problem is such that unanimous agreement exists among entomologists as to the proper means of attacking the problem.

The total cost of undertaking a comprehensive beet leaf hopper control program is relatively small in relationship to the total crop production which would be protected from curly top thereby and a small fraction of the losses which have been suffered by growers at periodic intervals.

On various occasions organizations and groups have sought to develop ways and means by which such a program might be undertaken. No machinery exists by means of which grower or industry assessments may be made for such purposes.

Since the source of the beet leaf hopper infestations are located at considerable distances from the major areas in which damage is caused, and on the property of other owners who are not themselves adversely affected, there is little opportunity for individual producers or groups of producers to take any effective action to protect themselves against loss.

This whole problem affects a very large number of growers producing a great many crops, the concerns engaged in processing and shipping of such products, the persons employed in such producing, processing and shipping concerns, and the general economy of substantial areas of the State.

In view of these considerations the problem takes on an aspect that is much broader than that of the interest of a small group, and becomes one of general public interest and concern.

Since production of many commodities in a number of areas of California is uneconomical because of the risk of crop loss by reason of curly top infection, a program of permanent control is of major significance in connection with an enlarged agricultural industry in the State in line with our increased population. The crops which are affected by curly top are relatively intensive crops providing a large measure of employment in agriculture and in related industries as compared with the more extensive crops which would otherwise be produced on these lands.

Maximum utilization of much of the land for which water will be supplied by the Central Valley Project will be dependent upon a comprehensive program of beet leaf hopper control.

In view of these circumstances may we respectfully recommend that consideration be given to the introduction of legislation which will provide for a program of beet leaf hopper control by means of host plant eradication, such program to be administered by the State Department of Agriculture from funds appropriated for that purpose from the General Fund or from funds accumulated from race track operations.

EXHIBIT NO. 3The Beet Leaf Hopper—Its Influence on Agricultural Production and Methods of Control

The beet leaf hopper is one of the most harmful of insect pests, not due to its own depredations but because it is the primary vector of curly top, a virulent virus disease attacking sugar beets, tomatoes, melons, flax, spinach, small white beans, cucumbers, swiss chard, pumpkins, squash, peppers, beets, turnips, cabbage, horse radish, and other crops.

1. Breeding Grounds and Life Cycle

The major breeding grounds of the beet leaf hopper in Northern California are the eastern slope of the Coast Ranges between Salinas and San Joaquin Valleys, from Altamont Pass in the north to the Tehachapis on the south. From these breeding grounds the hopper migrates in all directions for distances ranging from 10-250 miles depending upon prevailing winds. This migration occurs during the months of April to June.

In the late summer and fall months the beet leaf hopper propagates and multiplies upon certain host plants, most important of which is Russian thistle. During October and November large numbers return to the breeding grounds in the Coast Ranges.

2. Influence of Beet Leaf Hopper on Agricultural Production

During years in which substantial numbers of beet leaf hoppers move from the breeding grounds into farming areas, the production of susceptible crops is not economically feasible. Prior to the initiation of control programs this migration occurred most virulently at four to eight year intervals. In 1919 extensive losses of melons and sugar beets occurred in the San Joaquin and Salinas Valleys. Following this experience, sugar refineries in Corcoran and Visalia were moved into other areas. Other serious outbreaks occurred in 1900, 1905, 1914 and 1925. In intervening years substantial losses were sustained but not comparable with those years of high infestation.

Since the initiation of spraying and Russian thistle control measures in 1931, the cyclical character of high beet leaf hopper infestation and consequent losses of crops has been interrupted. Crop losses in recent years, with the exception of 1946, while of substantial proportions, have not been comparable with those suffered in peak years.

In substantial areas of the State it is not economically feasible to produce many crops which would otherwise be grown in the area, because of the possibility of curly top infection. The crops most susceptible to curly top are sugar beets, tomatoes, melons, flax, small white beans, cucumbers, spinach, swiss chard, pumpkins, squash, peppers, beets, turnips, horse radish and cabbage. The development of resistant sugar beet varieties has reduced losses and permitted the production of sugar beets in areas where they would otherwise be impractical, but the resistance is not complete and substantial losses may be incurred even though resistant seed is used.

3. History of Control Efforts

Control programs were first undertaken in 1931 by the sugar processing companies. Up until 1943 the sugar companies undertook an annual program of spraying for beet leaf hopper control and host plant eradication. In the latter year, the spraying portion of the program of the sugar companies was terminated because of the development of more resistant strains of sugar beets and because the sugar companies did not feel they should be called upon to carry the load for all susceptible crops. The sugar companies have continued to police the areas north of Cantua Creek in which Russian thistle has been controlled, in order to prevent broad scale reinfestation.

In the Biennium 1943-45, $15,000 per year was appropriated to the Department of Agriculture for spray control work. In the Biennium 1945-47, $21,500 per year was appropriated for this purpose.

4. Methods of Control and Their Effectiveness

Two major control methods for beet leaf hopper have been developed.

One of these is the annual spraying of the most infested portions of the breeding areas with kerosene and pyrethreum. In the past year some DDT spray has also been used with considerable effectiveness. This does not involve the wholesale spraying of large areas, but rather the spraying of those areas where populations of the hoppers are concentrated, particularly certain host plants preferred by the hoppers during the spraying season.

The second control method is the eradication of the Russian thistle, by grubbing, rail drags, burning, cultivation and other means. This program is now the primary effort of the sugar companies. A similar program has been undertaken by a group of melon producers in the west side of Fresno County. As a result of past efforts, Russian thistle infestation from the area between Altamont Pass and Mendota has been largely eradicated, so that annual activity may be confined to policing work each year. In the area from Mendota south to the Tehachapis no work on Russian thistle has been done and in recent years this has been the principal source of major migrations.

The only permanent solution to the problem is the reduction of Russian thistle and other host plants in the whole area to the point at which an annual policing job will keep such host plants at a minimum, so that an annual spraying operation will reduce beet leaf hopper numbers to a safe level.

A spraying program in combination with Russian thistle control has been adequately demonstrated to be an effective, practical and economic means of keeping beet leaf hopper populations at a sufficiently low level that extensive losses may be prevented.

A spraying program in an area where no Russian thistle control program has been undertaken is of temporary effect. Its effectiveness is dependent upon the thoroughness with which the spray program is carried on. No guarantee can be made that a spray program by itself will be adequate to prevent losses. But a comprehensive spray program will substantially reduce populations of beet leaf hoppers in the breeding areas treated and will substantially reduce the possibilities of losses being suffered.

It should be reiterated that a permanent solution to the problem must provide for both host plant eradication and annual spraying of the major breeding areas.

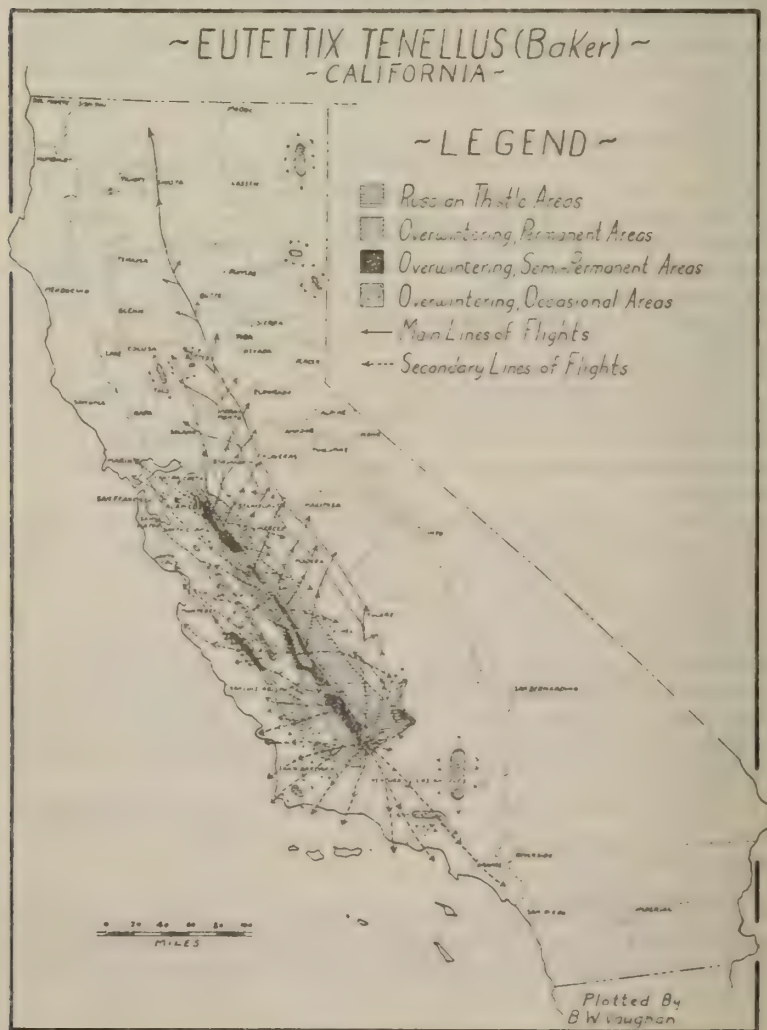

5. The Present Situation

At the present time the beet leaf hopper population in the areas south of Mendota have increased to a very dangerous level jeopardizing 1947 crop production in extensive areas of the San Joaquin and Salinas

Valleys and adjacent areas. Under favorable wind conditions very serious losses could also be caused in the delta area and Sacramento Valley.

In 1946 heavy losses of sugar beets, tomatoes and melons have been experienced in the San Joaquin and Salinas Valleys.

Conditions up to now (during 1946) have been favorable for continued increase in the beet leaf hopper population of the breeding areas. Barring weather conditions this winter that will reduce populations of the hoppers, present indications are that numbers, and consequently crop losses, in 1947 will exceed those suffered in 1946. The present situation is more serious than that in any previous year with the exception of 1919 and 1925, and may be comparable with those years.

Problem 2. Plague Suppression in Field Rodents

The need continues for the suppression of field rodents in areas where they are reported by the official state health agency to harbor diseases transmissible to humans.

In 1929 it became the policy of State Government to establish the function and responsibility of the State to take the lead in suppressing reservoirs of bubonic plague found in field rodents in cooperation with the counties by designating the State Department of Public Health to make all necessary field investigations to determine areas upon which plague infection was harbored by such rodents and designating the agricultural regulatory agencies to control or eradicate the rodents. This policy has since been set forth in Section 139.5 of the Agricultural Code. The purpose was to prevent duplication or overlapping of effort by two or more agencies in field rodent control and to have the trained personnel of each established agency made responsible for the work for which it was best equipped and qualified.

In the field rodent control work this involved the development of a cooperative agreement plan with county board of supervisors whereby

- (a) On agricultural areas a three-way plan of cooperation was established with State, county, and landowner sharing in cost of rodent control, and
- (b) On recreational areas a two-way plan of cooperation was established with State and county sharing equally and whatever assistance possible developed from federal sources where federally owned or controlled areas might be involved, the federal agency assuming the role of landowner.

DISCUSSION*

When the program was originally developed (1929) 10 central coast counties were involved.

New survey techniques available to health agencies in their field investigations brought in additional counties starting in 1933 and adding new areas and new counties in the San Joaquin Valley, Northeastern California, and Southern California, and recreation areas at or near Lake Tahoe, Huntington Lake, Lake Almanor, and in the San Bernardino Mountains.

Minor increases in allotment of funds were insufficient to carry the field rodent suppression phase commensurate with the expanding areas reported by the State Department of Public Health and in the manner required for human safety.

Wartime location of camps where armed services personnel were being trained or housed, required especial attention to areas where these camps were situated on or near plague foci, especially in San Diego, Riverside, San Luis Obispo, Monterey, and Lassen Counties.

Increases in labor costs and higher expense for bait and poisonous agents further reduced the scope of the program until the State Department of Agriculture was not fully able to meet its share of cooperative responsibility. In 1945 and 1946 two entirely new counties were added to the list; namely, Merced and Orange, and in many counties enlargement of old areas and finding of new foci placed the program in the position of having to catch up materially with this work and restore it to the sound basis it was established on during the 1930's if and when additional funds became available. In 1946, the number of counties in which plague infection had been reported reservoired in field rodents totaled 34.

Specialized techniques in rodent control have had to be developed since the variety and kind of animals involved require greatly varied seasonal treatments.

The June 28, 1940, issue of the United States "Public Health Reports" (Vol. 55 No. 26) show that plague infection has been proved from 14 species of ground squirrels (in California this would include four species of Digger squirrels, the Oregon, Balding, golden mantled and soft haired ground squirrels), house rats, wood rats, chipmunks, flying squirrels, tree squirrels, marmots, kangaroo rats and field mice and in fleas, lice and ticks from such field rodents.

More recently the State Department of Public Health has found an increase in the incidence, in humans, of relapsing fever reservoired in chipmunks in the Lake Tahoe region and has indicated that this disease will be reported under Section 139.5 of the Agricultural Code.

Two other transmissible diseases also involved, but until recently fairly well suppressed since their rodent hosts ordinarily were involved in the plague area operations, are Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia.

A whole new field of rural rat control seems fair to be opened up with the extension of reports of murine type typhus in certain Southern California areas.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends that:

There be included in the 1947-48 Budget of the State Department of Agriculture approximately $50,500 additional funds for more intensive field rodent suppression on the established cooperative bases on areas where the official health agencies have determined same to harbor diseases transmissible to humans in order that the program may be carried out in accordance with long established state policy. This is insurance against recurrences of epidemics of any of these diseases in humans and will permit continuance of an established program either:

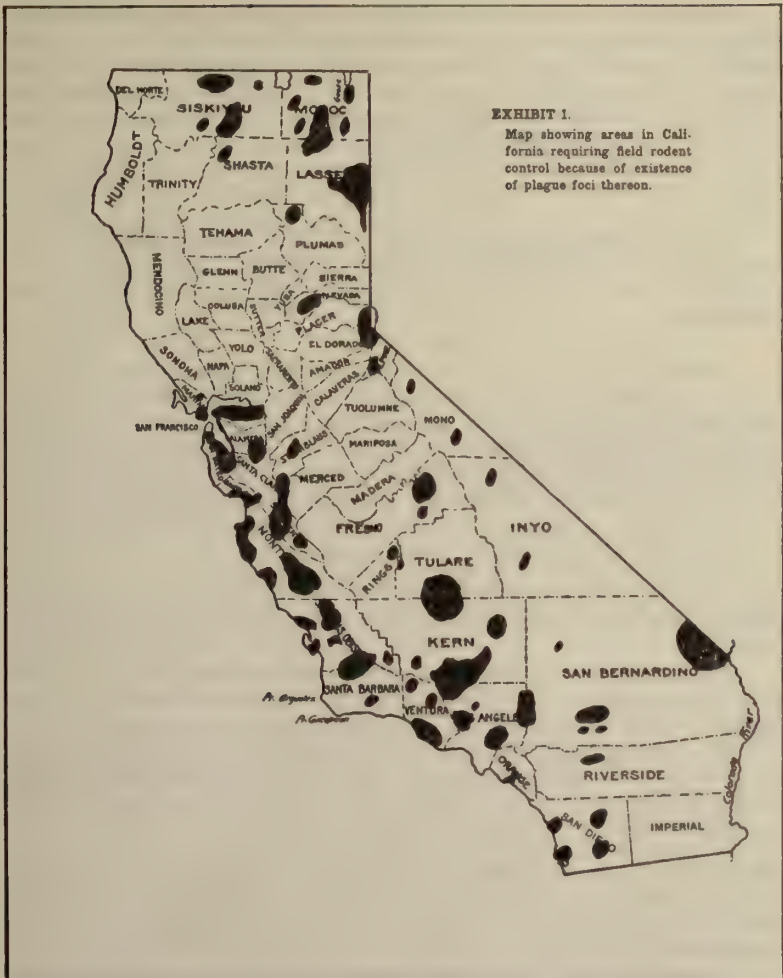

(a) To eradicate field rodents on areas hazardous to humans because of the rodent harbored transmissible diseases thereon, or

(b) To so reduce the field rodent population so that transmissible disease transfer between such rodents be reduced to a minimum thereby to safeguard against large active reservoirs of such diseases continuing as a menace to human health.

Problem 3. Incipient Pest Survey

To provide increased protection for California agriculture against the establishment of new agricultural pests which may be present in the State but unsuspected, or which may be introduced in the future and not susceptible to prompt discovery by present means, it is necessary to establish a method by which these incipient pests may be discovered before becoming established and spread.

A representative of the California State Department of Agriculture stated that because of inadequate provision made, the State Department of Agriculture was unable to conduct consistent and regular surveys designed to encounter newly introduced pests.

Frequently new pests are discovered accidentally but more usually they have already become well established in a locality before the official agencies encounter them or have them reported. Expenditures must then be made to determine by survey, what the outward limits are. In such instances the expense for survey on a single pest far exceeds the cost of maintaining a regular continuing survey program.

The California State Board of Agriculture many years ago by resolution set forth the desirability of being prepared for conducting regular surveys.

The county agricultural commissioners have requested action by the department not only to develop such a continuing survey program, but also to have men available to train county employees in techniques and procedures.

DISCUSSION

Assembly Bill 828, Fifty-sixth Session (1945) would have provided an appropriation for the State Department of Agriculture to develop a state-wide survey of agricultural crops, other hosts, and areas hazardous because of proximity to transportation termini for incipient infestations of newly introduced insect and/or plant disease pests of potential economic importance to agriculture. This measure, carrying an appropriation of $79,880, passed the Assembly as amended but died in Senate Finance in the closing days of the session.

Two outstanding instances have been recorded recently of insect pests that might have been discovered in their incipient state had there been a survey made such as is contemplated by the request for the present legislation.

The oriental fruit moth had probably been existing in the State for several years before it was discovered in the more or less routine of investigation by the Orange County Agricultural Commissioner's office.

The Mexican bean beetle, long feared by California agriculture but not discovered through established pest inspection methods, probably existed in Ventura County for some time prior to its discovery and when found already involved approximately 2,000 acres.

The control measures directed at both these insect pests has cost the State of California hundreds of thousands of dollars spent to prevent the further spread of these insects. Had there been earlier discovery, costs might have been greatly reduced and better opportunity existed for eradication attempts.

"Quick Decline" of citrus trees reported in 1944 required an immediate survey by state and county agricultural regulatory officers at considerable expense in order to delimit the area to be subjected to quarantine restrictions pending determination by research pathologists of the nature and cause of the disease.

While the difficulty was discovered several years ago and research has continued progressively since that time, it is quite probable that had an incipient pest survey been available, it might have been discovered even prior to the date on which it was recorded.

The baffling nature of the difficulty involved extended research which also might have been speeded up had the discovery been made earlier.

Several years of concentrated study on the part of the College of Agriculture entomologists and pathologists was necessary before it was established that citrus quick decline was a virus disease. Much of this time might have been saved had this condition been discovered earlier.

In brief, the proposed budget request by the Department of Agriculture will provide sound agricultural insurance and a proper investment by the State to protect its agriculture against new injurious insects and plant diseases before they get out of hand and present difficult if not impossible control problems.

Areas of hazard are :

- (a) Vicinity of maritime ports,
- (b) Vicinity of airports landing foreign planes,
- (c) Railroad freight car holding and transfer yards,
- (d) Plant Introduction gardens.

Staff needed :

- (a) Three trained entomologists,
- (b) Three trained plant pathologists.

Lack of such survey work makes hasty surveys necessary when new pests are discovered. Such surveys become obsolete as soon as specific allocations become exhausted or regular funds made available to the department are required for other work.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends that :

Provision be made in the budget of the State Department of Agriculture for a regular staff of not less than Three assistant entomologists

Three associate pathologists to do special survey work to encounter incipient pests in areas of greatest hazard, and to train county agricultural commissioner staff members in methods and procedures to use in the counties.

The amount to be appropriated should be approximately $48,000 a year.

May 21, 1945

Recommendations of the California State Board of AgricultureRE: Pest Survey Work of the State Department of Agriculture

Upon motion of James Armstrong, seconded by Frank Shay, the following recommendation was unanimously adopted by the California State Board of Agriculture in regular meeting, with eight members present, at Sacramento, California, Monday, May 21, 1945:

That the California State Board of Agriculture does recommend the passage by the Legislature of Assembly Bill No. 828 (Erwin) in order that a speedy determination may be made of the extent of the existence of "Quick Decline of Citrus" in all citrus-producing counties of this State, and

Be it further recommended, that additional funds be provided to the State Department of Agriculture in order that a continuous pest survey program may be undertaken for the following reasons:

(1) To discover and prevent the spread of seriously injurious pests and diseases as soon as possible after their introduction, thereby to prevent more extensive costs in control or eradication campaigns;

(2) To eliminate the necessity of requesting special appropriations for special surveys for particular pests at each session of the Legislature through the establishment of a policy of including such a project in future budgets in accordance with past recommendations of this board and of the agricultural industry generally;

(3) To develop, through such a continuous survey project, a basic insurance against destructive spread to large agricultural areas by early discovery, thereby also to enable research agencies to perfect control and eradication procedures while the pest or disease is still of limited distribution and particularly in the event eradication should prove to be impossible.

Exhibit No. 2SPECIAL PEST ERADICATION (XXVII)

(Resolution Adopted by the California Agricultural Economic Conference* Held at Stockton, California, December 17 and 18, 1940)

WHEREAS, The agricultural industry of this State is periodically subjected to the hazard presented through the introduction and spread of new or serious pests, such as the olive scale, Hail's scale, and Pierce's Disease of the vine, and other serious pests, as same are defined in Section 100 of the Agricultural Code, and which are still of limited distribution yet of state-wide significance, and

* The California Agricultural Conference succeeded in 1940 to the functions and purposes of the long-established Fruit Growers and Farmers Conventions, attended by representative growers, livestock men, farm organization officials, leaders of groups affiliated with agriculture, and by county, state and federal agricultural administrators and leaders in agricultural research, marketing, and other phases of California agriculture.

WHEREAS, The establishment and spread of such pests within the State would place annual fixed charges against the various agricultural industries affected, which industries form the basis of the major portion of the state's income, therefore be it

Resolved, That the California Agricultural Economic Conference assembled in Stockton, December 17 and 18, 1940, respectfully requests the Legislature and/or the several counties of this State to appropriate sufficient funds for use of the proper agencies to adequately survey the necessary areas of the State for any such new pests, and to control or eradicate them when found.

Rohwer Warns of Plane-Borne Insects

Insects hitch-hiking in airplanes from one part of the world to another is an international problem which must be solved without delay through international cooperation of quarantine officials, it was pointed out today to the American Association of Economic Entomologists at Richmond, Va., by S. A. Rohwer, Assistant Chief of the United States Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine.

Rohwer declared the new kind of insect menace to public welfare and agriculture is so important that quarantine officials of all countries must meet this challenge of the air age now upon us. The need for solving this important problem is so great, he said, that it might have far-reaching effects on the present regulations on international air traffic. In the past, quarantine procedures have generally concerned products which might carry the pests, rather than the pests themselves.

Procedures which can be used to end the present threat of importation of insects by air from one country to another will not be simple, Mr. Rohwer said. The procedures may possibly involve the services of Customs, Immigration, and Public Health. These federal agencies are also concerned in the responsibility of protecting the health and resources of this Country. Quarantine officials, he said, must not lose sight of this fact in the setting up of necessary procedures for proper regulation of international air traffic.

The people of the United States have already had considerable experience with foreign insects which have been accidentally introduced into this Country, Mr. Rohwer said. The American public already knows, he said, what it costs to support such insects as the Japanese beetle, European corn borer, gypsy moth, oriental fruit moth, Mexican bean beetle, the boll weevil, and white fringed-beetles. He pointed out that the 1945 damage to the cotton crop caused by boll weevils was 639,000,000 pounds of cotton, or 1,278,000 bales which were worth $170,000,000. He also pointed out that the European corn borer cost the American farmer $22,700,000 in 1944, and nearly $37,000,000 in 1945. These estimates do not take into account the cost of trying to control the pests, Mr. Rohwer said, and are only a few examples of what foreign insects might cost if they became established in our country.

Air traffic into the United States during the past few years has increased at a rate much greater than many people realize. During the third quarter of 1941, a total of only 2,829 airplanes in international traffic were inspected upon landing in the United States by Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine inspectors. This number increased to 17,494 such inspections during the same quarter in 1946. During the 1946 period, 259,954 passengers came into this Country by international air traffic. There were 94,898 pieces of cargo subject to plant quarantine inspection on these planes. There were 8,409 lots of plant material intercepted because of plant quarantine restrictions.

There are no known infestations of foreign insects arriving by air so far in the United States. Mr. Rohwer said, but he pointed out that "it is not too much to assume that the future will disclose the presence of pests new to areas under circumstances indicating that the infestations resulted from artificial movement which occurred many seasons before discovery." He explained that a considerable number of live insects, which were killed immediately, have been found by bureau inspectors on planes just arriving in the United States. It already appears that a grasshopper native to the plains of Texas has been transported by air to the vicinity of John Rodgers Navy Air Field on Oahu, in the Hawaiian Islands. Another grasshopper has been found on Navy air fields of Kwajalein Island, in the Marshalls. Truk, in the Carolines, and Majiero, in the Gilberts, all of which are long distances from known areas of infestation.

"After the development of the gas-propelled insecticide aerosol in 1942 (the aerosol 'bomb' was developed by Bureau scientists in cooperation with industry) this method of applying the insecticide has been the standard required treatment of planes coming from certain areas," Mr. Rohwer said. But he pointed out, "Useful as this requirement may be, it has been recognized that the treatment was not fully effective, especially because it was not possible to reach all parts of the plane in flight and predeparture or post-arrival treatments did not exclude possibility of infestation after treatment, or escape before treatment on arrival."

Another aspect of the problem of insect hitch-hikers on airplanes is of importance to the American public. It is the problem in which injurious insects may be transported in airplanes from an infested portion of the country to another uninfested area many miles away. Japanese beetles are notorious hitch-hikers on airplanes. This insect now infests only certain areas in eastern United States. They do not occur on the Pacific Coast but have been recovered repeatedly in airplanes leaving for uninfested places from eastern airports.

Problem 4. Market News Service Expansion

Market news service by the Federal-State Market News Service of the State Department of Agriculture, has been requested for sections not now served or for sections only partially served, to meet their special or particular needs as related to the efficient marketing of their agricultural products on highly competitive markets.

DISCUSSION*

Extension of official market information and market news dissemination by the present Federal-State Market News Service has been requested from several areas of California to provide:

A citrus market news office in Los Angeles,

A year-round office in Kern County,

A year-round office in Fresno,

A seasonal office at Blythe,

A seasonal office at Tule Lake-Klamath Falls region, and which, if completely supplied, would involve a total additional appropriation of $58,200.

The committee also received evidence to support two proposals for expanded service included in the State Department of Agriculture's budget for the Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year:

Oakland fruit and vegetable truck unload census, and Expanded dairy and poultry market news service at Los Angeles; the total requested for these services in the submitted budget for the Department of Agriculture Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year being $4,100.

The amount for all services requested but not now rendered, would total $62,300.

The Bureau of Market News, State Department of Agriculture, under the terms of a cooperative contract with the United States Department of Agriculture, has provided market news service for California agriculture for the past 25 years.

This contract has provided the means of combining the nation-wide facilities of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state-wide facilities of the California Department of Agriculture so that both departments might render a more effective, complete and integrated service.

A leased wire teletype system of approximately 8,000 miles is maintained by the United States Department of Agriculture to provide constant direct daily contact with all the important terminal and shipping point markets of the Nation.

The California Department of Agriculture maintains a radio telegraph system to connect California offices with this teletype service.

Eight terminal market and four shipping point market offices are maintained in California on a year-round basis and two shipping point market offices on a seasonal basis.

Market reports are issued on five commodity groups:

Fresh fruits and vegetables;

Livestock, meat, and wool;

Dairy and poultry products;

Hay, grain, and feed; and a

Miscellaneous group including dried fruits, edible nuts,

honey,

dry edible beans, and foreign commodity reports.

* Summarized from statements made by Ralph Bunje representing San Joaquin Valley growers and shippers and by representatives of the State Department of Agriculture in response to the Committee's request for data.

These requests are set forth in detail, together with supporting data, in the various exhibits included within the Appendix.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends that:

1. Provision be made through specific legislation or by augmentation of the budget of the State Department of Agriculture at the Fifty-seventh Session of the Legislature to approve and finance the market news needs at:

- (a) Los Angeles (citrus),
- (b) Bakersfield (all reported crops produced in the area),
- (c) Fresno (all reported crops produced in the area); that further study be given to the requests from
- (a) Palo Verde Valley, and
- (b) the Tule Lake-Klamath Falls area, the latter to be worked out with the assistance of the Federal Government.

2. The budget of the Department of Agriculture for the Bureau of Market News be increased in the amount of $45,200 to undertake the necessary services for the areas approved; and

3. An additional $13,000 be added to the Department of Agriculture budget upon a more definite showing of need for the two areas designated for further study.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

December 9, 1946

Honorable George J. Hatfield, Chairman
Joint Interim Committee on Agriculture and Livestock Problems
P. O. Box "C," Newman, California

DEAR SENATOR HATFIELD

In accordance with a request made of us at your meeting in Los Angeles on November 11, 1946, to supply a list of the several additional services requested to be rendered by the Bureau of Market News in the State Department of Agriculture, and which are not provided for in the budget for the current Ninety-eighth Fiscal Year, we attach a summary thereof.

This matter arose in connection with the recommendation before your committee by Mr. Bunje (San Joaquin Agricultural Labor Bureau) that full-time Market News services be rendered at Fresno.

We present an estimate of the amount of money which would be required to be added to the budget for the Bureau of Market News in the event that all of these requests were complied with. We also list those portions of the features requested for which provision was made in the proposed budget for the coming Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year.

Very sincerely yours,

/s/ W. C. JACOBSEN
Assistant to the Director

Additional Services Requested for Market News Work Not Now Provided for in Current Budget (98th F.Y.)

1. Citrus Market News Service at Los Angeles. The United States Department of Agriculture and the California Department of Agriculture have been requested by representatives of the California Fruit Growers Exchange, the Mutual Orange Distributors, the American Fruit Growers, and the Independent Growers and Shippers Association, to establish on a joint basis a complete citrus market news service at Los Angeles, in connection with our present fruit and vegetable office. The proposal contemplates the publication of a daily distribution report for a hundred markets for oranges, grapefruit and lemons.

2. Establishment of a year-round Market News office in Kern County as a substitute for the four-month seasonal office normally operated during the potato marketing season. The requests have been correlated through the office of county agricultural commissioner and have originated from the farm bureau and growers and shippers who believe that the seasonal office is insufficient to meet Kern County needs.

3. Establishment of a year-round Market News office at Fresno. In addition to the request made by Ralph Bunje of the San Joaquin Valley Labor Bureau, information was received in July from H. C. Asher, voicing the desire of a group of growers and shippers. This need has also been publicized editorially in the Fresno Bee. The office has been requested to go beyond the current reporting of grape, tree fruit, and melon market. An office is presently operated seasonally from July through mid-November.

4. Establishment of a seasonal fruit and vegetable Market News office at Blythe (for Palo Verde Valley). The California Vegetable Growers, Inc., and other of the larger producers and shippers in the Palo Verde Valley, believe that the perishable industry centered at Blythe is large enough to justify the establishment of an office locally, rather than to depend upon long-distance telephone communication with the Brawley Market News office. Their contention has been developed that a number of the commodities, particularly developed in that area, are of outstanding quality and bring a premium both delivered and on an f.o.b. basis.

5. Establishment of a seasonal potato and onion Market News office for the Tule Lake-Klamath Falls area. Requests for an office in this area have come to both the State Department of Agriculture in California and the extension service in Oregon, headquartered at the Oregon State Agricultural College at Corvallis. The federal cooperating agency has also been contacted, largely with the view to having such service sponsored jointly by the Federal Government and each of the states of Oregon and California.

6. Expansion of East-Bay area services. Because of the heterogeneous manner in which truck unloads of fruits and vegetables in the Oakland market had to be developed, provision has been requested for a reliable daily truck unload census of fruits and vegetables arriving in Oakland and adjacent East-Bay markets. Receivers and other users of the information have requested more reliable reports. Presently the department relies upon two night-watchmen employed by the Oakland Wholesale Fruit and Products Association, individual dealers whose receipts are not compiled by the watchmen, chain store organizations, motor truck lines, agricultural inspection officials, and others. The requirements of the employees in the San Francisco office do not permit more than a casual checking of the truck unloads reported in the East-Bay area.

7. Expansion of Market News reports on eggs, dressed and live poultry, cheese, dry milk and casein, and related products at Los Angeles. The removal of wartime marketing restrictions in the marketing of dairy and poultry products, and the return of sales to the established wholesale channels of trade, has indicated the necessity that more time and effort be given to these products in the Los Angeles market. The request for this work originated with the Poultry Department of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, and has been supported by representatives of the industries involved. Truck receipts of dressed and live poultry in Los Angeles are large, and an important factor in the making of daily market price. These receipts are not now reported. Los Angeles is one of the largest and most important dairy and poultry markets in the Nation, both in area and in volume. The present one-man staff devoting time to this field cannot adequately keep abreast of the growing and changing market.

II

Estimated Cost of Completely Furnishing Additional Market News Services Requested and Not Now Rendered

1. Citrus Market News Service at Los Angeles. It is estimated that proposed services will cost between $15,000 and $16,000 per year, to be borne equally by the United States Department of Agriculture and the California Department of Agriculture. The State's share on such a 50-50 basis would be $7,500 to $8,000 per year to cover salaries of one marketing specialist, three clerks, materials and supplies, rent, telephone, and other operating expense. For the beginning year there would be an additional out-lay for office equipment, making the department's share approximately $9,200.----- $9,200.00
2. Kern County office would require the services of a marketing specialist, an intermediate stenographer-clerk, and a radio telegraph operator. Office furniture, equipment, radio equipment, rent, and an automobile would make an estimated total of approximately $18,500.----- $18,500.00
3. The proposed Fresno office salaries and wages for one marketing specialist, one intermediate stenographer-clerk, and one radio telegraph operator, plus operating and equipment costs similar to those indicated for Kern County above would be approximately $17,500.----- $17,500.00
4. Seasonal office at Blythe. A market news specialist is undoubtedly intended to service Blythe to quote f.o.b. prices for the period December through July each year. Currently the Blythe office develops information by long distance telephone to Yuma and Phoenix, Arizona, and Brawley, California, which are served by Time Wire Service (TWX) Teletype. Apparently the simplest method would be to connect Blythe to this circuit for simultaneous transmission. Salaries and wages for a marketing specialist and an intermediate typist clerk, plus the wire extension, and automobile and miscellaneous equipment, would require approximately $7,750 in order to initiate this service. ----- $7,750.00
5. Seasonal Market News office, Tule Lake-Klamath Falls. If this service were to be developed on a three-way cooperative basis with the Federal Government and the State of Oregon, the best estimate would be $4,150. Salary and wages and operating costs for the seasonal office (seven months) from our experience should approximate $6,000 per year. Divided among three agencies, this would cost each agency $2,000, or if only California and the United States Departments of Agriculture participated, $3,000 each. In addition, the first year there would be nonrecurring equipment costs of $3,000—$3,500 to be divided on such basis as was mutually agreed upon to establish the office. Estimated at ----- $5,250.00

6. East Bay area truck unload service. This would involve the addition of a Fruit and Vegetable Marketing Assistant to service the Oakland and adjacent East Bay markets, to make a daily truck unload census of fruits and vegetables arriving at that point. One additional employee at $2,400 per annum, the minimum salary allowed for the grade, should cover the cost.----- $2,400.00
7. Los Angeles dairy and poultry products expansion. The service requested here can be accomplished by the addition of an assistant marketing specialist to make more complete and effective reports on the products involved. Such specialist would also be used to furnish both emergency and vacation relief at the San Francisco and Los Angeles offices. As a state employee alone, the salary would be $3,397 per year. If accomplished on a cooperative basis with the Federal Government, the State Department of Agriculture salary factor would be $1,700.----- $1,700.00

Summary of Additional Cost for One Year

1. Citrus at Los Angeles-----	$9,200.00

5. Tule Lake-Klamath Falls-----	5,250.00
6. East Bay Area-----	2,400.00

Extension of Market News Service Activities in Proposed Budget for (99th) Fiscal Year 1947-48

Provision has been made in the Department of Agriculture budget for the coming fiscal year for the two last items referred to in the preceding lists. These were considered as being necessary to adequately and accurately round out work now being conducted in the areas involved, and were essentially in keeping with the instructions of the Department of Finance relative to budget preparation. These are as follows:

Items (6) and (7) in Preceding Lists I and II

(6) East Bay Area (Truck Unload Census)

Request has been submitted for the employment of one
 (1) additional fruit and vegetable marketing assistant at $2,400 per annum, to operate under the supervision of the San Francisco office.----- $2,400.00

(7) Expansion of Los Angeles Poultry and Dairy Products Market News Reports

Provision has been submitted for the employment of one (1) additional assistant marketing specialist, dairy and poultry products, at a minimum salary of $3,397 per annum, of which the California Department of Agriculture would pay one-half, or about $1,700. -----

$1,700.00

Additional request actually submitted in budget for Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year.-----

FRESNO BEE

Growers and allied interests owe it to themselves to back up a current Fresno County Chamber of Commerce Agricultural Committee request for continuous operation of the Federal-State Market News Service local office.

This seasonal accommodation now afforded by the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture should go well beyond reporting the grape, tree fruit and melon market trends.

The San Joaquin Valley currently is a major truck garden area. Besides producing a wide variety of vegetables, it also enjoys a forefront place in the potato, grain and cotton picture.

These are day to day items filtering into consumer markets. They alternately are year around products. The volume shipments and the outlet prices thereof warrant daily accountings at the production source.

Service rendered by the Market News agency from August to about middle November has been virtually invaluable for many years, so far as the vineyard industry is concerned.

It also has been of equal worth, in season, all the way from the New England potato belt, through the South, Arizona and to the Salinas district lettuce fields.

San Joaquin Valley harvest and market seasons are practically without interruption, however. There is hardly a month when one crop or another is not predominate.

Immediately available reports on going prices and the movement of these crops are due the local producers, the shippers and the middlemen.

They definitely deserve the year around service the chamber group is urging.

Problem 5. Weed Control Research

The extent of weed damage to California crops is so great that the State and Federal Governments, cooperating with various other public agencies and with private interests, are called upon constantly to wage a relentless battle against weeds, a number one enemy of successful farming in this State and Nation. The most important requirement in this continuing battle is that weed control research shall keep pace with progress in various scientific research fields.

DISCUSSION*

Weeds are costing California agriculture an estimated $70,000,000 annually. This figure includes losses due to agricultural crop depletion to the livestock industry through poisonous plants and through damage to range lands that have in many areas been completely taken over by weedy species, unpalatable to both cattle or sheep; extensive costs of recleaning seed and feed due to weed seed impurities; and increased cost of maintenance on highways, railways, irrigation and drainage canals.

The interest in weed control in California has increased by leaps and bounds, especially during the last four or five years during which time there was a request for increased crop production, and the costs of weed control were realized by those attempting to comply with the request for greater production. The lack of basic information to assist the growers in this expanded program was keenly realized and, due to the fact that only incomplete data was available, farmers experienced many crop losses by using recommended materials that had not been thoroughly tested. Therefore, research in the field of weed control is of greater importance today than ever.

The development of organic chemicals as herbicides has introduced many complex problems. These new materials, such as the growth-regulating substances 2, 4-D and many derivatives, have so far proved to offer the most promising phase of chemical weed control yet found. Doctor Krause of the University of Chicago has stated at the North Central States Weed Control Conference, held in St. Paul, that there are at least a hundred different possibilities in the use of these growth-regulating substances for weed control through various organic combinations. This fact points up the problem that confronts research throughout the Country. Without research and field trials, and with the industry introducing these new materials without adequate tests, the users of these weed control herbicides are bound to experience difficulties that will prove costly.

The experiment stations generally are understaffed for two reasons:

- (1) The funds allocated for weed control research are inadequate.
- (2) Due to this first fact, chemical companies have offered greater inducement for some of the best trained workers to enter commercial research fields.

The general public may continue to get the benefits of the results of the commercial research continued by these men, but too often this information is withheld for competitive reasons. Funds should be made available to experiment stations for expansion and for the purpose of retaining well trained research men so that the results of their investigations may be used for the benefit of the general public throughout the State and Nation.

The funds allocated for weed research in the Experiment Station at the University of California, Davis, are approximately $13,000 annually. Such limited funds will support not over two research workers, with travel and other essential expenses. Certain moneys have been made available by commercial interests to assist in the research work of the university experiment station, but even with these the field cannot be covered.

* Summarized from statements presented by grower representatives at El Centro and staff members of the State Department of Agriculture.

The experiment station has attempted to carry on research on many subjects, but due to lack of personnel, adequate greenhouse and laboratory facilities, it has been impossible to give any one subject the attention it should receive.

RECOMMENDATIONS

The committee endorses and supports the continuation and expansion of weed control and related research work in this State, particularly by the State Experiment Station and College of Agriculture in the investigational field and in cooperation with private interests, and by state and county agricultural regulatory officers as it relates to their responsibilities as set forth in the Agricultural Code to combat agricultural pests.

In addition, the committee gives particular support to those present subjects of weed research and investigation mentioned in the report made to the Governor by the Agricultural Research Study Committee. To make this program effective, it is further requested that more adequate equipment and greenhouse and laboratory facilities as well as additional personnel be recommended.

Problem 6. Changes in Egg Law

A revision is needed in sections of the Agricultural Code relating to egg standardization with particular reference to tolerances for eggs failing to meet minimum weight specifications.

DISCUSSION*

The proposal of the poultry department of the California Farm Bureau Federation is to increase the tolerance for eggs failing to meet the large and medium size classifications and to clarify the application of the tolerances as applied to eggs in cartons containing only one dozen eggs each.

The present difficulty is that the handlers of eggs, in some instances, were apparently unable to fully comply with the present egg standardization provisions insofar as weights are concerned.

The industry is not fully united as regards to definite affirmative action by the Legislature. There is an indication that the proponents and opponents of this change may compromise their differences and agree on a program of action which the Legislature through appropriate committees may consider during the present session.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends that:

In view of the divergence of opinion in the industry regarding the best way of solving this problem, and the lack of a specifically recommended amendment from the industry, action be deferred until such time as the opponents and proponents of a change in the law agree on a definite proposal for consideration by the Legislature.

* Summarized from presentation made at Santa Cruz by the Poultry Department of the California Farm Bureau Federation and representatives of producers groups.

Problem 7. Poultry Meat Grading Law

At present, neither the Federal nor State Departments of Agriculture require any inspection or certification as to the wholesomeness and grade of dressed poultry or poultry meat products offered for sale in California or moving in interstate commerce. A certain amount of inspection is required by local health and food inspection officers and is performed in connection with their regular duties.

A voluntary grade labeling and certification plan is operated under the auspices of the United States Department of Agriculture. This covers dressed poultry in plants maintaining experienced graders licensed by the Federal Government.

A grading service under state supervision has been suggested by poultry producers and handlers for a number of years, but a unified approach to the solution of the problem has only recently been developing.

DISCUSSION*

On the basis of the presentation of this problem to the committee, there is in prospect legislation to establish grades for dressed poultry. Discussion indicated that no final conclusion had, as yet, been reached as to whether or not such a grading law should be mandatory or permissive in character. The tendency, apparently, has been to make the operation of such a law dependent upon adherence to quality of the product indicated by a label or stamp attached thereto. As a consequence, enforcement would be to require the quality to be in accordance with the grade label on the product, which grade label would be in accordance with the several grades established. It was indicated that the administration of the act would be delegated to the State Department of Agriculture. It has come to the committee's attention that interested groups are planning to correlate the varying viewpoints at a further conference in January, 1947, after which this committee will be advised of their conclusions.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends that:

Those interested in developing legislation for state grading of dressed poultry and poultry meat make their specific request to the Fifty-seventh Legislature for such legislation after having reached substantial agreement as to the form such legislation should take.

Problem 8. Inspection at Rabbit Slaughtering Plants

It has been proposed to the committee that the State provide a system for the inspection of rabbit slaughtering plants in California.

DISCUSSION†

Various California rabbit raising groups have from time to time discussed the advisability of state inspection of rabbit meat offered for sale to the public and plant inspection to insure proper sanitation in and about structures used for rabbit slaughter. The industry is now of considerable proportions, particularly in Los Angeles County, involving several million dollars annually. Currently, there is some local inspection based upon authority to maintain wholesomeness in quality of foods. Stamps are issued by Los Angeles City to cover sales and to aid in defraying costs of that inspection.

* Summarized from statements made at Santa Cruz on October 31, 1946, by representatives of the Poultry Department of the California Farm Bureau Federation and others.

† Summarized from statement made at Los Angeles by Robert Batchelder, Manager, California Rabbit Cooperative, Bassett, Calif., and from other preliminary data.

The specific request made to the committee was that provision be made to blanket rabbits into the regular state meat inspection provisions.

The present state law relating to meat inspection specifically exempts rabbits. New legislation would, therefore, be required before any voluntary or compulsory inspection of rabbits and rabbit slaughter houses under state authority could be accomplished.

Facts are set forth in a resolution of the Sonoma County Rabbit Breeders Association indicating the views of that group on the need for rabbit meat and slaughter plant inspection. In order to gain complete knowledge of all of the factors involved and the probable expense of adding the type of inspection requested more definite knowledge is needed. At the time of the preparation of this report only incomplete data is available.

Information has been received from the Department of Agriculture that rabbits are slaughtered commercially under a great variety of conditions. Based upon experience in meat inspection a trained inspector working in a plant having efficient equipment, including a moving chain for carcasses with a synchronized moving table with pans for viscera, could probably inspect between 250 and 300 rabbits per hour. Such a plant with modern assembly line type of operation will probably slaughter not less than 2,000 animals per day. The cost per animal under such a type of operation would probably not exceed 1 cent. However, in other types of plants where all of the handling must be done manually the cost could conceivably attain many times that amount.

Any preliminary estimate obviously does not include the inspection of the many small private plants where small numbers of animals are slaughtered on farms by producers. Such animals could only be checked for wholesomeness at retail outlets if reasonable inspection costs were to be maintained.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Your committee recommends that:

The State Department of Agriculture be requested to develop further information on this subject and report back to the committee in March, 1947.

Resolution dated October 8, 1946, from the Sonoma County Rabbit Breeders Association requesting investigation and proper legislation to correct unsanitary conditions and poorly equipped slaughter houses, and to provide for proper inspection.

SONOMA COUNTY RABBIT BREEDERS ASSOCIATION

MRS. WILLIAM OAKS, Secretary
Route 4, Box 68
Petaluma, California

At a regular meeting of the Sonoma County Rabbit Breeders Association held on October 8, 1946, the following resolution was duly adopted:

WHEREAS, It has been brought to our attention that domestic rabbits slaughtered for meat and offered for sale for human consumption in the State of California are being sold under improper and unsanitary conditions, to wit poorly equipped slaughterhouses, sold in a water soaked condition, delivered in unsanitary containers. We, the Sonoma County Rabbit Breeders Association, respectfully request that this condition be investigated and proper legislation be enacted at the next meeting of the California State Legislature to correct the above mentioned conditions and provide for proper inspection on same.

Opinions of Legislative Counsel

OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL
SACRAMENTO 2, CALIFORNIA, January 8, 1947

Honorable Harold J. Powers

*Chairman, Senate Committee on Rules
State Capitol, Sacramento, California*

Quarters for the Legislature—No. 752

DEAR SENATOR POWERS: You have asked us to advise you who has charge of the assignment of quarters, including quarters for the Legislature, in the State Capitol and, also, what changes are necessary so that the Legislature can assign quarters for itself, its committees, and its assistants.

It is our opinion that the power to assign quarters in the State Capitol is vested in the Department of Finance. In an opinion prepared by this office under date of February 15, 1944, a copy of which is enclosed, we have traced the history of the control of the State Capitol from the time of its construction to the present time. Section 13160 of the Government Code now contains the provision formerly in Section 716 of the Political Code which authorizes the Department of Finance to establish rules and regulations for the government and maintenance of state buildings and grounds.

We believe that legislation can readily be prepared which would require the Department of Finance to provide the Legislature with such quarters in the State Capitol as either house may request, or in some other similar manner enable the Legislature to obtain adequate space.

In the brief time available to answer your question, we have been unable to give consideration to whether or not a legislative body has any inherent powers to obtain office space for itself and its assistants without the enactment of legislation.

We also call your attention to the fact that the Joint Committee on Remodeling the Capitol was created by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 68 of the last regular session. If it is deemed desirable to give further study to the problem here involved, you may wish to continue the existence of that committee.

Very truly yours,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel

Jurisdiction of the Legislature over State Capitol Building—No. 279

You have inquired as to what jurisdiction the Legislature or either house thereof has over the State Capitol building, or any portion of it.

Article XX, Section I of the Constitution of California provides that the City of Sacramento shall be the seat of government in this State. There is, however, no constitutional provision with regard to the exercise of control or management of the State Capitol and other state buildings.

By Stats. 1856, page 110, the Legislature enacted a bill to construct a State Capitol in Sacramento. It appointed the Secretary of State, as ex officio superintendent of public buildings, and two others as commissioners to contract for its erection.

The Capitol was to be of such a plan and of such dimensions as to furnish suitable chambers for holding the sessions of the Senate and Assembly, together with not more than 20 committee rooms, and not more than 25 other rooms for the use and accommodation of the various state officers, Supreme Court and Library.

This act was superseded by Statutes of 1860, page 128, and amendments thereto, which also provided for the construction of a State Capitol at Sacramento.

This act, however, made no detailed mention of the use to which the building was to be put, but authorized the Board of Commissioners, composed of the Governor, Secretary of State, and three others to adopt such plans as in their judgment would best serve the purposes of the State.

In 1872, the Legislature enacted Section 412 of the Political Code making the Secretary of State the Superintendent of the State Capitol, with the duty of keeping it in good order and repair.

However, by Section 366 of the Political Code, the Governor, Secretary of State, and Treasurer still constituted the Board of State Capitol Commissioners, functioning under the Act of 1860, providing for the erection of the State Capitol.

By Statutes 1873-74, page 437, the Legislature gave to the Secretary of State authority to appoint certain employees for the Capitol building; and to the Board of State Capitol Commissioners authority to appoint designated employees for the Capitol grounds.

By Statutes 1905, page 177, the Board of State Capitol Commissioners was authorized to remodel and repair the State Capitol building as outlined in the act.

In 1911, the Legislature revoked the authority of the Secretary of State to act as Superintendent of the State Capitol under Section 412, and by Statutes 1911, page 571, added Sections 716 and 717 to the Political Code, authorizing the Governor to appoint a Superintendent of Capitol Building and Grounds, with power to promulgate rules and regulations for the government of the Capitol building and grounds.

The Board of State Capitol Commissioners was abolished by Statutes 1921, page 1022. At that session (Statutes 1921, page 1027) the powers and duties of the Superintendent of Capitol Building and Grounds, under Sections 716 and 717 of the Political Code, were transferred to the newly created Department of Finance.

By Statutes 1927, page 449, the Legislature retransferred the duties of the Superintendent of Capitol Building and Grounds, under Sections 716 and 717, to the Department of Finance by new Section 681.

In 1933 (Statutes 1933, page 1273) the Legislature repealed Sections 716 and 717, and added a new Section 716, authorizing the Department of Finance to appoint and fix the salary of the Superintendent of Capitol Buildings and Grounds; with further power to the department to establish rules and regulations for the government and maintenance of the Capitol buildings and grounds, violation of which constitutes a misdemeanor.

In 1937 (Statutes 1937, page 484) the Legislature extended the jurisdiction of the Department of Finance to include all state buildings and grounds, with power to appoint a Chief of State Buildings and Grounds, and to establish rules and regulations for the government and maintenance of all state buildings.

This authority has not been changed since 1937.

The Legislature has established its own rules regarding the press. Joint Rule 32, subsections (d) and (e) provide:

"(d) The press seats and desks in the Senate and Assembly Chambers shall be under the control of the standing committee of correspondents, subject to the approval and supervision of the Speaker of the Assembly and the Senate Committee on Rules. Press cards shall be issued by the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the Assembly only to correspondents properly accredited in accordance with the provisions of this rule.

"(e) One or more rooms shall be assigned for the exclusive use of correspondents during the legislative session, which rooms shall be known as the Press Room. The Press Room shall be under the control of the Superintendent of the Capitol Building and Grounds; provided, that all rules and regulations shall be approved by the Senate Committee on Rules and the Speaker of the Assembly."

The Assembly, by Assembly Standing Rule No. 37, provides that

"Members shall be assigned to desks by the Chief of the Bureau of Buildings and Grounds, and, so far as possible, he shall conform to the requests of members, giving due consideration to their seniority in point of service in the Assembly."

The authority granted to the Department of Finance by Political Code Section 716 to "establish rules and regulations for the government and maintenance of the state buildings and grounds" appears to give that department full jurisdiction over the State Capitol building. Any desired modification of that jurisdiction could, of course, be effected by appropriate legislation.

Very truly yours,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel

By Senator Hatfield:

Senate Resolution No. 24

Relative to congratulating Senator Jack B. Tenney upon his marriage

WHEREAS, During recent months while far from the restraining influence of his colleagues and cares of State, the esteemed Senator from Los Angeles fell victim to the darts of that small boy usually clad only in the bow with which he dispatches his arrows tipped with irresistible love potions; and

WHEREAS, The Members of this Senate take great pleasure in seeing this redoubtable knight of California's Upper House thus subdued and safely embarked upon the sea of wedded bliss; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of California, That the Members of this Senate heartily congratulate Jack B. Tenney upon his marriage, and extend to Jack and his lovely bride felicitations and good wishes for many happy years; and be it further Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate is requested to transmit a suitably prepared copy of this resolution to Senator and Mrs. Jack B. Tenney, which resolution, subject to the convenience of the State Printer and the availability of artistic talent, might well bear an appropriate border of gentle turtle doves resting on olive branches, as a constant reminder to this high flying eagle of the vast southern district that he is now a domesticated bird content to nestle on his own perch.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received, read, and, on motion of Senator Deuel, ordered printed in the Journal:

Opinion of Legislative Counsel

OFFICE OF LEGISLATIVE COUNSEL

SACRAMENTO 2, January 10, 1947

Honorable Charles H. Deuel
Senate Chamber, State Capitol
Sacramento, California

COUNTY SUPERINTENDENTS OF SCHOOLS—No. 715

DEAR SENATOR DEUEL: We have your request of January 8, 1947, asking us the effect of the adoption of Section 3.1 of Article IX. of the Constitution, especially as to the effect in Butte County where the charter fixes the salary.

Section 3.1 of Article IX reads:

"Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution to the contrary, the Legislature shall prescribe the qualifications required of county superintendents of schools and shall fix their salaries, and for these purposes shall classify the several counties in the State."

This amendment clearly requires legislative action and makes such action superior to any preexisting law, either charter or ordinance, fixing the qualifications and salaries of the county superintendents of schools.

The effect of a constitutional amendment transferring power from the board of supervisors to the Legislature was considered by the District Court of Appeals in In re Cole (1909), 12 Cal. App. 290, the only California case we can find on the subject. The court held the amendment to be prospective and not retrospective in its operation, and did not expressly, nor by implication, affect any prior legislation by the board of supervisors valid at the time of its enactment.

In reaching its conclusion the court adopted the rule applied at the adoption of the Constitution, stated in Article XXII:

"That no inconvenience may arise from the alterations and amendments in the Constitution of this State, and to carry the same into complete effect, it is hereby ordained and declared:

"Section 1. That all laws in force at the adoption of this Constitution, not inconsistent therewith, shall remain in full force and effect until altered or repealed by the Legislature; and all rights, actions, prosecutions, claims, and contracts of the State, counties, individuals, or bodies corporate, not inconsistent therewith, shall continue to be as valid as if this Constitution had not been adopted . . ."

The court held that the same rule must apply to amendments.

Until the Legislature can act upon the matter, it would appear that the county superintendents of schools shall have the same qualifications and receive the same salaries provided by charter or ordinance at the effective date of the constitutional provision.

Consequently, no legislation is required to keep present charter provisions and ordinances in effect until the Legislature enacts a qualification and salary act.

Very truly yours,

FRED B. WOOD, Legislative Counsel
By JOSEPH L. KNOWLES, Deputy

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered:

By Senators Hatfield, Cunningham, Breed, Brown, Burns, Busch, Carter, Collier, Crittenden, DeLap, Desmond, Deuel, Dillinger, Dilworth, Donnelly, Gordon, Hulse, Jaspersen, Judah, Keating, Kraft, Mayo, McBride, McCormack, O'Gara, Parkman, Powers, Quinn, Rich, Salsman, Slater, Surton, Swing, Tenney, Ward, Watson, Weybret, and Williams:

Senate Resolution No. 25

Relative to sending good wishes to Senator Jess R. Dorsey

WHEREAS, Senator Jess R. Dorsey has been ill and was unable to attend the sessions of the Fifty-seventh Legislature of California upon its convening January 6, 1947; and

WHEREAS, He is very greatly missed by his friends and colleagues in the Senate; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of California, That the Members of this Senate extend to Senator Jess R. Dorsey their sympathy in his illness; and be it further

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were received, read, and, on motion of Senator Kraft, ordered printed in the Journal:

ASSEMBLY CHAMBER, SACRAMENTO,
January 13, 1947

*Honorable Fred H. Kraft,
Senate Chamber, State Capitol,
Sacramento, California*

DEAR SENATOR KRAFT: Forty copies of the Assembly Health Care Investigating Interim Committee's report have this day been delivered to the Sergeant-at-Arms of your house and, if it meets with your approval, I desire that you request that a copy be distributed to each Member of the Senate.

As a former member of the committee you are well aware that it was the unanimous opinion of the committee that our studies be conducted along lines that would, to the extent possible in the time at our disposal, determine the measure of the expected incidence of claims arising under existing plans providing prepaid medical care and, also, some valid estimates of the probable costs of furnishing medical and hospital care.

All the arguments made on a social or political basis have been repeated time and time again—but this is a problem which must be settled on facts and not emotion.

A continuing study of the subject made by myself since the committee filed its report last July has convinced me of the fallacy of the argument that by increasing the size of the insured group the costs of providing the medical care can be substantially lowered.

Increasing the number of insured merely serves to balance selection and anti-selection—the morbidity rate or incidence of illness in every thousand persons, rich or poor, remains remarkably constant and is influenced more by climatic and seasonal conditions and the proportion of female and infant persons than by other factors.

The various tabulations and the actuarial studies contained in the report support the above contention and it is my hope that Members of the Legislature will consider these factors in drafting and presenting any bills bearing on the subject.

It is my sincere desire that the report will prove of value to the people of this State as we earnestly search for a possible solution to the problem.

Sincerely yours,

ERNEST R. GEDDES
Member of the Assembly, Forty-ninth District

LETTER OF TRANSMITTAL

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE, SENATE

January 14, 1947

*Hon. J. A. Beek, Secretary, California State Senate
State Capitol, Sacramento, California*

DEAR SIR: The Senate Interim Committee on Prepayment of Medical and Hospital Care, created pursuant to Senate Resolutions 131 and 165, Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature, transmits herewith to the Senate its preliminary report.

The members of the committee appointed pursuant to the resolution were Senators Arthur H. Breed, Louis Sutton, John F. Shelley, Chris Jespersen, and Byrl R. Salsman.

The committee was set up to study the problem of prepaid medical and hospital care for the people of California, and was created as a direct result of the widespread public and legislative interest taken in this subject during the Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature. Numerous public meetings and hearings have been held throughout the State during the Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature, and particularly during its February recess. Accordingly, the committee determined that little would be gained by further public hearings, but that it would be most helpful in a consideration of this controversial subject if a staff was employed to do the necessary research work and to carry on an investigation of the problem under the direction of the committee and according to the policies established by the committee. The committee, therefore, employed a research staff under the direction of Gordon Claycombe, of Oakland, and this staff has been at work on the problem for the past 18 months.

The committee fortunately secured the services also of Dr. Russel V. A. Lee, a member of the faculty of the Stanford University Medical School and head of the Palo Alto Clinic. Dr. Lee gave his services freely to the committee without charge and rendered excellent service as a medical consultant and advisor to the committee. He attended all meetings of the committee, conferred from time to time with members of the staff, and was in frequent consultation with the chairman of the committee. He did not, however, participate in the executive sessions of the committee, and had no part in a determination of the final recommendations submitted herewith.

The committee is especially grateful to the many individuals, state departments, and organizations cooperating with the staff and with the committee members. Their cooperation has indeed been most helpful, and an attempt has been made to acknowledge their contributions in an appropriate place in this report.

It is the committee's intention to continue the investigation during the present session of the Legislature, and the results of its future labors will be incorporated in any final report the committee may file.

Respectfully submitted.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Grateful acknowledgment is made to the many organizations and individuals who so generously contributed to the work of the committee and the research staff. While space limitations will not permit the listing of the names of all who have assisted, our appreciation is gratefully given for their cooperation.

The unstinting help given the committee and research director by Dr. Russel V. A. Lee, member of the Stanford University Medical School Faculty, and Medical Consultant to the Senate Interim Committee, was of inestimable value. Dr. Lee, serving without compensation and at his own expense, devoted hundreds of hours of work during the past year to conferences with the Committee Chairman and Research Director, to committee meetings and to reviewing, in detail, the material collected by the staff and to making certain independent studies and inquiries of his own in regard to the general medical care problem in California.

The committee is specially indebted to those individuals and organizations whose unselfish assistance in making special surveys and compilations, allowing analyses of their data to be made, furnishing invaluable information, reviewing manuscript material and making significant suggestions, made possible the extensive compilation of data set forth in the four volumes of "Study Materials" worked up by the staff for the committee's use and reference. INTRODUCTION AND HISTORY

This committee and the Assembly Health Care Investigating Interim Committee were established as a direct result of the widespread public and legislative interest taken in the subject of state-operated, prepayment medical care plans during the Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature.

The Senate Interim Committee on Prepayment of Medical and Hospital Care, created by Senate Resolutions 131 and 165, in order to inform itself adequately regarding the major issues of the problem and to have available valid factual information for the committee's study and deliberations, employed a research staff to compile, analyze and digest available factual data relative to the general problem of medical care for the people of California.

The staff did assemble, analyze and brief these data and, in addition, made original studies of the problem, in cooperation with private and state agencies, within the limitations of the committee's budget and the length of time allowed for the study.

The results of these studies have been compiled in four volumes of "study materials" which were furnished to each member of the committee. Indicative of the detailed survey made, a bibliography covering the contents of the "study materials" would contain over three thousand titles of publications and documents referred to during the course of this work. While the "study materials" are too voluminous for publication, at this time, some of the data contained therein are outlined in the preliminary report. The recommendations are, in general, based upon the data contained in the "study materials." The four volumes referred to above have been filed with the Secretary of the Senate.

At the invitation of the committee, Russel V. A. Lee, M.D., consented to serve as medical consultant to the committee. During the past year, in spite of a heavy schedule of work, Dr. Lee made himself available for conferences with the committee chairman, the research director, and for all committee meetings. He reviewed the study materials as they were completed and accompanied the research director to New York and Washington, D. C., where conferences were held with representatives of the various federal agencies concerned with the problem and with certain of the larger private, prepaid medical and hospital plan organizations. While Dr. Lee attended all committee meetings, he did not participate in the committee's deliberations in drawing up the recommendations set forth in this report.

The committee recognizes that the problem of adequate medical care for the people of this State is complex and that a staff and budget many times larger than that available to this committee could be devoted to a study of the problem. However, within the limitations of the time and funds available, the major issues, as outlined in this preliminary report and detailed in the "Study Materials," have been covered and have been materially substantiated by other state and national surveys.

The committee did not hold extensive public hearings, but relied upon the research staff to submit detailed data for the committee's study and deliberations. The committee met in Sacramento and San Francisco on a number of occasions to review the materials submitted and to guide the staff in matters of policy. During the course of the study, the Research Director held frequent conferences with the committee chairman and with the medical consultant.

In submitting this preliminary report, the committee does not hold that it is in any way definitive. The data developed during the study will, however, prove to be of value in a further consideration of this difficult problem.

SECTION I

CALIFORNIA SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC BACKGROUNDS

In considering the general medical care problems of a State, or Nation, it is necessary to develop certain basic social and economic data regarding the area under study, in order to intelligently determine:

- (a) The character, extent, location and severity of preventable and ameliorable illness;
- (b) The adequacy of existing medical care facilities;
- (c) The ability of the people as a whole and of special groups and communities to finance adequate medical care.

This basic data must be the foundation of any study endeavoring to determine, on a factual and practical basis, the existence and extent of unmet medical needs in a given community, and considering proposals for improving conditions and meeting the needs. These data are pertinent to this study because the physical well-being of a people depends upon a combination of such complex factors as heredity, education, occupation, income, housing, diet and family status, plus the caliber and extent of public health and sanitary measures and the availability of adequate and timely medical care. And such information is basic to any proposal to improve conditions and meet the need through a prepaid medical plan, whether private or governmental, voluntary or compulsory.

In evaluating the medical care problem in California, it is necessary to keep in mind that:

California, at the present time, has an estimated population of 9,250,000¹ people, made up of approximately 2,750,000² families. The State's population is growing and it has been estimated that, by 1950, the population of this State will be from 9,600,000 to 10,270,000 people.³

California population has a larger proportion of adults and old people (of actuarial importance to a study of this type in determining the incidence of illness among the population) of smaller size families and of more wage earners per family than is the case in most states.

Various areas of the State that are independent government taxation and service units are too thinly populated to assure the numbers required for the efficient and economical provision of various types of public services—including public health and medical care services—or a sufficient tax basis for financing such needed services. For example, the population of counties within the State varies from 250 to 3,584,000 people. Of the 58 counties in this State, 11 have a population of 10,000 or less. This fact is pertinent to this study because it is questionable whether counties with such a low population have the necessary economic basis to:

- (a) Support and maintain adequate county and/or general hospital facilities;
- (b) Support and maintain a full-time public health department;
- (c) Support and maintain adequate and necessary laboratory, X-ray and the auxiliary medical services required by present day medical science;
- (d) Attract adequate medical personnel, physicians and surgeons, dentists, nurses and auxiliary personnel to these areas and assure them adequate financial remuneration for their work.

California has approximately 4,000,000 people in its labor force—of whom, about 400,000 are in agriculture (seasonal and otherwise). Of these, 3,760,000 were in civilian employment in September, 1946,⁴ representing a level not far from the wartime high and it is estimated that more than 1,000,000 women are employed today—a higher level in number and proportion than obtained before the war. It is estimated that unless a prolonged and severe curtailment of industrial production should occur, employment in California can be expected to remain above 3,200,000 and unemployment would probably not rise above 650,000.⁵ The preponderance of evidence is against a serious “recession" or "collapse" occurring during the next two years. These data are pertinent to our study because all authorities are agreed that in considering proposals for a nation-wide, or state-wide, prepaid medical and hospital insurance plan that relatively "full employment" and an average high wage level (see below) is a prerequisite to the installation of any universal medical care insurance system.

While the total and per capita wealth and income of the people of California is larger than that of most states of the Union, we find that approximately 50 percent of our California families earn less than $3,000 yearly and 15 percent earn less than $1,500 each year.⁶

The income of California civilian residents in 1946 is estimated at 13.0 to 13.5 billion dollars⁷—an average of approximately $1,480 per capita—as compared with an estimated United States average of $1,200 per capita. It is also estimated that, barring a prolonged and severe curtailment of industrial production, annual income payments to civilian Californians will not drop below $11,000,000,000 and might possibly reach $14,000,000,000 or more within the next two years.⁸

The State, as a whole, and its people, on the average, are among the most favorably situated in the country because the State's geography, resources and industries constitute a substantial basis for securing a fair "American standard of living" for all the people of the State—including adequate medical care, whether through individual or cooperative enterprise, whether through commercial, philanthropic or governmental procedures. However, various groups of people, various classes of workers, various individuals and families, and various areas or communities of the State are so far below the average income, wealth and general welfare as to constitute a continuing subject for ameliorative activities by government.

The current remains of wartime savings, and the prospects for further savings within the next few years, on the part of a large number of the people of the State (as of the country as a whole) are so small as not to constitute a cushion of security against the economic shock of unanticipated serious illness and its possible "catastrophic" costs and consequences. Neither do the savings in most cases represent an amount large enough to assure them the ability to pay for adequate general medical care if they do become ill. Hence, private or public medical "relief," borrowings and reductions in other costs of living, will, of necessity, continue to be—as they have in the past—the primary resources of people of low and moderate income for meeting unexpectedly large medical expenditures. Based on national estimates, the findings of authoritative studies, 30 percent of California families have no savings at all. The average amount held as "savings," or "liquid assets" by the 70 percent who do have savings, is only $50. Ten percent hold 60 percent of all the savings, with an average of $3,400 per "spending unit" in that group. Further, in 1945, it was estimated that 17 percent of all the "spending units" in the State, or Nation, not only failed to save anything, but had to withdraw from their savings to meet current expenditures.⁹

⁹ National survey made at request of Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System by the U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics, 1946.

Innumerable surveys, both national and local, have shown that conditions in this State do not differ materially from conditions found throughout the Nation and in other "advanced" states—for example, New York—and hence, the findings of national and state surveys are pertinent to this study and are indirectly indicative of conditions existing in California. For this reason, national surveys and studies of other favorably situated states are given in this report.

SECTION II

HEALTH, SICKNESS, DISABILITY, MORTALITY

The committee finds that:

Illness is unpredictable as to its occurrence, its duration, its severity, and its consequences. This is true in the case of individuals and individual families, whether poor, moderately well off or well to do. However, illness is subject to the law of averages and it can be studied statistically, computed and forecast for groups, communities and areas.

Current illness and mortality from diseases other than those of old age are increasingly preventable, curable or ameliorable through effective public health measures and through proper and timely medical care.

Tremendous advances have been made in medical science and in public health and medical care techniques during the past years. These advances, however, have not been utilized to the fullest possible extent, nor have they been made available equally to all groups of the population or to all areas of the State—particularly rural and semi-rural areas.

If a method could be found to more equitably distribute medical care to all the people and to fully apply existing medical knowledge and advanced public health techniques to the general problem of medical care, there would be among the people of this State:

- (a) A lower mortality and morbidity rate;
- (b) Fewer severe illnesses;
- (c) Fewer early deaths due to preventable or ameliorable illness;
- (d) Less absenteeism from work and school;
- (e) A lower rate of rejections for military service among our young men;
- (f) Generally better health for children and adults;
- (g) And, ultimately, the large losses to the State's economic well being would be considerably lessened.

All authoritative studies reviewed by the committee have shown that this drain on human health and life is not equally distributed among the people and the communities and areas of the State. The low and moderate income groups have more severe, more lasting and—in proportion to their means—more costly illnesses than the nominally higher income groups. Within the low and moderate income groups there is:

- (a) More illness and disability among industrial than among other workers;
- (b) More in rural than in urban areas;
- (c) More among large than among small families;
- (d) More among the unemployed than the employed;
- (e) More in times of depression than in times of prosperity.

A list of all the tabulations used as a basis for the general findings reported by the committee above are given in full in Ch. II of the Study Materials. For the convenience of those wishing to research the original documents, the statistical tabulations are given by the name of the survey organization, i.e., "Committee on the Costs of Medical Care," "National Health Survey," etc., making the study. The number of each table is shown as well as the volume number of the publication and the page where each table can be found.

SECTION III

THE RECEIPT OF MEDICAL CARE

The answers to this question are basic to this study because the character and volume of medical service received per illness and the ratio of the disabling illnesses receiving medical care to those not receiving care constitutes the fundamental measure of the receipt of, or lack of, adequate medical care.

One comprehensive and reliable way to get the answers to this question would be through a contemporary, state-wide, sample survey of representative elements of the State's population in the various types of communities and areas. As such a survey was beyond the committee's budget and the time allowed for the study, it was necessary to rely on past medical care surveys in California and recent ones in other parts of the Country for such light as they could throw upon the problem in California. All available indications are that—if due allowance is made on the one side for the increased money income level of the population and, on the other side, for (a) the much smaller proportionate increase in medical facilities, personnel, etc.—especially in rural areas; (b) the much greater increase in the costs of medical care and in the general cost of living—the present day situation in California as to the receipt and distribution of medical care is comparable to that found in California surveys in 1929, 1933, and 1935, and not much different from that found in the Nation as a whole, by the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care in 1928-1931 and by the National Health Survey in 1935-1936.

A review and analysis of past surveys in California and the Nation, and recent studies made in other parts of the country, has indicated to this committee certain strong and weak points in present day facilities, organization, location, and financing of medical care.

The committee finds that:

Physicians' and hospital services are the major forms of medical care sought and obtained in California.

The extent of medical care of all types received by families and individuals generally varies with income and with area, population, density—i.e., the greater the income, the greater the medical care received; the smaller the population area, the smaller the volume of medical care received.

Medical care is obtained in least proportion to illnesses by the people who have the most illness—the indigent class and low income group.

Medical care is obtained to a much less extent—in proportion to illness—in rural areas than in the cities.

Reviewing the most widely recognized generalizations to come out of these studies, augmenting and substantiating the material enumerated above, the committee finds that:

- (a) All income groups rely primarily on the doctor for the treatment of illness. Physicians' services are sought and secured more frequently than any other type of medical care.
 1. The National Health Survey found that 81 percent of the cases of illness receiving medical care were attended by a physician. Fifty-three percent at home; 23 percent at the doctor's office; 5 percent at a public clinic. Only 4 percent of the cases of illness utilized a private nurse, and only 27 percent received hospital care.
 2. The Committee on the Costs of Medical Care found that: 79 percent of the illnesses were attended in the home, office, hospital or clinic by some type of practitioner; 15 percent to 37.5 per cent of the families surveyed received some hospital care in the course of the year; 4 percent of the poor received private nursing care while 33.3 percent of the well-to-do received such care.
- (b) The amount of medical care received depends, in large part, upon the amount of money that an individual or family has available to spend for medical care. As family income increases, there is an increase in the proportion of illness that receives medical attention. This is true notwithstanding the fact that low income families have more than average frequency, duration and severity of illness—illness which it is reasonable to assume should receive relatively more medical care—they receive actually less medical care than those in the higher income groups.
 1. The Committee on the Costs of Medical Care found that in 1928-31, families with incomes of $10,000 or more received more than twice as many physicians' calls as those with incomes under $3,000, and more than a third more than those with incomes between $5,000 and $10,000. Similar data were brought out by the National Health Survey and the California studies.

The Committee on the Costs of Medical Care, in its intensive survey of the problem, found that:

1. From 2.5 percent to 14 percent of the families surveyed, depending on their income and on the size of their community, received no medical care during the 12 months they were studied. Among poor families in large cities, small towns and rural areas, the percentage of families receiving no medical attendance whatever was from three to five times as high for the poor as for the rich.
2. Ten percent of the families surveyed reported illness, but not medical care.

3. The volume of medical care received varied with income even more than the proportion of families receiving medical care. For example, as income increased from the lowest to the highest income families;

	Percent
Physicians' calls increased by-----	145
Hospitalization increased by-----	87
Health examinations increased by-----	333
Dental services increased by-----	651
Refractions and/or eye glasses by-----	552

4. No doctors' services of any sort in the course of the year were received by 20 percent of the families with incomes under $1,200, while only 7 percent of the families with incomes over $10,000 received no care.

When surgery is needed, the need is generally so urgent that economic considerations usually play a very small part in the determination of whether or not it is to be obtained.

The Committee on the Costs of Medical Care study of the receipt of surgical services, received by the families surveyed, varied according to income—19 percent for family incomes under $2,000 yearly and 32 percent for families having incomes of $10,000 or over.

Further, the committee found, in regard to the receipt of private nursing care, that only 4 percent of the poor received such care while 33.3 percent of the well-to-do received such care.

The National Health Survey, studying disabling illnesses that lasted seven days or longer, found that:

1. The number of disabling illnesses lasting a week or longer which received any medical care was found to be 138 per 1,000 persons per year. The disabling illnesses that thus received any medical care at all were only 81 percent of all the seriously disabling illnesses found in the survey.
2. The difference between the percentages receiving medical care in the relief group and those having incomes of $3,000 or over, for all diagnosed illnesses, was found to be 10 percent. For communicable diseases, it was 20 percent and for colds and influenza, 18 percent.
3. The average amount of care received per patient by a doctor was less in the lower economic groups than among the higher income groups. This was true both of "home" calls and of total doctor calls, and it was true in every city-size group.

The California Depression and Health Survey, like the other national surveys, found in this State, as in the Country as a whole, that in spite of the higher disabling illness rates of low income families, such families obtained medical care for a smaller proportion of their illnesses than did families in the higher income groups. For example:

1. Among "relief" families, 72 percent received some sort of medical attention for disabling illness while 89 percent in the $3,000 and over income group received medical care. 59.1 percent in the lower group and 84.1 percent in the higher group received physicians' care. Physicians' calls per disabling illness were 2.8 to 5.2 for the low and high income groups respectively.

The California Medical-Economic Survey revealed that :

1. 56 percent of those surveyed with incomes of $3,000 and under, were receiving the medical care they needed on the day of the survey; 82 percent in the $3,000 and over income group were receiving such care; in the $10,000 and over income group, 90.4 percent were receiving care.
2. Receipt of dental care showed only 31 percent of those with dental needs receiving care; only 29.2 percent receiving such care in the $3,000 and under group; 62.1 percent receiving it in the $3,000 and over group; and 80.8 percent of those in the $10,000 and over group receiving care.

The next most critical observation to come out of these studies is that, within each income group, the percentage of illnesses which do receive medical attention is far greater in urban than in rural areas and is generally considerably greater in large cities than in small towns and middle size communities. Indications on this point, revealed by the studies, are as follows :

1. The number of doctors' calls per 1,000 population was greater in large cities than in small towns and rural areas. (Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.)
2. More hospital care was received by families in large cities than by families living in small towns and rural areas. (Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.) This study also showed that the number of days of hospitalization per family was larger in the large cities than in smaller communities.
3. From 20 percent to 36 percent of the families surveyed in large cities received some major or minor surgery; 21 percent to 29 percent in the medium sized cities; and from 16 percent to 25 percent in the small towns and rural areas. (Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.)
4. Only 44 percent of the families in rural areas utilized dental facilities as compared with 54 percent in medium size cities and 61 percent in the large cities. (Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.)
5. Nursing care was received by low and high income groups in various size communities as follows: in large cities, from 6 percent to 36 percent; in medium size cities, 3 percent to 31 percent; and in small towns and rural areas, 4 percent to 13 percent. (Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.)
6. Free hospital and clinic facilities found in large cities are provided to a much smaller extent in small cities, towns and rural areas. (National Health Survey.)

7. People needing and receiving medical care, approximated 56 percent for the State as a whole; 64 percent in cities of 100,000 to 999,999; 60 percent for cities of 5,000 to 99,999; and 51.9 percent for towns under 5,000 population and rural areas.

SECTION IV

EXPENDITURES FOR MEDICAL CARE

In seeking the answers to these questions, the ideal research procedure would have been to make current studies of representative samples of the population, checked and supplemented by special studies of current prices, fees, volume and frequency of utilization of the various items of medical care. Since this was out of the question within the available time and financial resources of the committee, the next best procedure was to analyze the older studies in California and the more recent data for the Country as a whole and consider it in the light of present economic conditions in California.

After reviewing available data on medical care expenditures, the committee finds that:

Medical expenditures, like illnesses, are completely unpredictable for any individual or family, for any particular time or period of time.

Medical expenditures vary from nothing for some person and for some families to considerable amounts for others, and to catastrophic amounts for still others.

Medical care expenditures are not apportioned in accordance with medical care needs or with ability to pay.

In proportion to their financial resources, the poor spend most for medical care and receive less care in ratio to the extent of illness and medical need among them.

The unpredictable, uncertain and unequal burdens of medical care expense are not distributed among any great numbers of people in the way that other unpredictable hazards of modern life—old age, unemployment, fire losses, etc.—are shared and lightened through public or private insurance measures. This is true except in the field of hospital expense insurance, employee group insurance, and, to a limited extent, in the case of families having the benefits of a fairly complete prepaid or insured medical care plan.

The previously noted unpredictability in the occurrence, nature, duration and severity of illness for any one individual or family makes equally unpredictable the character, amount and cost of the medical services he is likely to require within any specified period of time. This makes budgeting for medical care under the present system of post facto, of pay-as-you-go fees, practically impossible for low and moderate income individuals and families.

Government, philanthropy, and industry bear only a small share of the Nation's medical bill; about 80 percent of the total medical care expenditures in the State and in the Nation is spent directly by consumers; their total annual medical care expenditures represent between 4 percent and 5 percent of the total annual consumer income—between 3.5 percent and 4.0 percent of total consumer expenditures.

The United States Senate Committee on Wartime Health and Education estimated that the average family expenditure on medical care in 1944 was $100. But the problem is not one of average costs. Even in matter of averages, however, the burden is greatest on low income groups. In 1934, California families spent on an average from 3.5 percent to 4 percent of their total family budget for medical services. The low income groups ($1,200 - $2,500), however, spent from 4 percent to 5 percent of their family budget on medical care, while the upper income groups ($10,000 plus) spent only 1 percent to 2 percent.

As to actual, rather than average expenditures, the costs of medical care are unevenly distributed. During the depression year, 1933, 25 percent of all families in California incurred no medical charges. But 12.5 percent of the families (one out of eight families) incurred $100-$200; 5.2 percent (one out of nineteen), $200-$300; 2.3 percent (one out of thirty), $300-$500; 2.2 percent (one out of forty-five), $500-$1,000; and 8 percent of the families (one out of every hundred twenty-five) incurred medical charges amounting to $1,000 or more during the year.

Disabling illnesses take up an increasing share, and nondisabling illnesses a decreasing share of the total medical care expenditures as the income level rises. Three-fourths or more of the total costs for all illnesses among the higher-income groups are caused by disabling illnesses.

As family income increases, the average per capita medical care expenditures increase progressively until the very highest income group is reached, where there is apparently a slight drop back in the per capita expenditures. Within the same income groups, medical care expenditures per person are generally greater among two-person and three-person families than among those of five or more persons.

The age group 25-34 incurs relatively high charges for medical service, while relatively small charges are incurred (in private expenditures) for school and preschool children.

No consistent variations are found in the medical expenditures for boys and girls under 15 years of age, but, for the older groups, the expenditures are substantially higher for women than for men.

Among all groups, the major medical expenditures are for physicians and dentists' services, hospital care, and medicines. Together, these items constitute about 80 percent of the consumers' medical bills. Physicians (including surgeons and other specialists) account for from 30 percent to 40 percent of the total medical bill; dentists: from 14 percent to 21 percent; hospital: from 11 percent to 16 percent; medicines: from 10 percent to 16 percent.

Larger proportions of the total medical outlays of the lower income groups go for physicians' services and medicines than in the case of the higher-income groups. Hospitalized illness, at all income levels, constitutes about one-half of the total medical charges. Hospital care, private nursing and dental and eye care are bought, to a significantly larger extent, by the well-to-do. Charges for medicines, however, vary within a considerably smaller range than those for hospital care, physicians' services or dental care.

That (at least on the side of individual treatment) an inadequate proportion of family medical care expense goes for "preventive medicine" is indicated by the following table showing that most of the money spent directly by people for medical care goes for the treatment of illness and a very small proportion is spent for prevention, even when the care of the teeth and the eyes is included in the total of expenditures for preventive medical care.

* "Medical Care For the American People," p. 40. Based upon the charges incurred by 8,639 families surveyed for 12 consecutive months by the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.

Summarizing the data set forth thus far, and analyzing their relevance to the question of:

- (a) The need for, and desirability of, health insurance;
- (b) The need for larger public expenditures for public health services; we find that:

California, as a whole, is relatively well off as compared with other states, but large segments of its population and a considerable number of areas in the State are economically underprivileged. The data would seem to indicate that now is the most favorable time for expanding health security measures.

The extent and severity of illness and disability, and the rates of mortality, are greater among low and moderate income groups than among the well-to-do, possibly because of less ability to pay for needed medical care, and that much of this illness and disability is preventable or postponable under present day medical advances.

People of low and moderate income spend much less for needed medical care than the well-to-do, though that little is a heavier drain on their resources than the much that the well-to-do spend is on their resources.

The low and moderate income groups, despite the greater extent of their illness and disability, and despite their relatively greater expenditures, get much less medical service in proportion to their illnesses, disability and mortality than do those in the upper income groups.

From the above, it is clear that one of the major reasons for the lag between actual and possible achievements in promoting, safeguarding, and caring for the health of the people is the inability or unwillingness of individuals, families, groups, areas, and government units to pay the high costs of adequate medical care and health services under the present organization of the health services and the current methods of financing medical care.

Because of this inability or unwillingness to pay the costs of medical care as at present organized and financed, many people do not and cannot get the medical care they need and many do not get it in time to prevent incipient and mild illnesses from developing into serious or dangerous diseases.

An effective remedy for this situation, of course, would be for all families to set aside reserves to meet extraordinary and unanticipated medical expenditures and to budget their remaining income so as to allow for current expenditures for preventive medical services and for early medical care of incipient illnesses. But, in view of the present cost of living and with 50 percent of California's people earning under $3,000 yearly, it is not likely that the great bulk of people (who most need to do so) will be able to set aside funds to meet the possibility of serious disease and its "catastrophic" costs, or be willing to budget their income so as to provide for the continuing drain of preventive medical attention to incipient ailments. Without drastic changes in the provision of public medical services and in the methods of financing private medical care, illness will continue to jeopardize savings, credit, standards of living, or other values—or go without proper medical attention—among the people.

Data studied by the committee has shown that for individuals and individual families, illness and its consequences are unpredictable as to their occurrence, their severity, and their costliness. For large groups of people, however—and the larger the group the better—practically all illness is subject to statistical and actuarial calculations under the "law of averages."

Illness, therefore, lends itself readily both to the planning of adequate preventive health services and medical care facilities for special groups, for diverse areas and for the State as a whole, and to insurance techniques for distributing the costs of medical care over numbers of people and over periods of time so as to make those costs "bearable" to all.

The economic data found in Section I of this report (when viewed in the light of the incidence of illness found in Section II, the data on the receipt of medical services in Section III, and those on expenditures for medical care in Section IV) indicate that low and moderate income families in California cannot afford adequate medical care and that rural and economically underprivileged counties cannot afford adequate public health services—at least not to the same degree of adequacy as better off families and counties—but that the people of California, as a whole, could well afford the cost of adequate health services and medical care for all the people of the State, if those costs were averaged and in some way distributed over a period of a year or more among all the people.

SECTION V

PRESENT UNMET MEDICAL CARE NEEDS IN CALIFORNIA

The committee is of the opinion that, today, there is little quarrel with the statement that there are unmet medical needs in California and in the United States. This truism is recognized by all concerned.

Unmet medical needs are of two kinds: Those resulting from a complete lack of, or inadequate supply of, medical care facilities, including hospitals, medical centers, technical laboratories and personnel—including doctors, nurses, dentists and technicians; and those caused by the inability or unwillingness of the people to pay for what medical care is available. The controversy regarding the subject of unmet medical needs begins when one endeavors to establish the extent of the unmet needs.

It is impossible to estimate the extent of unmet medical needs in this State, or the Nation, without first agreeing upon a workable and realistic definition of what constitutes "adequate medical care." Definitions of adequate medical care vary according to the philosophy and the objectives of the individual, group or organization making a survey to determine the extent of unmet medical needs.

It is the opinion of the committee that the wide differences in the claims advanced by various groups regarding the extent of unmet medical needs in this State and Nation is directly attributable to the fact that each group is measuring the need with a different "yardstick" in hand; i.e., they are viewing the problem of unmet needs with different and widely divergent definitions in mind of what constitutes adequate medical care.

The committee has found that the reports of surveys of this problem, undertaken by responsible groups in California and throughout the United States, vary from findings that unmet medical needs are negligible and are to be found only in the indigent class and very low income groups to claims that the vast majority of our people are not receiving adequate medical care and hence represent unmet medical needs.

Both statements are correct as far as they go, and again the wide discrepancy in the findings is directly due to the different interpretative yardsticks used to measure the needs. The real need which can be met, which should be met, lies somewhere between these two extremes.

To establish the existence and extent of the need, it was first necessary to adopt a workable definition of adequate medical care, neither "Utopian" in scope nor too stringent in content. After studying a number of suggested definitions, the committee agreed upon the following statement of what should constitute adequate medical care:

"Adequate medical care is the availability to a person, regardless of income or whereabouts, of the services of a licensed physician and such facilities to aid the physician's activities as he (the physician) finds are necessary for proper care and treatment."

THE UNMET NEEDS

Keeping this definition in mind and turning to the evidences and indications of unmet needs in this State, we find:

Unmet medical needs existing in California and resulting from a complete lack of, or inadequate supply of, medical care facilities and services, including personnel.

These material inadequacies, reflecting unmet medical needs, are readily apparent and have been factually determined. These needs are:

Inadequate and insufficiently available public health services for the prevention and treatment of the diseases and the health conditions that are of the greatest public concern—especially in rural areas. For example, 28 counties in this State still lack a full-time public health department—their mandatory "health officer" is the war was brought out in a poll of interns, conducted in 1944 by the Association of Interns and Medical Students. The survey showed that fully two-thirds of those responding to the association's questionnaire look forward to specialty practice in an urban community after the war; a mere 10 percent showed interest in rural medical practice. Thus, the uneven distribution of doctors in the United States and in California, which amounts to maldistribution in large rural areas, threatens to become even more critical now, after the war. All evidences point to the fact that until there is an extension to every section of the State of adequate hospital, laboratory, nursing, dietary and other essential health services, the young doctor—trained at our great medical centers in the modern scientific practice of medicine—will continue to shun rural practice.

Inadequate and poorly distributed general hospitals—especially in rural areas. This condition will be remedied somewhat within the next few years, as a result of the current state hospital survey and by federal aid to state, county, municipal governments and to nonprofit organizations for planned hospital construction.

Inadequate facilities for the care of mental cases and chronic ailments. This problem can only be solved by a long-term state and local program. Care of the mentally ill and the chronic sick cannot be covered by a prepayment medical and hospital insurance plan—governmental or private. The overcrowded conditions and inadequacies of our present facilities for the care and treatment of the mentally ill, in California and the Nation, is recognized by all authorities—lay and professional. The rapid growth in the incidence of mental diseases in this Nation is a matter of record, as is the totally inadequate supply of trained professional personnel required to meet the need in this field.

Inadequate development of group medical practice to meet the requirements of present day medical science and current economic conditions—especially in rural areas. The development of group medical practice depends, in urban areas, largely on the attitude of the medical practitioners themselves—which is increasingly in favor of such group practice (an American Medical Association poll of physicians in the armed services showed that 60 percent of those interviewed preferred to engage in group practice after the war). In the rural areas, it can be met only by communities, groups of people, health insurance organizations and/or governmental agencies inviting, promoting and making use of group medical practice. If group medical practice were more widely developed it would stimulate participation in voluntary prepayment insurance plans because a "group," being in a position as a unit to render complete medical services, could offer prepayment health insurance direct to individuals, families, and employed persons in their area.

Inadequate medical care provisions, public or private, for the indigent, for public assistance cases and for the "part-pay," nonindigent elements of the population.

Other indications or evidences of unmet medical needs existing in California and the Nation are:

The figures regarding the health and physical condition of our youth, revealed through Selective Service rejections of draftees during the recent war years showed that:

Thirty-eight percent of all registrants in California were rejected for various reasons. A table of "Estimated Percent Distribution of Rejected Registrants by Age Groups for California" shows the following:

Age group	Percent of total rejected	Age group	Percent of total rejected
18-21 -----	20.2	30 and over -----	48.8
22-25 -----	12.2
26-29 -----	18.8	18-25 -----	32.4
		26 and over -----	67.6

While these figures in total should not be applied to the problem of unmet medical needs as they represent rejections for reasons over which medical science or the receipts of adequate medical care has no control, they do, in part, represent irrefutable evidences of unmet medical needs.

The figures developed through the Selective Service rejections were all the more shocking to the people of this country because the men rejected were in age groups where one could normally expect the best of health and physical well being.

Of the 4,217,000 rejected draftees in the Nation, and the 374,100 rejected in California, Dr. Lowell S. Goin, former President of the California Medical Association, in an analysis of these Selective Service rejections, estimated that about one-third of the total causes for rejection might be due to a lack of medical care. According to Dr. Goin's estimates, 1,500,000 men in the Nation and 124,700 in California might not have been rejected if they had received adequate medical care in time.

There are other physical evidences of unmet medical needs existing in this State which, too, are not a matter of conjecture. For example, women bearing children without a doctor in attendance; women bearing children without hospitalization; people dying without a doctor in attendance or without medical care during their fatal illness; women dying in childbirth when, today, under the existing knowledge and techniques of medical science, it is estimated that from one-half to two-thirds of these deaths could be prevented if adequate care was rendered. Mortality of infants in the first month of life could also be reduced, possibly as much as one-half, with adequate care for both mother and child. Deaths from acute communicable diseases of childhood; deaths from tuberculosis, pneumonia and many other diseases could be reduced if known medical procedures were applied in time and fully utilized.

As an illustration of what progress can be made, in part, through the proper and timely application of modern public health procedures and medical techniques, in regard to infant mortality in California, one of the problems named above, the California State Department of Public Health in a special report prepared for this committee shows:

- (a) The average infant mortality rate in California during the period 1920-1924 was 70.3 deaths per 1,000 births;
- (b) And, for the period 1940-1944, this average infant mortality rate had been reduced to 35.8 deaths per 1,000 births. In 1945, the provisional rate shows 32.4 deaths per 1,000 live births—the lowest rate in California's history.

In spite of the fine record for the State as a whole, many of the counties show a higher infant mortality rate than the average for the State.

Turning to "unmet medical needs" caused by the inability or unwillingness of the people to pay for what medical care is available and keeping in mind the definition of adequate medical care discussed above, we find:

Inability of people of low and moderate income, under the present organization and financing of medical care, to get the medical care they need, or to pay for such services as are available, without undergoing hardship or delaying needed medical attention until mild and incipient ailments turn into serious or dangerous diseases—with their even more catastrophic effects on family welfare and finances.

Inability or unwillingness of the majority of people, who most need to do so, to take advantage of the available opportunities for voluntary comprehensive health insurance or of the available—and limited—opportunities for prepaid, complete medical care and thus assure to themselves both needed care in case of serious illness and needed medical services in case of mild or incipient illness.

It is theoretically possible that, given enough time in which to do it, the private prepaid medical care plans and the commercial health insurance companies will prevail upon all people of low and moderate income to join their organizations and pay for comprehensive, budgeted medical care. Any solution to the problem in the foreseeable future, however, if it is to include a large proportion of our people must meet the following minimum conditions:

- (1) The private prepaid medical insurance plans must be made available to the general public on a group or individual basis.
- (2) The costs to individuals and families must be a fraction of the actual costs of budgeting comprehensive medical care under the present individual, fee-for-service methods.
- (3) The payment of such costs by the potential beneficiaries will need to be handled automatically, through pay roll deductions, etc.
- (4) The services offered by the plans must more closely approximate adequate medical care than the limited benefits available today.

Applying the data set forth in the first four sections of this report to the problem of unmet medical needs among the indigent and low and moderate income groups of this State, we find that if these people have, as indicated, more illness and illness greater in severity and longer in duration than people in the upper income brackets and spend less to take care of their greater illness, then the difference between what they do spend and what those with a larger income spend for medical care is a fair, if rough, indication of unmet medical needs.

Recently, independent surveys, public opinion polls and surveys of expert opinion on the subject have materially substantiated the findings of previous authoritative studies and surveys.

For example, in a statement of expert opinion on the subject of unmet medical needs, developed in a survey conducted by Arthur Kornhauser, Ph.D., of the Bureau of Applied Social Research, Columbia University, and conducted on behalf of the American Magazine, the following general conclusions were reached :

Large parts of the population failed to receive medical care that is satisfactory either in amount or in quality ;

- (a) A majority of the experts placed a figure of 40 percent as being the number of people getting inadequate medical service ;
- (b) Regarding the lower middle income group, four out of five experts said that the care received is either "definitely unsatisfactory" or "somewhat unsatisfactory," both in cities and in rural areas.

A poll of Washington, D. C., residents in January and July, 1946, conducted by the Washington (D. C.) Post, showed that 50 percent of the people with incomes under $3,000 yearly "delayed visits to the doctor because of expense" as compared with only 10 percent in the case of people earning $5,000 and over.

In a nation-wide survey, undertaken in 1945 by the National Physicians' Committee, 40 percent of those interviewed indicated that they personally had, or knew of persons who had, "gone without doctor or hospital care because they could not afford it." An earlier 1944 national survey by an independent organization, the National Opinion Research Center, found that 31 percent of those interviewed had "put off going to a doctor because of the cost."

In studies made in 1943 and 1945 by the Opinion Research Corporation of Princeton, New Jersey for the National Physicians' Committee for the Extension of Medical Service—an A. M. A. sponsored organization—it was found that more than half of the people interviewed admitted that they had, at some time, experienced hardship in paying medical bills. Further, 40 per cent of the people interviewed said they were familiar with cases where others had gone without treatment because of financial consideration.

Current expenditures for medical care in California are, on the average, about $125 per family per year, and were estimated in 1944 at $100 per family, nationally, by the United States Senate Committee on Wartime Health and Education.

Even higher estimates of the amount required for medical care have been set by groups studying family budgets and by medical-economists estimating the costs of adequate medical care under existing fee-for-service practice. Every state and national survey of expenditures for medical care, over the years, has shown that families with an income of less than $3,000 yearly, in spite of illness being greater in this group, spend considerably less than the average, considerably less than the amounts allotted for medical care in planned family budgets, less than the estimated costs of adequate medical care and greatly less than the amounts spent by higher income groups nominally in a position to purchase the medical care they need. The table below shows, for six comprehensive national and state surveys, actual average expenditures for medical care by income groups.

AVERAGE EXPENDITURES PER FAMILY FOR MEDICAL CARE

Year	Income group $3,000 and under*	Income group $3,000 and over*	Percent of average expenditure of "over $3,000 group" expended by "$3,000 or under group"

1945 ⁶ -----	83.50	199.33	41.8

* The principal reason for the wide variation in the average amounts expended in each survey is due primarily to all medical expenditures being included in some surveys and only a nominal number of expenditures being covered in others.

The amounts of money expended, on the average, by the two income groups above are merely indicative of the relative amount of medical care purchased and received. The difference between the amounts given for each group does not, of itself, reflect the extent of the need. Traditionally, the well-to-do have generally been charged more for the medical services they receive and, then too, in the higher income group, costs of services such as private room hospital care, private nursing care and auxiliary services are included which may or may not have been essential to the illnesses under treatment.

A much truer and more accurate picture of unmet medical needs is given in the table below where the "units of medical service received per thousand individuals and illnesses" are compared with the "services needed to meet standards of good medical care" as established by the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care—composed primarily of outstanding medical authorities and practitioners.

From the table above, we find that, measured by the standards established, the income groups $3,000 and under and the income groups $3,000 and over received the following percentages of the services recommended:

	Individuals and families under $3,000 percent	Individuals and families $3,000 and over percent
Home, office and clinic calls (physicians) -----	37	65½
Hospitalized cases -----	53½	75
Days of hospital care -----	57	64
Dental care (persons over three years of age) -----	18	46
Health examinations -----	7½	15½
Immunizations -----	30	48
Refractions or glasses -----	17	57

Comparing the services received and the services required, according to the standard established and shown in the lower half of the table, we find that:

	Individuals and families under $3,000 percent	Individuals and families $3,000 and over percent
Hospitalized cases	58	66
Surgical cases (hospitalized)	88	110
Cases having X-ray	13½	28
Cases having laboratory service	10½	19
Prenatal or postnatal calls	39	63
Hospitalized cases having special nursing	20½	76

The difference between what those in the $3,000 and under income bracket actually spent, as compared with the average family expenditure, and what those in the higher income bracket spent is a fair indication of the extent of unmet medical needs existing among the low and moderate middle income group in this State, and Nation.

On the basis of the indications and evidences of unmet medical needs outlined above, it is estimated that unmet medical needs exist in the indigent class throughout the State and are particularly prevalent among the low and moderate middle income group, comprising 50 percent of the population of this State—those earning $3,000 yearly, or less.

The committee recognizes the inability of low and moderate income people, under the present organization and financing of medical care, to get the medical care they need, or to pay for such services as are available without undergoing hardship or delaying needed medical attention until mild or incipient illnesses turn into serious or dangerous diseases—with their even more catastrophic effects on family welfare and finances. This is particularly applicable to and true of the poor and low income groups. The committee recognizes that with the rapid increase in the cost of living, including increased cost of medical care, even the $3,000 criteria may soon be obsolete.

Responsible surveys have shown that even the nominally well-to-do, though generally in a position to purchase the amount of medical care they feel they need, do not always receive adequate medical care, either through their unwillingness or inability to purchase what medical care is available. The committee recognizes that the burdens of sickness may fall just as heavily on individuals and families earning more than $3,000 per year as in the lower group. However, taking the problem as a whole, it is in the $3,000 and under bracket that the need is most extensive and has been proven through the findings of a number of authoritative studies.

Innumerable surveys of the adequacy of medical care in the United States have been made since the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care undertook its nation-wide study during the years 1928-31. This study, a most authoritative and complete survey of medical economic conditions and related problems in the United States, was directed by Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur. The findings of this committee, published in its final report, "Medical Care For The American People," in 1932, have been, in general, substantiated by all authoritative studies undertaken by responsible groups in later years.

In summary, the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care, on the subject of unmet medical needs, found that:

1. The people need a substantially larger volume of scientific medical service than they now utilize.
2. Modern public health services need to be extended to a far greater percentage of the people, particularly in rural areas, towns and small cities.
3. There is need for a better geographical distribution of practitioners and agencies more closely to approximate the medical requirements of the people.
4. In the rural and semirural areas, the current expenditures for medical care are insufficient to insure even approximately adequate service, to support the needed medical care facilities, or to provide satisfactory remuneration to the practitioners.

These findings on the problem of unmet medical needs were subsequently substantiated by later studies, i.e., the California Depression and Health Study (1934); California Medical Economics Survey (1934-1935); National Health Survey (1936).

Evaluating the extent of unmet medical needs in this Country in 1938, the National Health Conference learned from its Technical Committee on Medical Care that it had reached the following conclusions regarding the needs.

THE NEEDS

1. "The deaths of women in childbirth present a special challenge; with adequate care, from one-half to two-thirds of these deaths could be prevented.

2. Mortality of infants during the second to the twelfth month of life, though showing consistent decline, might be further reduced by as much as one-half. Mortality in the first month of life has declined but little; these deaths also may be reduced by as much as one-half with adequate care of mother and child.

3. The death rates from the acute communicable diseases of childbirth have been greatly reduced; further reduction can be brought about by the application of known measures of prevention and cure. Appropriate treatment of children with rheumatic heart disease will restore nearly two-thirds to normal life. Early treatment of children with infantile paralysis is well known to prevent such crippling.

4. The development of rapid methods of determining the type of pneumonia and the production of sera for many types of the disease have revolutionized treatment; the benefits of modern therapy must be made generally available.

5. Deaths from tuberculosis can be reduced 50 percent by health supervision of industrial workers in occupations predisposing to the disease by detection of incipient cases, and by provision of adequate medical and institutional care in the early stages of the disease.

6. Each year, 518,000 new cases of syphilis go to doctors. More than half a million more resort to self medication or "quack" treatment. In addition, care and rehabilitation of those insane and blind as a result of untreated past infections constitute a major drain upon welfare, security and relief funds. Yet the diagnosis and treatment of syphilis are highly perfected and it has been demonstrated that a program of control could reduce this toll by more than 95 percent.

7. There is urgent need for a concerted attack on the cardiovascular-renal diseases, cancer and diabetes which are increasing in importance as causes of death and disability in the older age groups.

8. In light of the high incidence of tuberculosis and pneumonia among industrial workers, and the diseases due to the special hazards of occupation increased activities in the field of industrial hygiene are essential.

9. The health problems of the dependent and low income families need consideration commensurate with their severity. The amount of medical care obtained by individuals differs with economic status; the well-to-do obtain more, the poor less. This is so notwithstanding the fact that the poor have more sickness and more disability and need more (not less) service.

10. The ineffective distribution and, in some cases, lack of medical, dental and nursing personnel has serious implications for the health of those living in small cities and rural areas.

11. There is need for national and regional planning in the field of hospital expansion and construction. An effective system of modern health service is impossible without well equipped hospitals which will provide the facilities necessary for the practice of modern medicine. Inadequacies in hospital care are known to exist in many localities, particularly in rural areas and areas in economic need."

And finally, in 1945, the United States Senate Committee on Health and Education reported that:

"Intensive investigation and the testimony of many expert witnesses has convinced the committee that a great deal of illness and disability could be avoided if the benefits of modern medical and public health science were made readily available in all sections of the country and to all persons, regardless of economic status."

Also having a bearing on unmet medical needs, the committee reported that:

"A considerable part of the population does not receive either the amount of, or the quality of, medical care it needs and should have because good medical care is necessarily expensive; the burden of illness is unpredictable and falls unevenly, striking one family much harder than another; sickness comes unexpectedly and may wipe out the laboriously acquired savings of an entire family."

OTHER MEDICAL NEEDS IN CALIFORNIA

During the course of the study, the Senate interim committee received reports from California medical and community organizations regarding general unmet medical needs in this State which the organizations reporting wished to call to the attention of this committee. A few of the reports received are briefed and given below.

American Cancer Society, California Division, Lyell C. Kinney, M.D., Chairman of the Executive Committee, reporting:

"We of the American Cancer Society, California Division, have consulted the Cancer Commission of the California Medical Association and the Bureau of Chronic Diseases of the State Department of Public Health for data bearing on cancer problems and needs in California. The statements and data submitted herewith represent the combined efforts of the three agencies.

"Certain general statements concerning cancer in California may be made:

1. Cancer is now the second leading cause of death. In 1945 it claimed 12,308 lives in California.
2. According to conservative estimates, at least one-fourth of such cancer deaths would be avoided if current knowledge were systematically applied.
3. Besides the curable cases which are not being cured, there is an unknown but undoubtedly considerable number of advanced cancer patients. These, too, often live in misery at home and constitute a burden to their families. Many of them would be benefited by palliative treatment and proper care in hospitals or by home nursing service.

"Consensus of medical opinion is that a large part of cancer mortality is due to the period of delay between the inception of the disease and adequate treatment. A cancer control program which includes education of the public, professional education and organized cancer clinics can be effective in reducing this mortality."

California Heart Association and Heart Division of the California Tuberculosis Association, J. K. Lewis, M.D., reporting:

"The Heart Advisory Committee of the California Tuberculosis and Health Association and the officers of the California Heart Association wish to report that an extensive unmet need for medical care in this State is represented by the lack of facilities for the care of rheumatic children.

"To our knowledge there is a serious deficiency in the number of hospital and convalescent beds for this group of children. Like tuberculosis, rheumatic fever requires long term specialized care. The disease is the first cause of death in children from 10 to 14 years. A large percentage of children and young adults who do not die from the first or second attacks of the disease are frequently so crippled that they are handicapped for life. This crippling of the heart does not show, but it affects the vitality, the earning power, and the lives of many California families. The problem is one which must be solved by state-wide effort. Very few families can fight rheumatic fever alone.

"We call rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease to your attention as one of California's major public health problems.

"A study now underway by the Crippled Childrens Services of the State Department of Public Health, will reveal the costs of and needs for medical care for this group of children based on a five-year demonstration in Solano and Contra Costa Counties.

"The Heart Committee of the San Francisco Tuberculosis Association reports another medical care problem related to heart disease—the use of penicillin in the treatment of subacute bacterial endocarditis until recently considered a fatal disease.

"Experiments carried on in various medical centers throughout the country indicate two things very clearly:

1. Early diagnosis of the disease plays an important role in its successful treatment.
2. It takes more penicillin to cure this disease than any other form of infection.
3. Adequate amounts over a sufficiently long period will eliminate the infection and cure the patient.

"The average case of endocarditis will respond to a dose of 200,000 to 400,000 units per day for a period of 60 days.

"The cases caused by the highly resistant organisms may take anywhere from 5,000,000 units a day to 20,000,000 units a day for 60 to 90 days.

"Penicillin costs wholesale approximately $0.50 per 100,000 units. Five million units a day means $25 a day. For 90 days it means $2,250. Twelve million units a day costs $69 a day—90 days—$5,400. Twenty million units a day costs $100 a day—90 days—$9,000. This is for the drug alone.

"Add to this figure three months' hospitalization at $8 to $11 a day (ward rates). This means that it will cost those particular patients anywhere from $3,000 to $10,000 to effect a cure.

"There is another aspect of the financial situation. Many of these patients have been fighting the disease in one way or another for some time before they reach the stage of massive penicillin treatment.

"Although the disease is not uncommon in youth and old age, most of the patients will be between the ages of 25 and 50—at the height of their economic productivity.

"The heart committee has estimated, on the basis of figures for the past two years, that during any one year in San Francisco, there will be at least between 15 and 20 patients harboring resistant organisms and requiring large doses of penicillin. They will be scattered between the various hospitals, all of which will be faced with the problem of providing the penicillin for the patient who cannot afford the drug."

Welfare Council of Metropolitan Los Angeles. Data abstracted from published material submitted to the committee covering factual information reported at a "Workshop" meeting on "Human Needs During Reconversion," held at the Ambassador Hotel, March 25, 1946, and sponsored by the Welfare Council.

"Medical, dental, hospital and other professional services are too costly for many clients who need such aid.

"Health agencies, both public and private, are badly understaffed in relation to the great population increase which has taken place in the Los Angeles area. These doctors, nurses and technicians have been able to hold epidemic possibilities in check through their vigilance, but breakdowns occur that affect many individuals. There are gaps in the services that should be filled to build up community health.

"Medical and dental needs have been aggravated because they were neglected during the war period, due largely to a lack of doctors and dentists. In the shortage of physicians, workers say there is an inequitable geographic distribution of doctors.

"The reports from field workers decry the lack of dental appliances and glasses and the lack of neighborhood clinics offering free dispensaries.

"There is a need for more city and county health nursing service.

"The Visiting Nurse Association should be enlarged, for the chronically ill who can remain at home must have service.

"There is a need for housekeeping services for those physically or mentally unable to care for themselves. Postoperation cases need home service.

"Regarding the attitude of patients towards the Los Angeles General Hospital, a number of points were brought out. These include:

"1. Long distances required to travel.

"2. Long waits at clinics.

"3. Personnel shortages and tension of the staff.

"4. Fear engendered by recent reports as a result of the legislative hearing on the hospital.

"5. Need for decentralization of these facilities and more individualized service.

"There is great difficulty experienced today in getting medical, dental and related services to low and borderline income groups.

"Among the shortages noted by the workers are hospital beds, school nurses and school doctors, mental hygiene clinics for adults and youths.

"There is reluctance on the part of private dentists to deal with children's dental problems.

"There is a lack of rest homes and boarding homes for those chronically ill.

"The aged have special medical problems which are not being solved.

"There is a great need for health education on a community-wide basis, with special reference to Spanish-speaking groups, Negroes, etc.

"Maternity costs for discharged veterans' families are almost prohibitive.

"Child guidance facilities and well baby clinics should be increased.

"There should be a greater development of institutions for epileptics and mental defectives with good programs of training during rehabilitation.

"In summing up, three expert commentators at the meeting stated:

"In health, experts pointed out that great sums are expended on cure but a comparatively small amount of money is made available for prevention. At the present time, more than one-half of the hospital beds in the State of California are used by the mentally ill. In this connection, it was pointed out that recently $15,000,000 was appropriated to care for the mentally ill for one year, while only $135,000 was appropriated to establish four mental hygiene prevention clinics.

"Los Angeles needs approximately 6,000 more hospital beds to meet minimum requirements.

"Need for legislation to insure medical care for all who need it."

Oakland, California Community Chest, East Bay Health Council, reporting:

Hospitals

"A study recently completed by the Alameda County Medical Association shows an acute shortage of hospital beds for Alameda County. A similar situation exists in Contra Costa County. The area as a whole probably has a more acute lack than is indicated in the Alameda County survey. This is particularly true in regard to part-pay beds. There are practically no beds available in the area for patients who cannot pay full cost. The agencies who are dealing with patients of limited means and trying to secure medical care for them therefore have to find the money in their own budgets to supplement what the patient can pay, or arrange for full-pay hospital care during a part of the patient's stay and then transfer him to Highland Hospital for the remainder. This procedure is extremely bad since it interferes with continuity of medical care as well as hospital care. Free beds available in the area are limited to Highland Hospital and a few in Merritt Hospital. Children's Hospital has funds for part-pay and free patients and Berkeley Hospital arranges for some part-pay care, but has no Community Chest money for this purpose. The great need in the area is therefore for a larger number of less expensive and part-pay hospital beds.

Mental Hygiene

"The East Bay has no psychiatric treatment facilities either for part-pay or full-pay or for outpatients or inpatient care. This situation will be somewhat improved by the opening of a clinic for veterans by the Veterans Administration. The large majority of the population, however, is dependent upon San Francisco clinics and hospitals which are greatly overcrowded. The lack of mental hospital facilities in the East Bay has resulted in an acute shortage of private psychiatrists. There is urgent need for both inpatient and outpatient care for mentally ill persons and for children who are emotionally disturbed.

Handicapped Children

"Alameda County has not yet set up a central file for handicapped children, established diagnostic facilities for them, nor has it appropriated the funds for their treatment required in the bill passed by the last Legislature. A local committee under the health council is now working on a plan for organizing adequate service under public auspices and coordinating the services of the private agencies in the area serving this group of children.

Multiplicity of Public Health Units

"One of the most acute problems in the area is the irregularity of preventative services, since each municipality has its own health department which sets up its own rules and has its own philosophy of work. Any state legislation or any state regulation of the health departments which would tend to iron out these differences would be helpful. However, the health officers are now trying to do voluntarily some of the things which most need to be done. Public health nursing is very scattered and the nurses themselves are now organized to bring about better coordination of the many nursing departments in the area. While they have not yet arrived at any plan which would require legislation, this may eventually develop.

Health Education

"Public education on all phases of public health, including tuberculosis, heart, cancer prevention, immunization, dental hygiene and mental hygiene, should be planned on a state-wide basis available to all parts of the State.

Chronics and Convalescents

"Another severe lack in the area is facilities for resident care of chronics and convalescents. This is particularly noticeable in the case of old people who cannot care for themselves and have not families on whom that responsibility can rest, and in heart cases, especially rheumatic heart disease, where long convalescent care is often impossible under crowded home conditions."

Pasadena Council of Social Agencies, Inc., Health Section Committee, Mrs. Barbara M. Nichols, reporting for the committee:

"To meet your request for data and recommendations relative to unmet medical and health needs in our community, a committee was appointed from the Health Section of the Council of Social Agencies and charged with the responsibility of analyzing the material and formulating a report. Data were submitted by the following member agencies: Pasadena Chapter American Red Cross, Pasadena Child Guidance Clinic, Child Guidance Department of Pasadena City Schools, City Health Department, Pasadena Dispensary, Medical Aid District of the County Bureau of Medical Social Service, Huntington Memorial Hospital, Pasadena Health School, Pasadena Tuberculosis Association, Visiting Nurse Association of Pasadena, and The Woman's Hospital.

"In the opinion of the committee, the local unmet health needs which are enumerated herewith are those which are pertinent to the study being made by the Senate Interim Committee on Medical Care.

"1. An increase in the number of institutions for the mentally retarded and an improvement in the quality of care in these and other state health institutions. (We understand that there are nearly 4,000 on the waiting list at Pacific Colony which serves our area.)

"2. An institution for the resident observation and study of mentally abnormal and subnormal children and adults. There is no such resource for preliminary psychiatric service available to the Pasadena area.

"3. An increase in the staff of the Pasadena City Health Department commensurate with the increase in population. The present personnel is considered adequate in number to serve a population of 50,000 whereas the recent special census revealed a present population in excess of 98,000.

"4. Expansion of some type of prepayment plan for medical care to make it available to individuals as well as to members of groups.

"5. An increase in the number of hospital beds. (At present the Pasadena area has about 2.6 beds per 1,000 population, in contrast to the 4.5 beds per 1,000 necessary for adequate coverage.) A related need is for additional beds in acute hospitals of this area for patients requiring chest surgery. There is also a need for hospital beds for the mentally ill.

"6. An increase in the number of nurses being educated to meet the great inadequacy in number of graduate nurses.

"7. An increase in rest home facilities for care of the chronically ill aged person. (This problem is more acute in Pasadena than in many areas because of the fact that 15.3 percent of our population falls in the old age group as compared with 8 percent for the State as a whole.)

"8. A local health center in which would be located hospitals, clinics, laboratories and related services, both public and private.

"In preparing this report, the committee agreed to omit from the tabulation of unmet needs those which, in their opinion, could best be provided through our own efforts locally. Inasmuch as you are interested in a cross-section of community opinion, we assume you have sent a similar request to the local branch of the medical society and to our local general hospitals."

SECTION VI

DEMAND FOR A SYSTEM OF PREPAID MEDICAL CARE

The committee, in its studies, has found that the basic question of whether the people want some system of health insurance or not has been answered in the affirmative. While the basic question has been answered, the other questions which emerge as a consequence of the demand by the people for health insurance, i.e., whether the insurance should be on a voluntary or compulsory basis, on a state or national level, private or governmental; whether it shall cover nearly everybody or only low and moderate income people; whether physicians who work with it shall be paid on a per capita or on a fee-for-service basis; whether it should be based primarily on group rather than individual medical practice; and whether it shall be wholly under the control of M.D.'s or only directed by them as to its technical and professional medical aspects, have not, as yet, been decisively answered by the people.

All the authoritative national, state and local public opinion polls that have been taken in this country have shown an increasing awareness on the part of the majority of people of unmet medical needs that are due largely to inability or unwillingness to meet the high costs of medical care and an increasing popular demand for some type of prepaid medical care and a growing interest in the possibility of government health insurance, state or national.

While over 125 pages of the "study materials" prepared for the committee are devoted to these data, a few highlights from these public opinion polls are set forth below:

IN 1946 PUBLIC OPINION POLLS (NATIONAL, STATE AND LOCAL), THE PEOPLE EXPRESSED THEMSELVES AS FOLLOWS

Washington, D. C.

"Washington (D. C.) Post," Public Opinion Poll of Washington, D. C., residents.

Seventy percent of those polled were in favor of the President's health insurance program, i.e., compulsory and organized and administered by the national government. Almost 9 of every 10 residents earning less than $4,000 yearly favor the adoption of national health insurance legislation. Those in higher income groups support the plan by a slightly smaller majority.

Fifty percent of those interviewed now participate in some private, voluntary health, hospitalization or accident insurance program. Of these, the 50 percent now having some type of private, voluntary health insurance protection, 79 percent favored adoption of a compulsory government plan, while 84 percent of those without private voluntary insurance favored the President's national health insurance program.

California

Public Opinion Survey for the Assembly interim committee, conducted by the firm of Knight and Parker.

Fifty percent of those interviewed believed that the State (California) Government should promote and operate a plan of health insurance in competition with existing private and voluntary insurance plans.

Thirty-two and seven-tenths of those polled now participate in some private, voluntary health, hospitalization or accident insurance program.

Seventy-six percent expressed a preference for a "voluntary" plan and 21.7 percent favored a "compulsory" plan.

Of those favoring a "compulsory" plan, farmers and farm workers lead with 37 percent and 34.3 percent respectively as compared with only 17.6 percent of the professional people voting for a "compulsory" plan.

New York State

Public Opinion Poll, conducted by "Surveys Incorporated," in New York State.

Eighty-six percent of those interviewed think that "everybody who lives in the state should have insurance which pays the doctor and hospital bills."

Seventy and three-tenths percent prefer to make regular payments in advance for insurance that will pay doctor and hospital expenses if and when they occur. The majority interviewed prefer government sponsored and operated health insurance plans, 48.4 percent for a federal and 32.8 percent preferring a state plan.

United States Public Opinion Polls

A poll of the American people on National Health Insurance, conducted by Dr. Gallup of the American Institute of Public Opinion in May, 1946, showed that:

Sixty-eight percent of the people polled think that "something needs to be done" in answer to the question: "What do you think should be done, if anything, to provide for the payment of doctor, dentist and hospital bills for people in this Country?"

However, 26 percent do not think anything should be done.

Of those thinking that something should be done, 17 percent are in favor of a voluntary insurance program, 11 percent propose the inclusion of medical insurance under social security legislation, 11 percent suggest special grants for hospitals and clinics to care for the indigent, 6 percent propose private or public charity to care for the needy, 12 percent give miscellaneous suggestions, and 16 percent do not know what should be done.

IN 1945, PUBLIC OPINION POLLS (NATIONAL, STATE AND LOCAL) FOUND THE AMERICAN PEOPLE EXPRESSING THEMSELVES AS FOLLOWS

United States Public Opinion

The Opinion Research Corporation conducted national surveys in 1943 and 1945 for the "National Physicians' Committee for Extension of Medical Service" and utilized a nation-wide staff of interviewers to talk to the people of the Country.

Seventy-seven percent of those interviewed said, "Yes, something could be done to make it easier for people to pay for doctor and hospital care." (Eight percent more people in 1945 as compared with 1943 answered this question affirmatively.)

Sixty-four percent preferred a "Pay-in-Advance" plan, 13 percent preferred a national insurance program.

The balance proposed various suggestions in varying percentages: 45 percent voted for a "government sponsored" plan, 43 percent preferred "non-governmental" sponsorship. Fifty-five percent of those interviewed, in answer to the question, "Do you think the Federal Government plan would be a good thing or a bad thing for the Nation as a whole?" expressed themselves as thinking it would be a good thing, and another 8 percent saw in it at least some possibility of good.

Seventy-eight percent of the people informed on prepayment plans preferred paying in advance to paying just when sick, while 51 percent of the rest of the public made this choice.

New York State

The New York State Grange, in 1945, sent out a questionnaire to Grange "leaders" throughout the state, representing 136,000 members. The findings were as follows:

Sixty-nine percent were in favor of some kind of insurance against the major costs of medical care.

Eighty-four percent were against a "compulsory" plan, but if a program were made "compulsory," 87 percent favored that it should cover farmers and agricultural workers as well as industrial wage earners.

Ninety-nine percent voted for free choice of doctor and hospital.

Sixty-five percent preferred to belong to a private rather than a state plan.

To briefly review some of the findings of earlier public opinion polls, the committee, in its study of the problem, found, for example, that in a survey conducted by Fortune Magazine in 1936 that 74 percent of the people interviewed said that "Government should provide medical and dental care at the expense of the taxpayer for those who can't pay." In 1939, a Fortune Survey revealed that 59.2 percent of the people interviewed thought that the "Government should own and operate some of the Nation's hospitals and medical services." And again, in 1942, the Fortune Survey found that 74.3 percent of the people interviewed felt that the Federal Government should collect taxes and provide "medical care for everyone who needs it."

The National Opinion Research Center, University of Denver, in August, 1944, in a national survey, found that:

Eighty-two percent of those interviewed thought that something should be done to make it easier for people to get medical care when they need it.

Fifty-five percent preferred a pay-in-advance plan and 68 percent thought it would be a good idea if the Social Security Law provided for the doctor and hospital care people might need in the future.

A U. S. Department of Agriculture Survey of Farmers' Views, in 1944, found that:

Eighty percent of those interviewed would favor an increase in public clinics in rural areas after the war.

Seventy-five percent said they would like to subscribe to some flat-rate prepayment plan to cover possible hospital bills for themselves and their families and to cover the cost of doctors' and nurses' services.

A survey conducted in 1944 by the firm of Foote, Cone and Belding for the Michigan Health Council polled the following in answer to questions put to Michigan residents:

Forty-two and eight-tenths percent were against "a government operated medical hospital plan," while 38.7 percent were for such a plan and 17.9 "didn't now."

The same organization (Foote, Cone and Belding) in conducting a state-wide survey in California for the California Medical Association, in 1943, found that 50 percent of the people interviewed answered "Yes" to the question, "Do you think we should have some sort of a socialized, government-controlled medical plan?" While 35 percent in this survey voted for the "present system of voluntary practice," 58 percent voted for some type of prepayment medical insurance plan, 35 percent voted for a voluntary prepayment plan with free choice of doctor (4 percent of this group preferred the services of "doctors employed by a group clinic or medical center"); 23 percent voted for a "government-controlled plan supported by tax funds" which would entitle them to services of "government-employed doctors."

The committee, in its studies, reviewed a referendum conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in 1944 (see "Health Insurance in America," Second National Conference on Social Security, sponsored by the United States Chamber of Commerce, January, 1945) which revealed that:

Ninety percent of the membership felt that employers should explore the possibility of providing protection for their employees against disability and sickness.

Ninety-four percent felt that voluntary group effort to provide more adequate medical services for all the people should be urged.

Ninety-two percent felt that if public action is to be taken, it should be at the state and local levels rather than at the federal level.

And, in this referendum, 86 percent of the Chamber of Commerce membership expressed themselves in favor of the statement that "A Social Security program should provide a minimum layer of basic protection against the major economic hazards of life but should be so designed and administered as to encourage additional savings and self-protection by the individual through his own efforts." It is reasonable to assume that a portion of the "minimum layer of basic protection against the major economic hazards of life" recommended would include some protection against the hazards of poor health.

The committee has found that the trend as expressed by the general public in national, state and local public opinion polls is further substantiated by a poll of "expert" opinion on medical care conducted, in 1944, by Arthur Kornhauser, Ph.D., of the Bureau of Applied Social Research, Columbia University, for the American Magazine.

Those who took part in the poll are men and women who have been studying the issues for years. More than half of them are physicians—some in private practice, others in public health work, in hospitals, universities, industries and group health systems.

Ninety-nine percent of the experts voted that "The American people should be protected by some form of health insurance."

Sixty percent voted that "This insurance should be compulsory and operated by the Government." The experts who are physicians divide almost 50-50 on this question. The social economic authorities, on the other hand, favor compulsory insurance 75 to 25 percent.

Forty percent voted that "The insurance should be private and voluntary."

It is interesting to note that this poll of experts took, as its starting point, the premise that though—

"medical discoveries and techniques have raced forward * * * only a portion of the public receives the full benefits of the new knowledge. Millions of Americans still don't receive adequate medical care."

It therefore sought an answer to the question: "How can we bring the best of modern medical service to the great masses of our people in view of the fact that at present it is beyond the pocketbook of a large part of the population?"

"Should we simply improve our existing arrangements for providing medical service? Should we make it possible for most Americans to join private, voluntary medical insurance plans? * * * Should we go farther and put health insurance on a compulsory, nationwide basis? Should medical care be changed from private to government supervision in the same way that education was changed from private schools to a public school system?"

These were the questions that Dr. Kornhauser put to the experts.

In an essay of American public opinion and of expert judgment on the current status of medical care in the United States, printed in the December, 1944, issue of Fortune, titled "U. S. Medicine in Transition," the editors listed among the findings the following:

1. The state of United States medicine is a social problem.
2. The people of the United States are ready to do something about it.
3. Further, the people are so ready for reform of the structure and economics of medicine that they are willing to effect it by compulsion.
4. In a "fight to the finish" between standpatters and compulsory reformers, the public's "felt need" would eventually produce compulsory measures, even over the protests of the profession, because nobody who refuses to recognize a real and grave danger can long win over somebody who faces the facts.

Another indication of a "demand" for a system of prepaid medical and hospital insurance in this State was found in proposed union contracts presented to employers in 1945 and 1946 by both A.F.L. and C.I.O. Unions wherein medical and hospital care, to be paid for in full by the employer, was asked for the worker and his dependents. From all indications, this type of "demand" will increase in the future and in some instances be the major issue in employer-employee collective bargaining negotiations.

From the foregoing, the committee concludes that:

1. The vast majority of the people are in favor of doing something to make it easier for people to pay for doctor and hospital care.
2. The preponderance of opinion is in favor of some type of prepaid medical care insurance—"pay-in-advance" plan—to provide hospital and medical care.
3. While there is a division of opinion as to whether the prepaid medical insurance plan should be "voluntary" or "compulsory," the majority of the polls favor governmental control in whole, or in part, if necessary, and the demand for a government operated plan is apparently growing.
4. The majority of people overwhelmingly favor free choice of doctor and hospital regardless of whether the plan discussed is governmental or private-compulsory or voluntary.

SECTION VII

PRESENT STATUS OF PREPAID MEDICAL CARE PLANS IN CALIFORNIA

A tabulation of the major benefits offered by 22 voluntary prepayment medical plans in California, today, is given in the following pages, plus a graph showing, for comparative purposes only, the relative number of services offered by each plan and the costs. No attempt was made to determine the relative value of the services offered in relation to each other. In each case, the maximum benefits available under each plan are shown as applied to a family group of four (husband, wife and two minor children) and assuming an annual family income of $2,450.

From a study of these representative voluntary plans it is the opinion of this committee, in answer to the question covered in this section of the report, that:

1. Within the limitations of the benefits offered and the very limited number of subscribers and dependents covered, the plans are meeting a real need in this State and are rendering a needed public service.
2. Though the number of persons subscribing to these plans, even when dependents are included, represent a very small fraction of California's total population and represent a slower and much smaller growth than similar plans in other advanced states and the average for the Nation, some California plans showed a remarkable growth during the past year.
3. While the services offered under the most "complete" plans do not even approximate "adequate medical care," they do offer a real cushion of protection in case of "catastrophic" illness and serve the subscriber in the same manner as other types of limited insurance protection do, i.e., deductible policies and coinsurance, etc.
4. The major weaknesses of existing plans are:

(a) They are not generally available to the public unless:

1. The person is in a "group" that meets the group enrollment requirements of the plan;
2. And, if in a "group," the group must be located in an area where the benefits under the plan can be provided.

The plans are not available to the general public throughout the State, nor to individuals. On a state-wide basis, they are generally open to "group" enrollment only. Of the 22 plans studied, only two are available to even "groups" on a state-wide basis.

- (b) The costs of voluntary prepaid medical insurance are often beyond the reach of those who most need the protection, particularly if the worker and all his dependents are to be included in a fairly "complete" medical service program.
- (c) The income restrictions are too low considering present day economic conditions.
- (d) There are no "standards" established for the minimum benefits to be provided for the premium charged so that the "benefits" offered vary widely from plan to plan.

PREPAID HOSPITAL, SURGICAL, AND MEDICAL PLANS OF CALIFORNIA

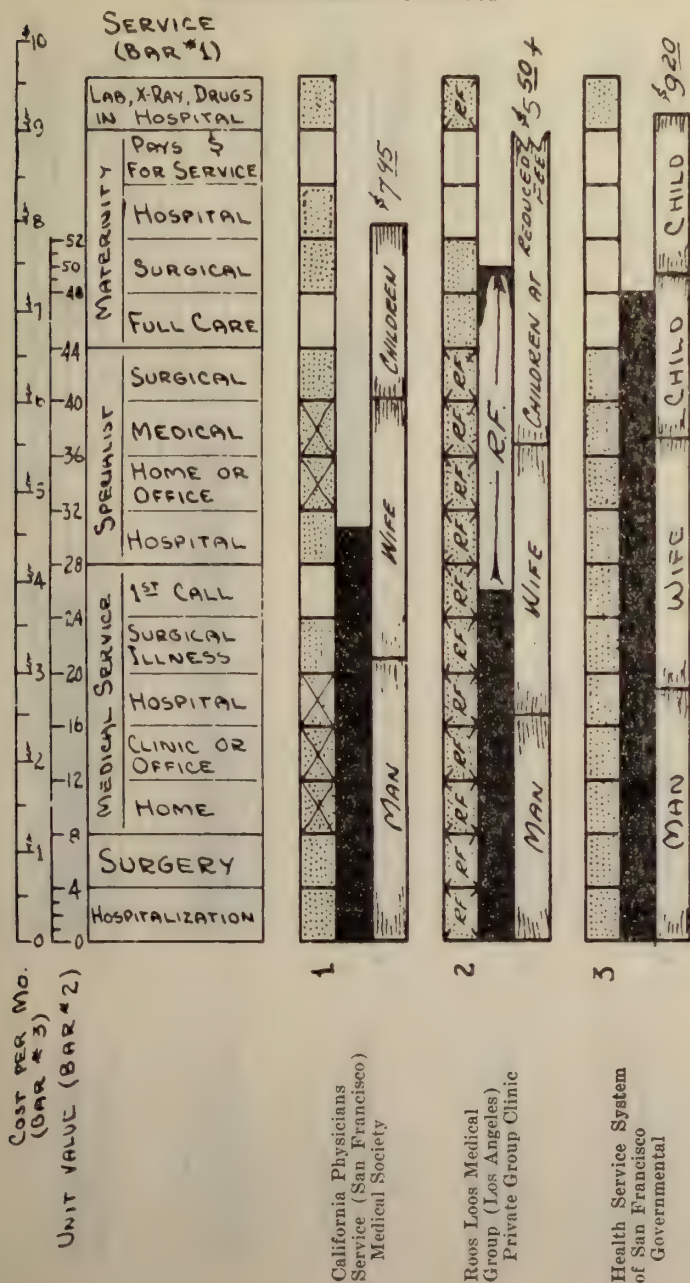

Comparison of Voluntary Prepayment Plans

For comparative purposes, the plans are applied to a family of four persons (husband, wife, and two children). The husband is assumed to earn a family annual income of $2,450 and to be the employee or subscriber enrolled as a group member receiving maximum benefits for himself and family. Bar No. 1 is a tabulation of the indicated services available to the members of the family. Bar No. 2 is a graphic representation of Bar No. 1. Each service (with the exception of maternity care) is given a maximum value of four units (each member of the family to whom the service is available represents one unit). Bar No. 3 represents the cost per month of maximum benefits for employee and family.

SECTION VIII

AN ANALYSIS OF POSSIBLE COSTS UNDER RECENT PROPOSALS*INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

Health insurance by law has been defined as—"organized self-help financed by money that the self-supporting people are asked to save for the purpose of paying for their own care. What is changed by such legislation is the method of raising funds for the support of professional and institutional services. Instead of paying if and when service is received and in proportion to the amount of service rendered, people are required to pay in advance small average amounts, in return for which they are entitled to any or all of the services available under the program. What is not changed by such legislation is the institution of private practice of medicine, dentistry and related professions, of voluntary hospitals and health agencies. Being, as it is, a method of organizing payment for medical care, compulsory health insurance is neither a cure-all for social evils nor the gateway to the millennium."

POSSIBLE COST OF STATE MEDICAL CARE INSURANCE IN CALIFORNIA

In view of the renewed interest in various proposals for a state-operated plan of prepaid medical insurance in California, the committee had the staff make a tentative analysis of what medical benefits might be offered—at what cost—in 1947, based on the latest cost and statistical data available. The analysis is subject, of course, to correction and revision. Excerpts from the analysis, highlighting the important problem of the costs of state medical care insurance in California, are set forth in this report as the latest information available to the committee at the time of filing its report.

1. The Problem

Any proposal for a complete or partial system of public health insurance must specify:

- (a) The medical care benefits to be provided: kind, extent, duration, etc.
- (b) The classes of people to be eligible to participate in the benefits—workers, industries, self-employed, dependents of participants, etc.
- (c) Proposed method of financing: contribution rates; who pays them; who meets the administrative expense; the methods of payment for medical services (to hospitals, doctors, etc.).

To arrive at the probable costs of such a public health insurance system for California, it would be necessary to supplement the above data with estimates as to (1) the potential number of eligible workers and beneficiaries in the state at the time the plan is to go into effect; (2) the taxable payrolls in normal and abnormal times, especially those likely to be the case during the first few years of the system; (3) the revenue likely to accrue from various rates proposed to be levied on employers, employees, and self-employed to be included in the system; (4) the probable costs, under various methods of paying them, of the medical benefits to be offered; and (5) the extent to which the proposed methods of financing would meet the possible costs of the proposed benefits.

2. Proposals For

a. Limited Medical Benefits and Restricted Beneficiaries

We may assume that complete public medical care insurance for all the people of California is not feasible at the present time, and that any "practical" proposal would be for a system of medical care benefits considerably short of providing all needed medical care and including as its beneficiaries—at least to start with—considerably less than the State's total working population and their dependents. In short, something along the lines of the proposals for government health insurance made by the "Governor's Committee for Health Insurance" in 1939, and by Governor Warren (A. B. 800) and (2) by the C. I. O. (A. B. 449), in the state legislative sessions of 1945.

The latter two bills differed very little outside of the fact that the Warren Bill (A. B. 800) implied that doctors would be paid on a fee-for-service basis, taxed up to 4,000 per person per year, and included dependents up to the age of 18, while the C. I. O. Bill (A. B. 449) specifically provided for paying doctors on a per patient ("capitation") basis, taxed salaries up to $5,000, and included dependents up to the age of 21.¹

Both bills provided for practically the same basic services and benefits, namely, basic benefits: Doctors' services, consultant and specialist services on doctor's advice, laboratory and laboratory supplies, X-ray (both diagnostic and therapeutic), dental extractions and treatment of acute dental infections or disease, hospitalization (21 days per illness under A. B. 800, 30 days under A. B. 449), hospital general nursing, and hospital medicines and supplies; and such other benefits as the health insurance administration might find it feasible to add later.

Assuming that similar benefits and limitations will be included in any other responsible proposals for government medical care insurance that may be made in California in the near future, and that their average costs per beneficiary will not differ materially in the next few years from what they are at present for similar benefits under competing medical care prepayment plans, we may compute an estimate of their total costs per year per beneficiary as follows:

3. Probable Costs of Medical Care Insurance in California in 1947

a. Assumed Per Capita Costs

On the basis of authoritative cost studies made in the past and on the basis of the costs of private prepayment medical care in 1945-1946 in California and in the United States, it is probably safe to assume that a limited, restricted, state medical care insurance system for California, of the type proposed in 1945 by Governor Warren (A. B. 800) and by the C. I. O. (A. B. 449) would probably cost in 1947 not more than $30 per beneficiary, if general practitioners were paid on a basis of so much per beneficiary selecting them, respectively, i.e., on the per capita or capitation basis; and not more than $40 per beneficiary, if paid for on a fee-for-service basis at current individual fee-for-service rates. If the fee-for-service method of payment is retained but the medical organizations agree to some large scale or wholesale system of charges calculated to provide a sufficiently satisfactory income to those general practitioners who devote all or most of their time to their patients in the Health Insurance System, the costs should not exceed $35 per beneficiary. Other possible economies may be effected through the development and use of state laboratories and clinics, and wholesale or state sources of supplies of drugs, appliances, etc. For the present, however, the following cost calculations will be based on the three sets of figures: $30, $35, and $40 per beneficiary—exclusive of the costs of administration.

b. "Covered" Workers and Beneficiaries

With that as a starting point we may compute the amount of the funds per annum needed to finance such medical care within the next few years, and the tax or contribution rates required to provide those funds, by determining, first, the number of "covered" workers likely to be included in the health insurance system, and, second, the total number of beneficiaries that such workers are likely to bring into the system to share its benefits.

(1) Eligible workers. Under both the bills discussed above, the benefits were to be made available to workers in the same types of employment as under the Unemployment Compensation Act *—additional people were to be made eligible as soon as feasible. This meant that government employees, agricultural workers, domestic workers, employees of philanthropic organizations, railroad workers, the self-employed, and the permanent unemployed, were excluded from the proposed health insurance benefits.

(2) Beneficiaries. To be eligible for benefits, under the State Unemployment Compensation Law—and under the proposed public health insurance systems—a "covered" worker must have earned at least $300 per year. Under the health insurance bills, however, there were also included his or her spouse and dependent children, defined (as indicated above) in one bill as "under 18" and in another as "under 21."

How many such eligibles or potential beneficiaries are there likely to be in the State, in 1947?

* The Warren Bill, however, added employees of state and local political subdivisions, at present excluded from the unemployment compensation coverages.

The State Unemployment Compensation Act was amended at that legislative session to cover (within the eligible employments) any "employer of one or more" (previously four or more). This, of course, would apply likewise to the proposed health insurance systems.

Following are the available figures and estimates on this question:

¹ Based on data from United States Census Reports; California Taxpayers' Association; State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission.

² Aged 14 years or over, and eligible for gainful employment. Based on United States Census Reports and State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission data.

⁵ The "gainfully employed" include: Wage and salaried workers, employers, self-employed, and unpaid family workers.

⁶ Based on United States Census for 1940, with adjustments for 1944 and 1947 by Paul A. Dodd, op. cit., pp. 17, 18.

⁹ Computed by applying the average number of dependents to employed worker (No. 15, No. 16) to number of workers eligible for Unemployment Compensation benefits (No. 21).

b. Revenues Required to Finance the Proposed Benefits

It was noted previously that the per capita costs (other than administrative expenses) of a limited, restricted, system of insured medical care benefits in California should amount to not more than $30 per years in 1947, if paid for on a "per capita" basis. Under such a system, the total amount required to finance those benefits will, of course, equal the number of eligible beneficiaries multiplied by $30.

Under the Warren Bill, those eligible to benefits were practically the same as the workers under unemployment compensation coverage, plus their dependents up to 18 years of age. The total of such beneficiaries in 1947 is estimated to be 4.8 million. Hence the funds needed under that bill are 4.8 million times $30 or $144,000,000. Under the C. I. O. Bill, the coverage was practically the same¹ except that it included dependents up to 21 years of age. The amount thereunder would be 5.0 million multiplied by $30, or $150,000,000.

If the method of paying general practitioners is to be on a wholesale fee-for-service basis, and the per capita costs are $35, the total costs under the two plans will be, respectively, $168,000,000 and $175,000,000. If the general practitioners are paid at current individual fee-for-service rates, the amounts will be, respectively, $192,000,000 and $200,000,000.

The California Department of Finance estimates that the cost of administering such a system of health insurance is likely not to exceed 6 percent of the annual income of the insurance system². Ordinarily, one would expect that the costs of administration would be contributed by the State. Following are the estimated costs of such a limited health insurance system, figured, first on the assumption that the State will meet the administrative expenses and, secondly, on the assumption that not only will the 6 percent administrative expense have to be met out of contributions (or taxes), but that an additional 4 percent will be set aside as "Reserve."

Where the State pays the cost of administration, and no special reserves (other than a small revolving fund) are set up:

Under A.B. 800 (dependents up to 18 years of age):
On per capita method of paying general practitioners.....	$144,000,000
At wholesale fee-for-service rates.....	168,000,000
At current, individual, fee-for-service rates.....	192,000,000
Under A.B. 449 (dependents up to 21 years of age):
On per capita method of paying general practitioners.....	150,000,000
At wholesale fee-for-service methods.....	175,000,000
At current, individual, fee-for-service rates.....	200,000,000

Where costs of administration (6%) are paid out of contributions and an additional 4% is set aside for "reserves":

Under A.B. 800 (dependents up to 18 years of age):
On per capita method of paying general practitioners.....	$158,000,000
At wholesale fee-for-service rates.....	185,000,000
At current, individual, fee-for-service rates.....	211,000,000

¹ Both bills provided that additional people might join on a voluntary basis. The additional people automatically made eligible and any that might come voluntarily, however, will not affect the above computations seriously, as they will bring roughly the same proportion of dependents and they will entail costs of about the same amount per capita under the various methods of meeting costs, and their contributions will, presumably, be the same as for all others in the system. Hence they need not be taken into account in this analysis of the funds needed to meet the benefits. The gross costs and the gross taxes will, of course, be larger but they will be larger by approximately the same amount.

² Special Report (1945) by the Division of Administration of the California State Department of Finance, James S. Dean, Director, regarding estimated cost of administering a health insurance system in California. See "Senate Committee's Study Materials," Chapter XVIII.

Under A.B. 449 (dependents up to 21 years of age) :

On per capita method of paying general practitioners	165,000,000
At wholesale fee-for-service methods	193,000,000
At current, individual, fee-for-service rates	220,000,000

c. Taxes Required to Produce the Needed Revenues

If we use the previous estimates of the number of covered workers and eligible beneficiaries in 1947, we may formulate an estimate of the amount of revenue that would come into the Health Insurance Fund and the amount it would provide per beneficiary, in 1947, under various tax proposals, by utilizing the following computations:

¹ Based on "Table I, Workers With Earnings in Insured Employment in 1940-1944" (1 percent sample), by California Department of Employment (October 4, 1946), and on California Employment Stabilization Committee, "Report of Activities, January, 1945."

² Based on United States Department of Commerce Reports on "Income Payments, by States"; postwar employment and income studies by California State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission. Dodd, op. cit. (1941), p. 7, and in Ch. I. D. 2, of the Senate Committee's Study Materials.

⁵ California State Chamber of Commerce estimate. See Ch. I. D. 3 of the Senate Committee's Study Materials.

With the above data in hand, there are several ways of computing the amount of revenue that any specified tax may produce from the estimated taxable wages under various proposals for 1947: (1) By taking Professor Dodd's carefully worked up estimates of the "Size of Health Insurance Fund" under varying conditions and years¹, and adapting them for the desired conditions and years by using the same ratios between related known and unknown items; (2) by computing the percentage that the actual income from U.C. payments in 1940 (when reduced from the basis of an average tax of 3.7 percent to that of a 3.0 percent tax) is to the taxable wages reported that year, and applying that percentage to the 1947 taxable wages to determine the proceeds of a 3 percent tax under corresponding conditions that year, and figuring from that the proceeds of a 3½ percent tax, a 4 percent tax, etc.; (3) by the relatively simple procedure of applying the proposed tax rates to the estimated taxable wages under the various conditions proposed. A trial run of the figures shows that all three sets of computations produce approximately the same results. The simplified form will therefore be used here.

d. What Taxes Will Finance Which Health Insurance Plans?

From the above income and expense estimates, it is obvious that, whether or not the State pays the administrative expenses, a 3 percent tax on earnings up to $4,000 will not be adequate in 1947 to finance the limited medical care benefits for the restricted beneficiaries either of the Warren Bill (dependents up to 18 years of age) or of the C. I. O. Bill (dependents up to 21 years of age), whether payments to general medical practitioners are made on a per capita, a wholesale, or a fee-for-service basis. It might be adequate for the benefits under either bill (i.e. whether dependents are limited to those aged under 78 or to those aged under 21) if the State pays the administrative expenses, if the tax is made applicable to earnings up to $5,000, and if physicians are paid on a per capita basis.

A 3.5 percent tax would be adequate under either bill, if the State paid the costs of administration, and provided medical practitioners were paid on a capitation basis. If the State paid the costs of administration, and the tax limit were made $5,000, it would be adequate to meet the costs on a "wholesale" fee basis. If the State did not pay the costs of administration, it would be adequate on a $3,000 income basis only if limited to dependents under 15 years of age and using the capitation method; on a $4,000 or $5,000 income base, it would permit benefits to dependents up to the age of 21. It would not be adequate to pay doctors on a fee-for-service basis, under any conditions.

A 4 percent tax, if limited to incomes up to $3,000, would not be adequate to pay doctors on a fee-for-service whether or not the State met the costs of administration. It would be adequate to pay doctors under either bill on a wholesale fee basis, if the State paid the costs of administration. If applied to incomes up to $4,000, it could meet costs based on wholesale fees under all the varying conditions except under the combination of dependents up to 21 and administrative expenses not met by the State. If levied on incomes up to $5,000, and if the State pays the costs of administration, it would be adequate to meet fee-for-service costs under either bill. It would be more than adequate on a capitation basis, even on taxable limit of $3,000 and whether or not the State meets the costs of administration.

A 4.5 percent tax, if levied on incomes up to $5,000, would be adequate under any of the conditions specified above—with or without state payment of administrative expense. If limited to incomes up to $3,000, a 4.5 percent tax would not be sufficient to pay doctors on a fee-for-service basis, unless the State met the administrative expenses. If limited to incomes of $4,000, it could not meet fee-for-service costs under the combined circumstances of dependent children being eligible to the age of 21, and the State not paying administrative costs.

A 5.0 percent tax would be more than adequate under any of the specified conditions.

From a fiscal viewpoint, therefore, the only practicable choices are:

FINDINGS OF OTHER 1946 SURVEYS

The factual information brought out in the committee's study and outlined in this report has been substantiated by two other independent surveys of the problem undertaken in California and New York State, during 1946. The California survey was made by the California Assembly Interim Health Care Investigating Committee and the New York Study by the New York State Commission on Medical Care. A few of the findings reported are given below.

CALIFORNIA ASSEMBLY INTERIM HEALTH CARE INVESTIGATING COMMITTEE

In its "Summary of the Findings" (Assembly Daily Journal, July 23, 1946, pp. 17-18), this committee reported:

1. Sickness strikes among the rich and poor, rural dwellers and urban dwellers, in California, in "much the same pattern of frequency as in the rest of the Nation."
2. Medical care facilities in the State are below the level which must exist if the people are to have "adequate" care.
3. Through insurance, the costs of illness may be averaged and protection afforded at "equitable" rates.
4. Voluntary insurance and its high insurance rates result in "adverse selection" against the insurer—making such insurance unduly expensive.
5. The costs of voluntary prepayment or insurance plans and insurance are such that protection under them for all members of a worker's family is a severe financial strain.
6. Few in the moderate income groups can afford complete coverage for all members of the family at the current individual premium rates.
7. Many who want voluntary sickness insurance cannot obtain it because of the group provisions.
8. For the most part, the voluntary plans, except as to individual contracts, have failed to reach into rural areas or into urban areas at any distance from larger centers of population. This is particularly true of those plans affording the advantages of clinical group practice.
9. Compulsory sickness insurance, even with the limited benefits of the sort proposed in the bills at the last session of the Legislature, cannot be provided through contributions of 3 percent of pay rolls as specified in those bills unless physicians operate on a salary, capitation or reduced fee basis, or unless medical care is rendered through group practice with facilities provided by the State, or unless the indigent sick are "cared for as present."

NEW YORK STATE LEGISLATIVE COMMISSION ON MEDICAL CARE

A summary of the findings of this commission, reported in their publication, "Medical Care For The People of New York State," February, 1946, is as follows:

1. "The need for medical care exists universally; there is evidence that the absolute need is approximately the same in New York State as in the Nation. The amount of care needed is somewhat greater for low-income than for high-income groups. A lack of adequate medical care tends to produce poverty and financial dependence, which in turn tend to produce a relatively greater need for care, thus establishing a vicious cycle.

2. "The amount of medical care received on the average varies not with need, but with ability to pay for it, with the exception of persons largely or completely dependent upon the public for subsistence. The disproportionately small amount of medical care received by persons of below-average income requires a disproportionately large percentage of their income. This disproportion is emphasized rather than relieved by voluntary insurance programs because their premiums are fixed without regard to ability to pay. The purchase of medical insurance at uniform rates, i.e., at the average cost, is beyond the financial capability of a large proportion of the population. The attempt of private persons and agencies providing medical care to adjust charges to ability to pay tends to but does not in satisfactory measure relieve the disproportionality mentioned.

3. "The public medical care programs in the State generally provide care only to persons whose income affords a standard of living below or close to a subsistence level. With the possible exception of hospitalization and certain health supervisory services, the public programs offer little to persons below average income but above a subsistence level.

"The hospitalization of tuberculous and mental patients is in the public interest and may be required by legal process, but the public has not fully met its obligation to provide such hospitalization as a wholly public responsibility.

4. "The provision of medical care to the population as a whole in accordance with medical needs would seem to be limited to three methods:

"Care at public expense to those who qualify under a means test.

"Care at public expense from general funds for all persons, regardless of financial ability.

"Care at individual expense on a compulsory insurance basis, with required payments graded according to financial ability.

"The first method does not seem acceptable, because to apply for care by public charitable agencies is generally distasteful and is not practiced except in emergencies or periods of great financial stress. People prefer to obtain medical care through payments from their own resources.

"The second method is not recommended, except for certain specialized services such as hospital care of tuberculosis and mental disease, because it may lead to the provision of all care by physicians, dentists and hospitals in the direct service of the State, and to reliance of the people on the State rather than their individual resources.

"The third method seems to be the most desirable and the one in greatest public favor.

5. "A majority of the people of the State believe in the purchase of medical care by insurance methods. Voluntary medical care and hospitalization insurance plans are generally available, but many persons and families find themselves unable to pay premiums, and many other encounter difficulties in enrolling, due to occupation, place of employment, age, physical condition, etc. Some persons otherwise eligible do not enroll in voluntary plans because of indifference to their own needs and the needs of children and others who may be dependent upon them.

6. "The provision of medical care in accordance with medical needs can be accomplished only if persons of above-average income contribute on behalf of persons of below-average income. To achieve this it is necessary to compel payments, either in the form of general taxes or personal contributions graded in accordance with ability to pay. A majority of the people of the State favor, and it is feasible to establish a compulsory plan under which the amount of the payments would depend on individual or family income, and which would cover everyone, with each self-supporting person making his own payments.

"A reasonably comprehensive plan would require payments of between 3 and 4 percent of income. Payments on this scale would not be much greater than the present average, because there would be added only the average cost of the additional service provided.

7. "The income of the people of the State of New York is adequate to pay for, and the State possesses personnel and facilities sufficient to implement an insurance plan covering all persons for physician and hospital care. Dental personnel are insufficient to implement any but a limited program. The experiences of voluntary and compulsory medical insurance plans indicate that there may be developed an administrative system which would preserve the freedom of action of those providing care and those receiving it."

RECOMMENDATIONS OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON PREPAID HEALTH INSURANCE

The studies conducted by the committee show that at the present time in California, there is a shortage of hospital facilities, a shortage of medical, laboratory and diagnostic facilities in general. Moreover it appears that the ratio of doctors to the population has not yet returned to its prewar level, or to a level which would be necessary and desirable if a general system of prepaid health insurance with broad coverage were to be adopted at this time. From its studies, the committee offers the following recommendations:

1. That the State of California give all possible aid to the establishment of hospitals throughout the State, particularly in rural areas where only limited hospital facilities exist today. Such a system should take advantage of the present federal hospital aid program, which together with state aid and such financing as could be advanced by cities, counties and hospital districts should enable all areas of the State to obtain reasonable hospital facilities.

(Committee recommendation unanimous)

2. That there be established by law a commission for the Study of Health Insurance. Such a commission should be adequately financed, representative of the medical profession, the hospitals, business, agriculture, labor, the general public, and the legislature. The commission should conduct a continuous survey of the problem of medical care for the people of California and of the problem of prepaid health insurance in particular. Some of the purposes of the commission should be to determine the need and demand for prepaid health insurance, to keep the legislature currently informed on the availability of medical, hospital, laboratory and diagnostic facilities in general, and the extent to which the existing voluntary systems of prepaid health insurance meet the needs of the people of California.

(For the recommendation, Sutton, Jespersen, Shelley and Salsman Against the recommendation, Breed)*

3. That there be established at once by the State of California a system of prepaid health insurance to protect the people of this State against the peril of catastrophic illness. Such a program should be limited, for the time being, to those cases where the duration of the illness is long or the cost of treatment great. The definition of "catastrophic illness" is of necessity a matter for legislative determination.

(For the recommendation, Jespersen, Shelley, Salsman Against the recommendation, Breed, Sutton)

4. That all existing voluntary systems of prepaid health insurance now operating in California be given every encouragement in their effort to fulfill the public demand for prepaid health insurance. That there be established in the Department of Insurance, a division to assume jurisdiction over all existing prepaid health insurance plans now operating in California, and that the Insurance Commissioner be given the power to license and regulate all such plans and also any new ones which may seek to establish themselves. It should be the State's purpose in this regard to set minimum standards for all such plans, to supervise their practices, to arbitrate their disputes and to correct any abuses which may arise. It is the belief of the committee that some standardization in the field of health insurance is feasible, and that a given amount of premium should purchase a definite amount of medical and hospital care, regardless of whose policy is purchased or whose plan is adopted by any individual or group.

(For the recommendation, Jespersen, Sutton, Shelley and Salsman Against the recommendation, Breed)

5. When the proposed Commission for the Study of Health Insurance has determined and reported to the Legislature that adequate hospital and medical facilities exist in California and that the supply of doctors is sufficient to render the services proposed to be given under a general system of health insurance, and that there are substantial unmet medical needs in the State not adequately covered by voluntary prepayment plans, the committee then recommends that there be established by law a comprehensive system of prepaid health insurance, having at least as much coverage and providing as many benefits as the most recent legislative proposals advanced in California. Such a system of health insurance should provide for the operation within the system of all voluntary plans which meet the standards set up by law, in much the same way that private insurance companies now operate within the Workmen's Compensation System, or under the Unemployment Disability Benefits Act.

MINORITY REPORT AND RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE SENATE INTERIM COMMITTEE ON PREPAYMENT OF MEDICAL AND HOSPITAL CARE

By

SENATOR ARTHUR H. BREED, JR.

At the 1945 Session of the Legislature, two interim committees were created to study the general subject of health insurance and report their findings. In the Assembly, the interim committee was directed to report its findings by July 1, 1946. In the Senate, the Interim Committee on Prepayment of Medical and Hospital Care was not required to report until the present session.

The Senate interim committee commenced to function immediately upon its appointment. Under the supervision of its chairman, it selected a research staff and directed that a complete investigation and study be made of the subject of prepaid medical and hospital care. The committee gave the research staff a free hand and permitted it to go about its work without interference.

In the Fall of 1946, the committee met and received from the research staff a tentative draft of the so-called studies of the staff. Included therein was a 17-page chapter entitled "Analysis of the Report of the 1946 California Assembly Health Care Investigating Interim Committee" in which the research staff characterized the studies of the Assembly committee as biased, misleading and, in substance, dishonest. In this chapter, the research staff clearly expressed its own conviction that compulsory health insurance is the desired end and that all so-called studies ought to lead to that conclusion, and if they do not, they are, therefore, biased. It was necessary for the committee, without a dissenting vote, to delete this chapter from its report. However, the significance of the chapter so deleted must not be overlooked. Necessarily, it means that the entire research work of the staff selected by the committee was predicated upon the premise held by the members of the staff at the outset that compulsory health insurance was the objective and that the so-called research studies were the means to that end.

After devoting a great deal of time to a word-by-word study of the voluminous report submitted by the research staff, on December 24, 1946 I sent the following letter to the chairman and members of the committee:

"I have read and given a great deal of reflection to the rough draft summary of the final proposed report of our committee as written by Mr. Claycombe and given to us at our last meeting in San Francisco on December 5th and 6th.

"The more I study the material submitted to us and endeavor to weigh it and analyze it objectively and to consider its implication, the more convinced I become that the suggested final report is not a document that we will be proud of; in fact, I fear that we will be busy defending ourselves for signing such a report. I find the report in general pointed in one direction; namely, toward endorsing and ustifying compulsory health insurance which is one step toward sovietizing America. Any report should be solely factual. Any slanting should be determined by the committee itself, not by the staff.

"The subject of health insurance is so broad and complex, it is difficult to present any unbiased report. The report cites certain statistics to attempt to describe a situation. I find the statistics are drawn to justify a conclusion. In other words, the whole picture is out of focus, not well-balanced, accurately weighing and proportioning the relative component parts in their true proportion and with their proper values.

"I feel that, under the conditions, our research director did as good a job as could be expected; he was new to the subject and did not have the finances or adequate research staff to thoroughly or properly collect all of the pertinent facts relative to this subject. Of necessity he had to avoid exploring fields in this subject because time, adequate assistance and finances were not available to him, with the result that the whole broad complex picture was not clearly brought to him in all its aspects so that he naturally now presents a picture to us out of focus and distorted as to facts. The report is far from being complete. Mr. Claycombe has been working under these serious handicaps which were made worse when the research assistance that he was able to obtain kept handing him only pink or red colors with which to make the picture that was submitted to our committee.

"The Legislature, in receiving a report from an Interim Committee on Health Insurance, will expect us to cover the subjects of the needs of the citizens of the State, what is now available, what services are now being rendered to the people of the State and whether or not we have any plans for improving the present conditions and the cost of any plans. The report attempts to digest other studies of health insurance but even such a digest is not what the Legislature needs in approaching the problem. The Legislature must know the basic facts on the true conditions in California, just what services are now being rendered to the citizens of the State and what the real needs are and what they cost (See Senate Resolution 131). Our committee has had but $20,000 at its disposal but the Governor's Advisory Council on Hospital Facilities, which is studying only a small segment of this subject, namely, hospital facilities in California, has an appropriation of $25,000.

"In going over the rough draft of the summary, I find a great deal of emphasis placed upon public opinion surveys and conclusions drawn therefrom which purport to indicate unmet medical needs. In my opinion, a public opinion survey is very, very far from accurately presenting facts as to needs because most people that would be interviewed by any poll would not have an overall understanding of the many present services now being rendered due to the fact that the subject is so broad and complex that no one person can be expected to know the entire state picture in true perspective. Therefore, I feel that such a survey is merely an opinion and proves very little and should not be used as a substitute for facts.

"I now sincerely suggest to the committee that we recommend to the Legislature that a continuing study be made of this subject and that a joint Senate and Assembly committee be created to advise on the continuing studies, also that an advisory committee be formed to work with the joint legislative committee; said advisory committee to consist of nominees of representatives of all groups, both public and private, that deal directly or indirectly with services affecting the health of citizens of California. For an example; representatives from the following groups, California Medical Association, Association of California Hospitals, California Pharmaceutical Association, the private health insurance group, the State Public Health Service, City Health Departments, County Health Departments, California Dental Association, Nurses Association, Biological Laboratory group, and Medical Schools of the State. It would be well also to have a representative of the Federal Veterans Hospital Administration, of the State Department of Mental Hygiene, of the State Department of Employment—one specializing in disability benefit payments, and of the Industrial Accident Commission.

"I do not wish to have the impression created that I feel that the work of this committee has been for naught. I feel the money has been well spent and that, if no other conclusion is arrived at, the work conducted under the direction of this committee has been useful to the people of the State if it only served to clearly indicate to the members of this committee and to the Senate and other interested parties that the subject of health insurance is a very broad and complex one and thus a subject that needs continuing study by many people in order to bring about an improvement of conditions within the State. No Legislature can intelligently cope with any problem until it first understands the various segments of the problem. We have made a start in recognizing some of the segments, complexities and the breadth of health insurance. I, therefore, sincerely suggest that we recommend a continuing study be made in connection with the Legislature on some such plan as I have indicated above."

I still hold the views expressed in the foregoing letter.

I am fully convinced that the studies made by the committee's research staff, shorn of their propaganda and expressions of personal opinions, demonstrate that outside of a shortage of hospital facilities due directly to population growths in the past decade, and a shortage of trained medical personnel due to the war, the State of California is in a comparatively good condition with respect to the availability of medical care.

I am further convinced that this problem has not been approached intelligently, with a careful evaluation of the availability of the separate services which comprise needed health care, but, rather, has been lumped together under the general head of "medical care," with the same treatment—compulsory health insurance—being prescribed alike for the separate services provided by hospitals, by physicians, by nurses, by pharmacists, by dentists, etcetera. The economics of each of these services differ from the other, and, to be treated intelligently and effectively, each must be given different treatment. Compulsory health insurance is offered as a panacea; the American people have had enough of governmental panaceas.

In this connection, it has come to my attention that the Alameda County Medical Association in conjunction with its general program to make the services of physicians and surgeons available to all residents of Alameda County regardless of ability to pay, has from time to time inserted advertisements in all of the daily newspapers of Alameda County calling attention to the public of the fact that the Alameda County Medical Association guarantees medical care to anyone in the county regardless of ability to pay and that to date, I am assured and reliably informed that the County Medical Association has yet to receive a reply from its advertisements by any person who is in need of medical care and is not obtaining it because he cannot pay for it. This is actual demonstration and is not a theory. It refutes the mass of assumptions, inferences and innuendos to the contrary scattered throughout the report recently prepared by the committee's research staff.

For these reasons, I recommend the following:

1. That the State of California give all possible aid to the establishment of hospitals throughout the State, particularly in rural areas where only limited hospital facilities exist today. Such a system should take advantage of the present federal hospital aid program, which together with state aid and such financing as could be advanced by cities, counties and hospital districts, should enable the rural areas of the State to obtain reasonable hospital facilities.

2. Encourage voluntary health insurance plans. Help awaken the public to the existence of means to budget the cost of illness in advance. Assist voluntary health insurance to achieve the same public acceptance and support as life insurance has acquired.

3. That we disapprove any compulsory or government-controlled plan. People have "had enough" of regimentation.

4. That there be an adequately financed joint legislative committee to continue the studies this committee has only begun, with primary emphasis given to the collection of pertinent, present-day facts in California—not mere opinion. Experience has proven that two independent committees, one from each branch of the Legislature, do not function in a manner calculated to arrive at integrated conclusions. This entire subject is far too important to the public health and welfare to be approached in any way other than the most efficient, the most effective, and the most objective.

5. That an advisory committee be formed to work with the joint legislative committee. This committee should consist of nominees of all groups and agencies, both private and public, that deal directly or indirectly with services and facilities affecting the health of the people of California.

DISCUSSION: The committee's attention has been directed by the Governor's office, by the State Department of Agriculture, and by representatives of the California Cattlemen's Association to the presence of foot and mouth disease in the Republic of Mexico. The Governor has indicated his deep concern in this grave threat to the livestock industry of the Nation and to California and has informed the committee that he will use the authority of his office to aid in any proper solution of the problem.

As of this time, the committee does not recommend an appropriation but is keeping alert to this situation and should an emergency develop which would require an appropriation in this matter, the committee will cooperate with the Governor's office in reporting it promptly to the Senate and to the Assembly.

A brief history of the present outbreak of foot and mouth disease in Mexico, together with a record of the steps taken by the State of California in this matter is as follows:

On December 26, 1946, two veterinarians of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry who had been sent to Mexico to investigate a fast spreading disease in that country telephoned to the Chief, United States Bureau of Animal Industry, Washington, D. C., that the disease had definitely been diagnosed as foot and mouth disease. At that time the disease was in the two States of Vera Cruz and Pueblo. The evening of that date all ports of entry between Mexico and the United States were closed. It is presumed that the disease was brought into Mexico through the importation of Brahman or Zebu bulls from Brazil. According to latest information, foot and mouth disease has spread to several states mostly southeast of Mexico City.

Approximately two months earlier or, on October 18, 1946, a temporary embargo on shipments of cattle from Mexico to the United States was lifted. Since that date until the finding of foot and mouth disease approximately 100,000 cattle have been moved across the border into the United States for feeding. At least 26,000 of these cattle were shipped into California. It has been a regular procedure to ship about 500,000 cattle across the border from Mexico during the winter months. If the border stations had not been closed because of foot and mouth disease, an additional 400,000 cattle would have come into the United States within the following winter months.

A circular letter was mailed by the Division of Animal Industry, State Department of Agriculture, to county livestock inspectors and practicing veterinarians in California advising them regarding the occurrence of foot and mouth disease in Mexico and requesting that they be on the alert and report any cases observed by them showing symptoms suggestive of that disease. As a result of that letter, veterinarians of this division have made a number of investigations but in each instance the trouble was found to be due to some other cause. This procedure, however, is necessary as a precautionary measure.

The presence of foot and mouth disease in Mexico is a threat to the livestock industry in California because this is a border state and the introduction of a carrier of foot and mouth disease could be a possibility.

An appropriate joint resolution is being introduced regarding this matter and suggesting the cooperation of the Congress and various United States officials with Mexican officials in combatting the disease.

Summary of Report of Action Taken by the State Public Works Board

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

SACRAMENTO, January 16, 1947

Honorable Goodwin J. Knight
President of the Senate

Honorable Sam L. Collins
Speaker of the Assembly

Respectfully submitted herewith is the first report to the Legislature of the State Public Works Board on the status of the building program of state agencies being carried out under authority of Chapter 145, Statutes of 1946 (First Extraordinary) Session. Section 12 of the act stipulates that such a report be presented within 10 days after the opening of each regular legislative session.

This act, by which the board was created and by which funds are provided for a unified program of construction, improvements and equipment for state agencies, was passed at the Special Legislative Session of January, 1946, was approved by the Governor on March 13, 1946, and became law on May 21, 1946. Since this latter date and covering the period through December 31, 1946, the board has taken certain actions designed to carry out the postwar construction program of the several state agencies. These actions taken to date are consistent with the provisions of the act. Yet, at the same time, they have been circumscribed by the difficulties, uncertainties and high costs inherent in any building program undertaken at this time. Projects approved by the board thus far and the progress being made in implementing them are recapitulated in the four schedules attached hereto and designated as follows:

SCHEDULE A—Summarizes the allocations of funds recommended by the State Public Works Board during the period May 21, 1946, through December 31, 1946. They are segregated into the four classifications of "Plans and Specifications," "Equipment," "Construction" and "Miscellaneous Repairs and Improvements" for each of the agencies participating in the program. This schedule reveals that the board has recommended to the Director of Finance the allocation of $11,044,988 as follows:

For plans and specifications	$1,182,488
For equipment purchases	2,902,000
For construction projects	4,960,500
For miscellaneous repairs and improvements	2,000,000
Total	$11,044,988

SCHEDULE B—Details the projects of each agency for which allocations have been made pursuant to board recommendation and shows the specific amount allotted for each project, the amount encumbered to date and the balance still unencumbered. As revealed in this schedule, the total amount of executive orders issued through December 31, 1946, is $10,944,093. The difference between this figure and the total of Schedule "A" represents board recommendations which have not yet been implemented through issuance of executive orders. A recapitulation of Schedule "B" follows:

Executive orders issued	Amount allocated	Amount encumbered	Unencumbered balance
For plans and specifications -----	$1,182,488	$774,491	$407,997
For equipment purchases -----	2,812,930	575,781	2,237,149
For construction projects -----	4,990,500	2,198,758	2,791,742
For misc. repairs and improvements..	1,988,175	666,662	1,321,513
Total -----	$10,944,093	$4,215,692	$6,728,401

SCHEDULE C—Relates the construction projects approved by the board to the priority listing of projects in the "Statement of Capital Expenditures Required by State Agencies," submitted by the Director of Finance at the time of the January, 1946, Special Legislative Session. Each agency's projects are listed in priority sequence. The January, 1946, estimated costs are shown in comparison with the actual amounts approved by the board for allocation.

SCHEDULE D—Shows the status as of December 31, 1946, of the $154,000,000 appropriation of Chapter 145. The summary of this schedule is:

Original appropriation -----	$154,000,000
Approved for allocation:
Executive orders issued -----	$10,994,093
Executive orders not yet issued -----	100,895
	11,094,988
Balance of original appropriation still available -----	$142,905,012

Not included in any of the foregoing schedules is reference to the serious responsibility placed on the board under Section 12 of the State Public Works Act, to report upon "the anticipated needs for expenditure during the next biennium." The period thus to be considered normally would be the two years starting July 1, 1947, and ending June 30, 1949. However, since recent passage of the constitutional amendment providing for annual legislative sessions, it has been assumed that the wording of this section should be construed to call for an estimate of construction expenditures for a one year period only, namely the fiscal year starting July 1, 1947, and ending June 30, 1948. The estimate made later in this report reflects this assumption.

The act creating the board under Section 3 says:

"The board shall determine when and if any construction . . . shall be undertaken and shall give due consideration to:

1. The immediate needs of state agencies for construction and improvements;
2. Obtaining construction . . . at the most reasonable price consistent with such needs;
3. The needs of construction . . . at state agencies in relation to the needs for private construction . . .
4. Providing of public works to relieve unemployment."

Section 3 further calls attention to the "intolerably overcrowded and distressed living conditions at our hospitals and other institutions for the care of the mentally ill and other wards of the State," and specifically directs the State Public Works Board, in the exercise of its powers and the discharge of its responsibilities "to give prime consideration to the needs of these institutions, . . . to do everything within its powers to assure prompt rectification of such conditions and to allow or suffer the undertaking of no other project . . . that will or may impair or retard the expeditious or complete attainment of these objectives for the wards of the State."

In preparing its estimate of anticipated expenditures during the coming fiscal year, the board has weighed carefully all of the foregoing factors, each in its relation to the others. The conclusion reached is that the "immediate needs" of state agencies and the specific legislative directive to give the earliest possible relief to overcrowded, obsolescent and inadequate facilities at state institutions and schools are factors of paramount importance and as such must be given the greater emphasis. It becomes mandatory, therefore, that the State during the coming fiscal year embark upon a minimum construction program even though it be one of considerable magnitude. The estimate of the board is based upon an indisputable need. Its cost is justified on the basis of such need. It has been tempered to the extent that with prudent timing it will not retard to any considerable degree the flow of materials and manpower into private construction channels.

In the opinion of the State Public Works Board the anticipated needs for expenditure by state agencies participating in the unified construction program will be as follows for the coming fiscal year:

University of California -----	$12,000,000
Department of Education -----	10,000,000
Department of Mental Hygiene -----	14,000,000
Department of Corrections -----	6,000,000
California Youth Authority -----	3,500,000
Veterans' Home -----	1,750,000
State Capitol and Offices -----	5,000,000
Department of Natural Resources -----	1,000,000
Department of Motor Vehicles -----	1,250,000
Department of Agriculture -----	350,000
State Agricultural Society and Exposition Park ----- (program undetermined)
Miscellaneous repairs and improvements -----	2,000,000
Total -----	$56,850,000

It may be noted here that the above estimate has been computed on the basis of current construction costs which the State Architect and the University of California estimate are at index 500 (Base 1913=100). Projects contemplated under this program are exclusively those itemized in the printed listing of proposed capital expenditures submitted to the Legislature in January 1946. The program as financed at that time was estimated at a 333 index.

Special attention should also be called to the above proposed expenditures for projects of the Department of Mental Hygiene. This agency, which has by far the most extensive over-all postwar program, has received recently a considerable measure of temporary relief through acquisition of two surplus federal hospitals located near Auburn and Modesto. The hospitals are now being used, will be in full operation shortly, and will then provide accommodations for approximately 5,000 institution patients. However, when these two are completely filled, there will still be greater than 1,300 patients over capacity in the other institutions of this department at a time when the ratio of patients to population is below normal.

With respect to the anticipated expenditure of $2,000,000 for projects in the miscellaneous repair and improvement category, particular reference is made to the fact that this will exhaust the funds available for these purposes. The expanded needs of all agencies for deferred maintenance and minor construction, occasioned through inability to date to commence or complete major construction and replacement projects, have created demands for these funds far in excess of earlier estimates. This aggravated condition may be expected to continue until the over-all building program is substantially completed.

In its report to the Legislature the State Public Works Board is also required to advise as to such additional amounts which should be appropriated to meet the costs of carrying out the approved building program of Chapter 145. In recommending on this subject the board has confined its analysis to the basic program as approved in January 1946, and as contemplated under the $154,000,000 appropriation made at that time. Recommendations dealing with expansions of the scope of certain approved projects, with requests for financing of new projects and for augmentation of various direct appropriation acts, are being prepared by the Department of Finance, the State Architect and the several agencies involved for inclusion in the fiscal year budget to be submitted by the Governor.

Referring specifically to the program of expenditures approved and financed under Chapter 145, the board finds that increases in costs of construction, which have occurred during the last 12 months, have rendered this program insolvent to the extent of $77,000,000. In effect, the $154,000,000 program of new construction passed last January is as of this date only two-thirds financed. This means that at the present building cost index only two-thirds of the approved construction needs of the various state agencies can be provided with funds now available. Furthermore, it is estimated by the State Architect, the University of California, and other competent authorities that no immediate reduction in building costs can reasonably be anticipated.

The circumstances which have combined to produce today's costs of construction are common knowledge and have been covered thoroughly in the press and elsewhere. However, the dates of the basic changes in the cost indices are pertinent.

The construction cost index of 100 was created in 1913. The deferred building program of California state agencies was inaugurated in 1941 upon cost index 250. In January of 1946 the index had risen to 333. This was the basis for the unified construction program financed as of that date. As of December, 1946, further rises have lifted the index to 500. Relating this to the $154,000,000 appropriation of last January, additional funds in the amount of $77,000,000 are needed to provide for completion of the program at this current cost index factor.

It is the recommendation of the board that such additional funds, if approved, be apportioned among the various agencies as follows:

University of California.....	$15,000,000
Department of Education.....	6,750,000
Department of Mental Hygiene.....	28,750,000
Department of Corrections.....	6,100,000
California Youth Authority.....	3,500,000
Veterans' Home.....	1,200,000
Department of Finance for State Capitol, office and other buildings.....	7,900,000
Department of Natural Resources.....	1,650,000
Department of Motor Vehicles.....	1,703,750
Department of Agriculture.....	225,000
State Agricultural Society and Exposition Park—Sixth District Agricultural Association.....	1,750,000
Miscellaneous repairs and improvements of which not more than five hundred thousand dollars ($500,000) shall be available to the University of California.....	2,471,250
Total	$77,000,000

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF INTERIM COMMITTEE ON SHORELINE DEVELOPMENT AND BEACH EROSION

*President and Members of the State Senate
Senate Chamber, State Capitol
Sacramento, California*

GENTLEMEN: The following constitutes a report of the activities of the Shoreline Development and Beach Erosion Interim Committee appointed under Senate Resolution No. 136 at the conclusion of our regular session in 1945, and authorized to act after final adjournment of the Fifty-sixth Session.

The work of the committee was mainly cooperative with the activities of the Department of Beaches and Parks in the administration of the legislation passed by the Legislature at the 1945 Session which provided for the expenditure by the Beaches and Parks of the sum of $10,000,000, in the purchase of privately owned beaches for public use along the shoreline of the 15 counties in the State facing the Pacific Ocean.

The first meeting of the committee was held in the Santa Barbara County Courthouse on October 20, 1945, with all members present with the exception of Senator Chris Jespersen. At that time a decision was made to advise with the Governor and the Department of Beaches and Parks along the line of administering the $10,000,000 fund in such a way that state-wide values to the public at large would come from locating publicly owned beaches in various counties along the shoreline instead of developing a limited number of outstanding beach areas. This policy is now being followed by the department with Colonel Edwin C. Kelton, State Beach Erosion Engineer, in general charge of the work. It was the consensus of the meeting that inasmuch as the $10,000,000 bill did not include any reference to maintenance of those beaches finally acquired for public use, legislation at the proper time should be presented to create a fund for that purpose.

The chairman of the committee, following the meeting in Santa Barbara and, over a period of a year, has been in consultation with Colonel Kelton and was present at the meeting on November 15, 1945, at which county representatives gathered on the invitation of General W. T. Hannum, Director of Natural Resources, to consider master shoreline development plans. A full report of this meeting with the names of all those who were present and the statements made by most of them in connection with this new plan of beach acquisition, is included in the "Preliminary Master Plan of Shoreline Development for the State of California and Status Report on County Master Plans of Acquisition," copies of which are now in the hands of the Members of the Senate, laid on your desks on January 15th. As part of this report we desire to incorporate all of the text of the report above referred to and which was prepared by Colonel Kelton on instructions from the State Park Commission. In it will be found the comprehensive and complete story on the entire subject of California's great heritage in its magnificent stretches of beach front property, much of the cream of which has fallen into private hands, and looking well into the future, should be purchased for public use, the money for such purchasing to come from the $10,000,000 fund and to be matched dollar for dollar by the counties in which the various beaches lie. The report also contains the exact status of beach front ownership either privately or publicly owned for the 15 counties from Del Norte to San Diego and a census of population fluctuations in the same counties; a description of the recreational areas near the California Coast; chapters on beach erosion problems; the method of coordination with county agencies in the expenditure of the $10,000,000; a review of the county master plan process as the situation exists at present in all of the 15 coastal subdivisions. In this relation, the committee calls the attention of the Senate to page 36 of the department's Shoreline Development Report revealing that the first beach priorities set-up and requested by the various counties either in their plans or as modified by official action of properly constituted officials, calls for an allocation of state funds of approximately $7,000,000. These requests have come from Del Norte, Sonoma, Marin, San Mateo, Monterey, San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Los Angeles and San Diego. Your committee is informed by the Department of Beaches and Parks that in order to deal fairly with five counties, which up to this time, have not submitted completed master plans or revised their old plans in accordance with present law, a reserve of $1,250,000 has been set aside to be distributed in the following counties to the extent of the money set opposite each county:

Humboldt -----	$125,000
Mendocino -----	125,000
San Francisco -----	250,000
Santa Cruz -----	350,000
Orange -----	400,000

It is the opinion of your committee that part of its duties during the next biennium will be connected with assisting the department in working to influence the supervisors of these five counties to qualify under the $10,000,000 act through the filing of proper master plans and generally arousing public interest in the idea of acquiring privately owned beaches for public use.

Further describing the department's report, the Members of the Senate will find an appendix consisting of a series of maps of the 15 counties with legends along the shoreline revealing in each county the type of ownership and also the type of service to be rendered by the various priorities in beach frontage.

It has been agreed that when the department is satisfied that all of the counties have provided master plans as required under the act and have fulfilled other requirements, that a joint meeting will be held of the department heads at which will also be present, J. R. Knowland, Chairman of the Park Commission, General W. T. Hannum, the Director of the Department of Natural Resources and members of your committee, for the purpose of a general review of the situation and for the purpose of devising ways and means of further exploiting the idea laid out in the original act and the consideration of any new legislation that should be offered for further development of the plan.

Out of an original appropriation of $7,500 for your committee, we have expended $1,487.36. Most of this money was used to pay the cost of the printing of the Preliminary Master Plan of Shoreline Development prepared by Erosion Engineer, Colonel Kelton, above referred to in this report. This leaves a balance of $6,012.64 unexpended. A reappropriation of $2,500 of this amount has been granted by your favorable action on Senate Resolution No. 27 on January 15, 1947, for the use of your committee for a period which will expire at the commencement of the next regular session. Authority for the use of interim committee money for the publication of the Shoreline Development Report was obtained from the State Controller before the work was ordered.

CALIFORNIA COMMISSION ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS

Sacramento 2, January 14, 1947

Honorable Goodwin J. Knight

President of the Senate of California

State Capitol, Sacramento, California

MR. PRESIDENT: On behalf of the chairman and members of the commission, I transmit to you herewith the 1945-46 Biennial Report of the California Commission on Uniform State Laws.

The report has been executed in triplicate, and is being presented also to the Assembly, and to the Governor.

Very truly yours,

FRED B. WOOD, Member of Commission

REPORT OF THE CALIFORNIA COMMISSION ON UNIFORM
STATE LAWS—1945-46

To the Honorable, the Governor, and Members of the California State Legislature

The California Commission on Uniform Laws begs to present the following report for the biennium 1945-1946.

There were two changes in the personnel of the commission. Mr. Martin J. Dinkelspiel of San Francisco was appointed a member in 1944 in the place of Mr. Maurice Saeta. Mr. Jefferson Davis of Los Angeles was appointed a member in 1945 in the place of Mr. Richard Olson of Los Angeles. Mr. Max Radin of Berkeley, California, was reappointed a member in 1945. Mr. Fred Wood, Legislative Counsel, is by statute the fourth member of the board.

At a meeting held in San Francisco Mr. Radin was elected chairman, and Mr. Martin J. Dinkelspiel was elected secretary of the commission.

It will clarify an understanding of the work of the commission if something is said about its general function.

One of the earliest of the purposes of the American Bar Association, when it was established in 1878, was that of securing a larger measure of uniformity in those statutes of the various states which are likely to affect the citizens of other states. Commercial law was the obvious field in which this was the case, and certain branches of commercial law were those first considered. In all the stages of this movement toward uniformity, both when it was carried on through a committee of the Bar Association and after it was managed by a group of independent commissioners meeting at a conference—always held so far as possible in close association with the meeting of the American Bar Association—members of the California Bar took an active part.

The function of the Conference of Commissioners on Uniform Laws has broadened considerably. Many other fields besides those of commercial law have been considered and uniform laws on property, public law, social welfare, civil procedure, torts and criminal law and divorce have been approved and adopted in a number of states. But, true to its original function, the commissioners neither purpose nor desire any unification of the laws of the United States which will disregard completely the special circumstances and needs of individual states. With that in mind, a distinction has recently been made between uniform acts proper and "model acts." The latter are meant to indicate the general contents of legislation but not to require precise uniformity in all details or in wording.

Since the inception of the movement for uniform laws, and up to July 1, 1945, more than 50 uniform and model acts have been submitted to the states. Some have received so little acceptance that they have since been withdrawn. The great majority have been accepted in a substantial number of the 53 law making jurisdictions of the United States.

California has a high place among the states that have fostered and encouraged the need for uniformity of certain types of legislation. This State has passed 21 of the uniform acts including all the commercially important ones, i.e., the Negotiable Instruments Act, the Sales Act, the Partnership Act, the Fraudulent Conveyances Act, the Bills of Lading and the Warehouse Receipts Act. It is especially to be noted that California has passed most of the uniform laws adopted by the states of largest population and of greatest economic importance.

Section 18, b, of the constitution of the conference, makes it the duty of the commissioners

"To procure the enactment by the Legislature of the State of such acts recommended by the National Conference as are deemed by the commissioners suitable and practicable for enactment therein."

It may be said that no uniform act is hastily recommended by the conference. Every proposal must be approved by the executive committee and referred to the appropriate committee to be drafted. This is generally done by a subcommittee of the larger committee. When the drafting committee is ready to report, the draft is considered paragraph by paragraph, and even word by word, by the entire conference sitting as a committee of the whole. These discussions in almost every instance result in substantial and sometimes far-reaching changes and amendments. The draft is then reconsidered by the subcommittee and presented in a revised form at the meeting of the conference in the next year. It is again discussed and often referred back to the drafting committee for further revision. In no case is a proposed act recommended for submission to the state legislatures unless it has been approved in at least two successive annual meetings of the conference.

Even then, as the section quoted indicates, it rests with the state commissioners to determine whether it is "suitable and practicable for enactment" in any state.

The California Commission has taken this proviso seriously. It has made it a matter of policy at no time to recommend more than a few acts to the Legislature. And it has felt that it would most successfully perform its duty if it consulted in advance with the various organizations and agencies of the State which may be said to have a special concern either with the general problem or with the special field covered by any act.

To that end, members of the California Commission have by invitation attended meetings of the Commission on Interstate Cooperation. At the last meeting of that commission on November 20, 1946, at the Clift Hotel in San Francisco, Commissioners Radin, Dinkelspiel and Wood attended and discussed the general work of the commission and the program for uniform legislation to be submitted to the next session of the Legislature.

Similarly the commission acts in close cooperation with the State Bar. The commission has invited representatives of the State Bar committees, interested in the subject matter of any proposed uniform act, to meet with the commission and discuss the act with them. The commission will, of course, take careful note of any comment or criticism by members of the bar, so that whatever is proposed may have the support of the profession.

In the case of such matters as veterans' guardianship, the advice and approval of the United States Veterans' Administration was sought and obtained.

In the 1945 Session of the Legislature, the commission proposed the Revised Veterans' Guardianship Act. A special report on the changes this would entail was prepared by Commissioner Dinkelspiel and submitted to the legislative committees and the Governor. Commissioner Dinkelspiel personally appeared before the committees of the Legislature to explain whatever questions remained. The bill, Assembly Bill 1524, was introduced and supported by Assemblymen Wollenberg, Call and George D. Collins, Jr. It was passed by both houses and signed by the Governor on July 16, 1945.

Another act presented to the Legislature was the Uniform Simultaneous Death Statute. Commissioner Radin prepared the statement for the Legislature and the Governor of the reasons for seeking to amend the existing California law on the subject. The bill (Assembly Bill 866) was introduced by Assemblymen Wollenberg and George D. Collins, Jr. It was duly passed and signed by the Governor on June 23, 1945.

The commission wishes to take this opportunity to thank Assemblymen Wollenberg, George D. Collins, Jr., and Call for their able and sympathetic aid to the work of the commission. Assemblyman Wollenberg met with the commission on several occasions to discuss the proposed bills.

Because travel conditions had improved all the commissioners attended the conference of commissioners held at Philadelphia, October 21-26, and took an active part in the discussion of the drafts presented to the conference. The entire commission had a special meeting at Philadelphia on October 24, 1946, and it was unanimously decided to present to the Legislative Session of 1947, the following three acts, which have been duly approved for this purpose by the conference:

1. Uniform Unauthorized Insurers Act.
2. Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act.
3. Uniform Contribution Among Tort Feasors Act.

This program was presented to the Commission on Interstate Cooperation at its meeting on November 20th, already referred to.

Secretary Dinkelspiel was instructed to communicate in regard to all these acts with the State Bar. He did so in a letter to the Secretary of the State Bar, dated November 27, 1946, in which he invited the chairmen of the respective committees of the State Bar to meet with the commission at their convenience to discuss the proposed legislation.

Similarly Secretary Dinkelspiel addressed a similar invitation to Insurance Commissioner Maynard Garrison and others to discuss with the commission both the Uniform Unauthorized Insurers Act and the Uniform Contribution Among Tort Feasors Act.

Representatives of the San Francisco Real Estate Board have been invited to discuss the Uniform Vendor and Purchaser Risk Act and the Title Insurance Companies Association was likewise informed of the contents of this act.

In all cases, copies of the proposed uniform acts were sent to the gentlemen named.

We hope in this way to obtain the best expert advice on how these acts would affect business and the law in this State and to obtain from those best fitted to give it, such a presentation of the need for this legislation which will most effectively secure its adoption.

Respectfully submitted.

PARTIAL REPORT OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON FISH AND GAME (SENATE RESOLUTION NO. 123)

To the Senate of the State of California

January 16, 1947

California, in a state of nature, was one of the greatest sanctuaries of the Western Hemisphere for feathered vertebrate and animals ferae naturae. Its wild life resources were unlimited. Birds flocked and animals roamed at will throughout its valleys, deserts and mountains. Fish of various kinds were abundant in its brooks, streams, and rivers. With a seacoast extending from San Diego to Eureka, its variable topography, variety of trees and verdure made it a natural haven for wild life of all kinds.

To the early settler, it was indeed a paradise and a veritable land of milk and honey.

The influx of people, the advance of civilization and the encroachment of industry has made such inroads on our wild life and their places of natural retreat that unless drastic action be soon taken to conserve the remnants of the various species of our wild life, it will soon approach extinction.

Our natural resources, once so extensive and available for human recreation and enjoyment, are likewise bowing to the woodsman's axe and, not only the habitats of the game birds and wild animals are being invaded, but the great recreational areas throughout our public domain, once free to all, are now rapidly passing into private ownership and the great western frontier, with its once wide open spaces and freedom of movement, are becoming fenced estates of the land barons, to which entrance is prevented by barbed barriers and "no trespassing" signs.

These facts are self evident. They are the natural result of advancing civilization and the conversion of a wilderness into a land for human habitation.

Nothing can nor should be done to restore conditions as they were, but much can be done that will aid in the propagation and conservation of our wild life and provide numerous recreational areas throughout the State for the use and convenience of our public. Until recently, public attention has been directed principally to the acquisition of beaches and of our redwoods, but little has been done in the way of providing controlled areas suitable for the preservation of wild life and for the use and benefit of that part of the public which prefers the wide open spaces to congested beaches and the restricted use of our public parks.

Fishing and hunting go hand in hand with recreation. Without adequate recreation, the human race would soon deteriorate in mind and body and our people would become an unhappy and quarrelsome race. The opportunity to hunt and fish is the incentive for a free people to leave their usual walks in life and go forth into the hills, the mountains and the deserts in quest of the ever elusive game. At such times a man forgets he is a laborer, a lawyer, a doctor or a tired businessman and reverts to his cave-man instinct and pits his cunning against the alertness of his quarry. The innate desire for adventure in the youth is to a large extent satisfied if he has the privilege of going forth with a gun or his rod into the wild in search of fish or game, or to explore the unknown.

Lack of recreation for the present oncoming generation has had a marked effect upon the home life of the teen-age youngsters, whose desire for adventure is circumscribed by metropolitan development and the conversion of our uplands and natural resources into cultivated fields and gardens, leaving few accessible areas where he may roam at will and do as he pleases.

Your committee, whose studies and activities were limited to the southern part of the State, made a thorough investigation of the needs for fish and game and of wild life, and the possibilities of providing ways, means and methods of making use of our public domain and our natural resources for that purpose. This involves two separate and distinct phases of the problem; i.e., the available streams and lakes for fish and the suitability and availability of our public domain and landed areas for the production of wild life and that will provide opportunities for recreation. The committee made an effort to determine the available stream mileage within the southern counties which could be utilized for stocking. These studies were directed principally to the Counties of Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Riverside, Orange, San Diego and Imperial. Some consideration was given to Kern County and to Inyo County.

The Kern County Chamber of Commerce simplified our duties by presenting a very complete and detailed report on conditions within that county. The work of bringing to the attention of the Fish and Game Commission of the needs of that county is well taken care of by the Kern County Chamber of Commerce and the sportsmen of that area.

Inyo County offers perhaps the greatest opportunities for fishing and likewise for production of fish of any of the southern counties. It has many excellent streams, a steady flow of water and suitable conditions for hatcheries and rearing ponds. The extent to which this region may be exploited for that purpose has not yet fully been determined.

The opportunities for suitable hatcheries in other parts of the southern counties are very limited. This is due to the fact that practically all of the natural streams have been appropriated and are used for either domestic or agricultural purposes, so that few, if any, of these streams can be successfully used, either for hatcheries or for rearing ponds. The committee has approved and the commission is now experimenting with two locations; one at Whittier in Los Angeles County, and the other at Victorville in San Bernardino County, where the water is produced by pumps rather than by gravity. The final determination of the desirability of these sites and this manner of raising fish will depend upon the outcome of these experiments now being made.

The committee caused the various streams to be measured, their fluctuations considered, and determined the stream mileage in the various counties to be substantially as follows:

TROUT WATERS OF FOUR SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA COUNTIES AND NUMBER OF FISHING LICENSES ISSUED

County	Stream mileage	Angling licenses issued
		July 1st to June 30th
		1944-1945	1945-1946
Los Angeles.....	114 miles	102,859	140,485
Orange	68 miles, 43 checks	9,579	16,975
Riverside	80 miles, 23 checks	6,488	7,745
San Bernardino.....	193 miles, 127 checks	21,628	24,902

Some of these streams will require check dams and some considerable work in order that they may be used to their fullest capacity. Although we have approximated the stream work necessary, we have not endeavored to set forth where checking is necessary, nor an estimate of cost.

In addition to these streams, we have a number of lakes including Big Bear Lake, Arrowhead Lake, Hemet Lake and quite a number of other smaller bodies of water suitable for stocking.

From the foregoing, it will appear that the cow counties furnish most of the streams and lakes, and the metropolitan district, most of the fishermen.

The number of fish which these waters will carry will depend largely upon the nature of the work which is done upon the streams, and the manner in which the streams and the lakes are stocked, as well as the size of the fish used for stocking. It is our belief that the streams and lakes within the counties above mentioned, if improved as hereinbefore suggested and if properly and periodically stocked, will furnish fishing opportunities for the rapid growing population of Southern California.

At the present time, the available hatcheries and rearing ponds now operated by the State are inadequate to supply the fish which will be necessary, if these lakes and streams are to provide the fishing requirements now demanded by the population within that area. We do not advocate a stocking which will insure that every fisherman will catch a limit on every occasion, but we do advocate that the streams and lakes be exploited to their fullest capacity so that at least an opportunity to catch a few fish shall be afforded every sportsman who wishes to indulge in that recreation. Just what number of fish will be required to accomplish this, we are not now in a position to state, but we do know that it will require the development and operation of every hatchery site in the southern part of the State which may be reasonably adapted to that purpose.

With an adequate appropriation and an augmented personnel, the Fish and Game Commission should be able to do this work within a comparatively short time, if not too badly hamstrung by the red tape regulations of the Department of Finance and the Division of Architecture.

RESTORATION OF WILD LIFE

Restoration of wild life in the southern counties has unlimited possibilities. The counties which offer the greatest opportunity for that purpose are Inyo, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Riverside, Imperial and, to some extent, San Diego. The area of these counties and the public lands available are as follows :

County	Total area in acres	Area of public domain
Inyo -----	6,458,240	2,893,946
Los Angeles -----	2,605,440	24,171
San Bernardino -----	12,883,840	8,248,294
Riverside -----	4,594,560	1,068,397
Imperial -----	2,741,760	589,616
San Diego -----	2,725,170	121,774

These figures do not include national forests, national parks, Indian land or military reserves. As of September, 1943, the Federal Government owned and controlled 86.37 percent of all the lands within Inyo County; 24.03 percent of the lands in Imperial County; 71.54 percent of the lands in San Bernardino County; 45.35 percent of the lands in Riverside County.

The hunting licenses issued in the four southern counties are as follows :

	July 1st to June 30th 1944-1945	July 1st to June 30th 1945-1946
Los Angeles -----	45,731	65,708
Orange -----	3,988	4,833
Riverside -----	4,755	6,085
San Bernardino -----	5,940	8,192

Again we find that the metropolitan areas furnish the hunters but the cow counties must provide the game.

During the war period, several millions of troops were trained and housed in the public domain in these counties. As a protection to the health of these troops, wild life in every form was eradicated, and the springs and water holes were filled and sealed. Brush and cover, once the protection of upland birds and animals, was, insofar as possible, eradicated and destroyed and this great area, comprising upwards of 12,000,000 acres of land within the Counties of Imperial, Riverside, San Bernardino and Inyo, was left barren of all signs of wild life insofar as it could be humanly eradicated. It will be a Herculean task to restore these springs and water holes, and to make available water for the use of upland birds and animals which once inhabited that territory.

The reclaiming of the public domain in these counties is further complicated by the action of the Army and Navy in selecting and condemning large areas of land particularly adaptable to wild life, which areas are to be set apart as gunnery ranges, bombing areas and so-called danger areas. These proposed areas are located in Imperial, Riverside and San Bernardino Counties. The extent to which the Army and Navy propose to go, in taking over these areas, has not yet been determined, but we do know that already several hundred thousand acres of the public domain, which would otherwise be available for wild life and for hunting, are now under the control of the Army and the Navy, and entrance thereto by the public is prohibited.

Not only does the action of the Army and Navy, in so taking over these large tracts of land, circumscribe and limit recreational possibilities, but makes it impossible to carry on any program of wild life development within the territory thus being claimed as necessary for national defense.

Notwithstanding that these bombing areas are eliminated from our wild life development program, there is, nevertheless, ample territory available to initiate the work and keep the program going for quite a number of years to come.

The work necessary to restore this great natural habitat of wild game is the development of water, the improvement of springs and the installation of a new type of water catchment basins, which has been approved by the Fish and Game Commission. The program of installing these water catchment basins for the next two years will be outlined in the budget requests of the Fish and Game Commission and should receive our unanimous support.

If the program of restoring these great areas to a suitable condition and the planting of wild life in such parts thereof as are fit for that purpose is carried to completion, we have every reason to believe that the public domain within the counties heretofore referred to will furnish ample public shooting grounds for upland birds to afford the sportsmen of Southern California reasonable opportunity for sport with the possibility of getting some game.

Not only is water necessary to maintain wild life, but food and cover are also essential. Investigation has shown that large parts of the public domain will furnish food and coverage for wild life with the expenditure of a little effort in the replanting and reseedling of food producing grasses and shrubs adaptable to that area.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the necessity for the immediate selection and reservation of every area on the public domain which will sustain wild life. Also, immediate action is necessary to prevent the further private appropriation of springs and water holes throughout the public domain which are or may be necessary to support wild life in that region.

All water within this State has been declared to be owned by the State and, so far as not already appropriated for private use, these waters should be reserved for wild life, otherwise the program for stocking this area will fail.

For years our natural resources throughout the Nation have been exploited without regard to the effect upon game conservation or wild life. Our wild life has been more recklessly neglected and destroyed than any of our natural resources. The marked increase in hunters and fishermen threatens most game birds and animals with extinction.

Experience has shown that under proper conditions, wild life will reproduce itself and the forest and open space will become repopulated if the birds and animals are but given some protection and an equal opportunity. This will not be accomplished simply by the planting of birds, unless there is water, feed and covering available. Some protection must also be afforded them if they are to respond to their natural instincts to survive and multiply.

Real conservation of wild life means restoring to the highest possible level and maintaining in a state of high productivity those areas that can be most successfully used to sustain wild life when it is once restored.

No program for the revival of wild life in California can be successfully carried on without coupling with it, and making an inseparable part of such program the preservation of water, forests and large areas of our public domain suitable for that purpose. With feed, water and cover, the California quail, the pheasant, and all upland birds will soon repopulate themselves if they are protected from predatory animals and the unsympathetic hunter.

The experience of "Ducks, Unlimited" has shown that the restoration of water refuge areas and marshes on the breeding grounds and along the flyways has done far more toward restoration than the shortening of seasons and limiting the kill.

The matter of policing, the establishment of seasons, bag limits and regulatory measures should be vested in the Fish and Game Commission; but the program for the future is a matter strictly within the legislative province.

From what we have heretofore said, it is apparent that a fairly satisfactory program for fish hatcheries, rearing ponds, the restocking of streams and lakes is well under way. The check-damming of streams and the making available of water not now used, will require appropriations of money not now available to the commission. These appropriations should be provided by this Legislature so as not to further delay this important work.

The restoration of our wild life in our open spaces is still discussed in generalities. This program must become definite. In order to carry it into effect and make available all possible recreational areas, a substantial sum of money should be earmarked and set aside for that purpose. It is only when the money is definitely allocated that progress with certainty can be made.

In considering this problem, your committee feels constrained to recommend that the amount of money made available for the wild life program be sufficient to permit the acquisition of a number of large areas of land which can serve the dual purpose of wild life sanctuaries and recreational areas for the public. There will be introduced for consideration by the Legislature, a number of bills for the carrying into effect the various recommendations herein suggested. As and when these bills are brought up for consideration, your attention will be directed to them with the hope of enlisting the unanimous support for a program so essential to California's future welfare.

Inasmuch as the work which we have suggested will extend over a period of years, it is our intention to suggest to you the continuation of a committee whose functions will be to aid in mapping a wild life reproduction program as well as the acquisition of the recreational areas, and of doing such other things as may be necessary to expeditiously get the wild life conservation started and carried into completion.

Our studies have not included migratory birds under the control of the Federal Government. At one time there were many duck breeding grounds within this State. These have either been destroyed or deserted by the duck. Whatever can be done to restore these marsh areas for the protection of the duck should be done, and the acquisition of such areas should become a part of the state program of wild life conservation.

We also recognize the necessity of establishing resting ponds and protected areas along the flyways throughout the State, so that ducks will not be diverted from their established course, but will be encouraged to continue their accustomed flight ways, with some assurance that they may travel from their nesting grounds to the warmer waters of the South and, at least some, again return to the nesting region.

It is our hope to make other constructive recommendations before the session closes. In the meantime, we will cause legislation to be prepared to carry out such of the foregoing program as present conditions seem to justify.

Respectfully,

RALPH E. SWING, Chairman
CHARLES BROWN
NELSON S. DILWORTH

Senate Resolution No. 34

Relating to the March of Dimes campaign

WHEREAS, This week opens the March of Dimes campaign to collect funds to carry on the work of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, in preventing and relieving the terrible suffering of children stricken each year with infantile paralysis; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of California, That the people of this State are urged to contribute generously to this fund; that each will recall the eager joy he has seen light the face of a child when offered some small gift of candy or a simple toy, and imagine how much greater is the gift which can be offered through contributions to this fund, in bringing to afflicted children gifts without which life itself is but a miserable mockery, the ability to walk and play, the gift of hope and faith that some day useless limbs will be made well, and that there may be attained an adult life full of the joy of work and accomplishment instead of the hopeless monotony of the hospital cot or the wheel chair, and that having in mind the purpose of these funds the people of this State will give largely, in proportion to the great benefits these contributions will bring not only to the afflicted but by helping to eliminate this terrible disease and removing its crippling threat from all the children of America.

INSTITUTIONS IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Subcommittee composed of Assemblyman George Clarke, Chairman, and Senators Fred Weybret and Earl D. Desmond

To: Senator George Hatfield, Chairman of the Agriculture and Livestock Problems Interim Committee established by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 51, Statutes 1945, Resolution Chapter 141

DEAR SENATOR HATFIELD: Your subcommittee composed of the above members has examined the agricultural operations at the following institutions in the order named and on the dates indicated after each:

Fricot Ranch School for Boys, December 21, 1946.

Folsom State Prison, December 21, 1946.

San Quentin State Prison, December 22, 1946.

Your subcommittee by this inspection has completed a review of all the institutions in Northern California having agricultural operations in accordance with the resolution adopted in the partial report of July 22, 1946.

The subcommittee feels that its investigation of these three institutions has been very worthwhile, both from the legislative and administrative standpoint. Some of the members of this subcommittee have previously inspected the agricultural operations at Folsom and Fricot Ranch School for Boys. This made it possible to make a comparison and to note the progress being made and also to note the results of the services being rendered by the Agricultural Adviser for the Director of Finance. The inspections were made in the same manner as previously at the other institutions with similar results. The subcommittee viewed at first hand all agricultural operations and the problems and benefits which may be derived for the inmates and for the State which it recommends be carefully considered.

The members of the subcommittee are ready to recommend a legislative policy as respects agriculture for these institutions. Particularly the desirability of the coordination of the agricultural operations of one institution with the others was more apparent to the members of the subcommittee at this time than previously. The establishment of a definite policy by the Legislature as respects agricultural operations at the several state institutions appears to be particularly desirable.

As reported previously, the administrators of the institutions inspected at this time stated that for the first time they were able to present to the Legislature through a regular committee their agricultural problems and had an opportunity to have recommended to them a policy for their operations.

Throughout this inspection we were accompanied and assisted by Mr. R. B. Easson, Agricultural Adviser for the Director of Finance, Mr. P. T. Poage, Assistant State Architect, Mr. Rolland A. Vandegrift, Legislative Auditor, Mr. John H. Klinger, Deputy Director of the Department of Correction, and Mr. Ellsworth Frank, Administrative Officer of the Youth Authority, and at San Quentin by Mr. Clinton T. Duffy, Warden, and A. R. Todd, Business Manager, at Folsom by Robert A. Heinze, Warden, and at Fricot Ranch School for Boys by Mr. Orrin Bell, Assistant Superintendent, and Melvin Zwinge, Farm Manager.

The subcommittee received the fullest cooperation and most valuable assistance from all of these persons and wishes to express its sincere appreciation.

This entire investigation of the agricultural operations at San Quentin, Folsom and Fricot Ranch School for Boys was based upon the contemplated growth already determined for each institution; and should any material change be made in the inmate population, a corresponding increase or reduction to meet these changes should be made at each institution.

A review of the inspection and findings for each of these institutions, together with a full questionnaire covering the entire aspect of agriculture and livestock problems for each of these institutions, is presented herewith. A consolidated summary of recommendations for San Quentin, Folsom and Fricot Ranch School for Boys is presented immediately following this transmittal letter.

The summary recommendations covering the particular object and appropriation considered at each institution and as determined by the subcommittee is set up separately for each. Your subcommittee recommends that the entire supplemental report be approved and adopted by the full committee.

Respectfully submitted.

GEORGE A. CLARKE, Chairman
FRED WEYBRET
EARL D. DESMOND

CONSOLIDATED SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS

General Recommendations

The general recommendations published on pages 5, 6 and 7 in the partial report previously referred to are applicable to the three institutions covered in this report with certain modifications as follows: 1 (should be amended to provide for a legislative review each year in place of the biennium previously recommended in order to conform to the annual session of the Legislature; 2 (amended to provide for a questionnaire each year prior to the convening of the Legislature in order to comply with the requirement for an annual session), items 3, 4, 5, 10, 11, 12 and 14 identical as in first partial report. The other general recommendations previously made should be modified as follows for the three institutions now under consideration:

(6) The number of inmate workers assigned to agricultural operations and food preparation and preservation are adequate within their abilities at these three institutions. However, at Folsom the supply was not always available when required. The inmates at Fricot, although of immature years, should be sufficient in number and strength to carry on the limited agricultural work there, but it is apparent that no definite plan has been worked out and therefore effective assignments have not been made. In fact, it was the conclusion of the subcommittee based on what they saw that this feature of the institution is not organized, and there is a definite deterioration in the institution in this respect from the conditions that existed when members of the subcommittee were there previously. Your subcommittee wishes to again emphasize that we recognize the primary consideration at these institutions is the welfare of the inmates. We again emphasize, however, that the economic production by state institutions of agricultural commodities for the use of the State is of importance. It is also important that the inmates of these three institutions in particular be kept active, and there appears to be no more profitable occupation than having them produce a part of their food supply.

It is recommended that the management of these institutions take every possible step to classify inmates and to discover those that are able to work and to assign them to the business manager for the necessary agricultural work, and that a coordinated plan of occupational therapy adjusted to the production need and the agricultural possibilities of each institution be developed and maintained. It was apparent that the assignment of inmates to working groups and their management was better developed at San Quentin than at the other two institutions. It should be noted, however, that San Quentin operations are much restricted on account of lack of land and water, the dairy, hog ranch and poultry plant practically constituting the entire activity. Assignment at Folsom of workers has materially improved in the last year but still has room for future improvement. There is a limitation, however, due to the character of the inmates. Assignment at Fricot leaves much to be desired and undoubtedly depends upon working out a plan of agricultural development which in turn probably depends on securing a proper permanent civil service agricultural instructor and manager. The subcommittee feels that it is unfortunate that due to certain civil service regulations an employee who appears to be competent and who is available at this institution cannot be retained, for it is particularly difficult to secure a competent man at this location which is somewhat isolated. The subcommittee believes that the Personnel Board should take such circumstances into account and provide the necessary relief and make it possible to meet such situations. Unless a practical and rational approach is used in circumstances of this sort, key positions are likely to remain vacant and the interests of the State suffer. It is the feeling of the subcommittee that routine red tape should be cut in favor of a practical solution.

The subcommittee feels that the whole agricultural program at the Fricot Ranch School for Boys needs a fresh study and the development of a complete plan. It is recommended that this be done in conjunction with the Agricultural Adviser to the Director of Finance.

An examination of the attached questionnaires discloses a considerable difference in the relative number of paid employees used in agricultural production. Fricot Ranch School for Boys and San Quentin each have only one paid employee for agricultural operations; Folsom has four.

San Quentin has done a remarkable job with its limited operations, particularly with its dairy and hog ranch with one paid employee. Four paid employees at Folsom is not excessive for the size of their agricultural operation. If they can secure comparable results with San Quentin they will show a further remarkable improvement and more than satisfactory results. One man should be able to manage successfully the limited agricultural operations possible at Fricot.

The conclusion in our first partial report that the cost of production is generally higher where there is a larger percentage of paid help is true at these three institutions.

The subcommittee emphasized for the other institutions that the recommended procedure in the assignment of inmate help need not and should not result in the retaining of good workers in the institution when they have progressed to a state when they should be eligible for discharge or parole. Since the discharge and parole of the inmates of these three institutions is handled by a separate board, there is little danger that an inmate will be retained solely because he is a good worker. The subcommittee feels that the proper development of occupational therapy through agricultural labor can very well provide a stepping stone for preparing the inmate for parole or discharge.

In our previous report under this same section it was pointed out that more inmate labor should be available in the Department of Corrections, that is, in the prisons and Youth Authority institutions, than in the institutions operated by the Department of Mental Hygiene. This inspection demonstrated that there is a large surplus of able-bodied labor at the two prisons visited. There should be sufficient available inmate labor of relatively high quality and with a crying necessity for something to do. It is recommended that this condition be taken into account in the agricultural operations and in the construction of buildings and facilities for agriculture. It is believed that at these three institutions practically all of the construction for agriculture, including the terracing and rebuilding of land, can be carried out by inmate labor.

Enough labor should be available at the two prisons to produce all of the agricultural products required, the only limitation being the availability of land and water. In some instances a surplus can be produced, as in the cannery operation at Folsom, for use at other institutions. It was noted by the subcommittee that the recommendation for the increased output of the cannery at Folsom to supply deficiencies at other institutions has been given consideration, and the largest pack in the history of the cannery was put up this year.

(7) In our first partial report general recommendation No. 7, your subcommittee stated that building costs for agricultural purposes at all of the institutions are considerably higher than they should be, thus making a capital investment much in excess of that required for the private operator. We are pleased to report that this condition does not generally apply to the three institutions now under discussion. The agricultural setup at the Fricot Ranch School For Boys remains practically as it was when taken over by the State, and the proposed buildings are to be built with inmate labor. The agricultural structures at the two prisons are more nearly in keeping with what the commercial operator would have. These buildings have been constructed with inmate labor, and we believe that this procedure should be used in the future. In fact, the subcommittee noted that the fullest use had been made of available material, much of it salvaged, in constructing the facilities for the hog ranch both at Folsom and San Quentin. Dairy barns and milking houses were about what the commercial operator can afford. They seem to be quite satisfactory.

(8) The comment in the first partial report in general recommendation No. 8 calling attention to the fact that breeding sows are too heavy for many institutions must be modified for the three institutions now under consideration. This matter is under control. San Quentin in particular has worked out a satisfactory system by butchering sows after they have farrowed twice. Other institutions could undoubtedly follow this practice and materially increase the average number of pigs raised.

(9) General recommendation No. 9 in the partial report called attention to the fact that self-feeders were not used on any of the hog ranches and it was recommended they be used. San Quentin is making satisfactory use of self-feeders with hogs being fattened for butchering. The price per pound of producing pork at this institution, although they have no pasture at all and little garbage, is one of the lowest at any state institution.

(13) Both the Fricot Ranch School For Boys and Folsom are making considerable use of sheep to convert surplus green feed into meat following recommendation No. 13 in our partial report. Further development for both Folsom and Fricot along this line appears to be possible following general recommendation No. 13.

(15) The cannery situation for these three institutions is quite satisfactory. Folsom canning all that is required for both prisons. San Quentin produces no surplus available for canning. If the prison farm is established for San Quentin, study should be made of the desirability of having a cannery at San Quentin.

(16) The subcommittee wishes to add a new general recommendation to those previously presented in the partial report. The subcommittee is of the opinion that material values will be derived by the State if an annual or possibly a semiannual conference is held at Sacramento, or the most convenient central location or at some state institution where a demonstration is desired, of all the direct managers of agricultural operations at the several institutions. At some institutions it might be the business manager, at others the head farmer, or whoever is responsible at the institution for the management of agricultural operations. It is suggested that this conference be called by the Agricultural Adviser of the Department of Finance. This conference should serve two distinct purposes. First, it should give ample opportunity for the several agricultural managers to compare methods of management and results secured so that the successes, particularly the economies, secured at one institution may be shared with the others and the mistakes and failures that are made may be corrected. The second benefit would be to forward the coordination of agricultural operations so that not only would each institution be as nearly self-supporting as possible, but the whole program of production would be coordinated so as to make all institutions as nearly self-supporting as possible by providing that where a surplus could be produced due to particularly favorable conditions, such as walnuts at Camarillo, alfalfa at Napa State Farm, milk and beef at Chino, it could be supplied to the institutions where there are deficiencies.

(17) In the near future Folsom will be producing a surplus of valuable calves of high production strain and disease-free. San Quentin is now producing a surplus of valuable calves of high production strain and disease-free. For the time being this surplus can be used to build up a dairy herd at the new prison at Soledad. Some surplus can be sold to other state institutions. However, many of these institutions likewise have surplus animals. The state hospitals are now permitted to sell their surplus, and the dairy trade seeks an opportunity to secure these valuable animals. The restrictions on the sale of products produced in prisons except for state use prevents the free sale of the surplus from the prison herds and thereby prevents this general assistance to building up the herd commercial dairy productivity and profitableness.

The subcommittee recommends that legislation be enacted removing this restriction. Besides assisting the dairy industry in general, the ability to sell the surplus animals will encourage the prison administrators in the production of high producing herds, and the proceeds from the sale of valuable animals will materially cut production costs.

SPECIFIC RECOMMENDATIONS FOR EACH INSTITUTION

Fricot Ranch School for Boys

This institution is located a few miles from San Andreas, Calaveras County.

Although there are no appropriation items being held for this institution pending the recommendation of the Agriculture and Livestock Problems Interim Committee, it was the conclusion of the committee that all state institutions should be visited so as to secure an over-all picture and be able to make comparisons of the various operations and to make recommendations to the Legislature concerning agricultural operations.

Recommendations

(1) Physical Condition. The subcommittee is of the opinion that the physical condition at this institution has deteriorated somewhat since the prior visit of some of the members of the subcommittee. The grounds are not as well kept, some of the store houses are dirty and disorderly and the surplus materials in the power plant created a fire hazard. The very fine complement of machine tools in the shop did not show the appearance of being properly organized and used.

There did not appear to be as much evidence of industry at this institution as might be possible.

(2) Poultry Plant. The major concern in agricultural development was the establishment of an adequate poultry plant. This item is not provided for in the current or proposed budget. Land has been leveled for the plant at a site which appears to be satisfactory to the subcommittee. It is believed that this project can be carried on successfully by the boys confined to this institution who are in the age group below 17 years. The subcommittee recommends that a moderate sized poultry plant be constructed, and if it is possible, by the inmate labor with the assistance of instructors and material to be secured for this plant as soon as possible. It is recommended that properly selected chicks be secured and that the project be made one of instruction for the inmates to be carried out on the basis of a commercial plant operated to show a profit as is essential for a private citizen engaging in the poultry business.

(3) Orchard. The school has a surplus of walnuts, and the proposal was made that some of these be pulled out and deciduous fruits, including apples, plums, pears, peaches, etc., be planted in their place. The subcommittee recommends against pulling out any of the growing walnut trees, for these are a profitable crop and can be harvested by the inmates. The subcommittee, however, recommends that all types of deciduous fruit trees that will grow in this area be planted and that the area adjacent to the walnut orchard that can be irrigated be used for this purpose, that the necessary land be cleared and the trees be purchased as soon as possible and planted, due consideration being given to irrigating them. Since this is primarily an annual labor job, these trees can be planted by the older boys as a work project.

The walnut trees growing on the place are long overdue for a pruning job. This can be undertaken on the basis of an educational project instructing these boys in pruning if the institution's employees are qualified instructors or farmers to handle such a project.

The marketing of surplus walnuts this year did not appear satisfactory. The price received was too small. It is suggested that an investigation be made of the proposal to have the State Purchasing Agent dispose of them to other institutions.

(4) Sheep. Fricot runs something like one hundred head of sheep on the grazing land. This appears to be a desirable project. However, only as many sheep should be kept continuously as can be fed on the natural pasture and such planted pasture as can be developed. It appears that there will be a surplus of natural pasture in the spring months. If this is so, a sufficient number of feeder lambs should be secured to consume this pasture. The school should not handle an excess number which have to be fed.

It is believed that some additional feed can be produced by constructing some terraces below the ditch which can be irrigated. These can be planted to ladino clover and other grasses. No great area can be utilized.

(5) Hog Ranch. The subcommittee is informed that it was proposed only to carry enough hogs to consume the garbage of the institution. The subcommittee concurs in this idea and feels that either the securing of enough feeder pigs or maintaining one or two brood sows will be sufficient. At present one sow is maintained with a high production of pigs secured.

(6) Slaughter House. The subcommittee was informed that the State Inspector had reported adversely on the slaughter house and had recommended that a very large expenditure be made. The subcommittee feels that the slaughter house should be cleaned up, but otherwise is satisfactory for the reason that probably not more than eighteen pigs will be slaughtered there in a year. The facilities are far better than are found on the average farm where the same volume of slaughtering takes place.

The cost of erecting a slaughter house to meet the requirements outlined by the State Inspector would be excessive as measured by the amount of slaughtering to be done. In no way can such an expenditure be justified. The subcommittee is of the opinion that the State Inspectors should review the requirements they set up in conjunction with the amount of slaughtering which is to be done and the rules that they apply should be practical and in line with what would be required for the same volume of slaughtering as being conducted by a private school or private enterprise. Reasonable provision for sanitation should be required. The ordinary rule of law is that requirements should be only those that a reasonable man would dictate, and there should not be a recommendation for maximum requirements merely because it is a state activity.

(7) Water Supply. The subcommittee inspected the water supply in the reservoir and discussed the proposal that the reservoir be dredged. While the subcommittee felt it might be necessary and desirable to dredge out the reservoir to get rid of the debris and silt, they recommend that careful consideration of the cost be taken into account. It appears that some of the debris has found its way into the reservoir from the sidehill and that some has come down the ditch. If this reservoir is dredged out, the subcommittee recommends that a ditch with a sufficiently high embankment on the reservoir side be erected around the reservoir to catch all salvage deposits being washed down the hill. The subcommittee also recommends that a ditch coming into the reservoir empty first into a small pond with a gate outlet fitted with a satisfactory screen which will retain pine needles, leaves, etc., and prevent them from going into the reservoir. This small pond would act as a settling place for the debris, and it could be cleaned out often by the use of inmate labor and would not require the assistance of heavy machinery.

(8) Garden. The subcommittee believes that this institution can develop more individual gardens worked by the inmates in areas that could be irrigated from the ditch. These can be used as educational projects as well as yield fresh vegetables. A proper program of production makes it possible to have fresh vegetables a full 12 months of the year.

Folsom State Prison

There are no budget items or work orders pending for agricultural buildings and improvements at this institution which have been held in abeyance due to the agreement as respects such appropriations in the 1945-47 Budget. However, for reasons before stated, the subcommittee made an inspection of the agricultural operations at this institution.

Recommendations

(1) The subcommittee wishes first to make a comment and recommendation in general terms to the effect that the very noticeable improvement in the farm operations at Folsom which has occurred in the past few months be continued. Several members of the subcommittee had inspected the agricultural operations several months before and found conditions particularly unfavorable in the dairy and the hog ranch. Material improvement was noticed.

(2) Barn. One item which should be replaced and which was agreed to by the subcommittee is the barn that was burned down some months ago. This barn is needed for proper storage and operations.

(3) Dairy. The dairy shows considerable improvement. The corrals are cleaner and have been drained. However, one corral to the west of the feed storage barn and the bull pens should be provided with more adequate drainage. The drainage from this cow corral should be diverted toward the river and not allowed to run down the road in front of the farm office. It appears that trench drains filled with fairly large crushed rock and sloping to the north coupled with periodical scrapping of the area as is carried on in the other corrals might solve the problem.

The recent use of the silo is commendable and plans should be made for its further use.

The dairy produces all the milk required and a sufficient surplus to raise calves for replacement. For the year ending June 30, 1946, milk cost $0.2945 per gallon. While this is a favorable price, it is somewhat above the cost of San Quentin which was $0.2795 per gallon. This is significant for San Quentin operates in a very restricted area with practically no opportunity of producing feed, has no range for its dry cows, no permanent pasture, and yet is able to make a considerably better record than Folsom. It is apparent that San Quentin culls closer and has a higher average production. The Folsom herd is both tuberculous and Bang's disease free. The herd is also 75 percent free from mastitis. The San Quentin herd is 100 percent free from mastitis. Further work will be necessary to eliminate mastitis as they have in San Quentin.

The subcommittee recommends that the splendid progress made in improving this herd in recent months be continued with energy and that the good practices followed at San Quentin be considered for adoption by Folsom.

In the near future Folsom will be producing a surplus of valuable calves of high production strain and disease free. Some surplus can be sold to other state institutions. However, many of these institutions likewise have surplus animals. The state hospitals are now permitted to sell their surplus, and the dairy trade seeks an opportunity to secure these valuable animals. The restrictions on the sale of products produced in prisons except for state use prevents the free sale of the surplus from the prison herds and thereby prevents this general assistance to building up the herds' commercial dairy productivity and profitability.

The subcommittee recommends that legislation be enacted removing this restriction. Besides assisting the dairy industry in general, the ability to sell the surplus animals will encourage the prison administrators in the production of high producing herds, and the proceeds from the sale of valuable animals will materially cut production costs.

(4) Garden. Since more garden area of good quality is urgently needed for the reason that most of the land at Folsom is shallow and of poor quality, it is suggested that consideration be given to making some fertile land for vegetables and other high value crops where it can be irrigated and managed advantageously. This can be done by building walls and filling in the soil with a relatively high proportion of scrapings from the corrals. If the built-up area is to be in excess of 18 inches, the bottom can be filled with prunings from the orchard and shrubbery about the institution and other compost material.

(5) Hog Ranch. The hog ranch operations also show very material improvement in recent months. The size of the litters has improved. The general health of the hogs is noticeably better and the entire management reflects considerable improvement. The production price of pork has been brought down to $0.2368 per pound. This is slightly above the cost at San Quentin where production conditions are more difficult with a very restricted area and no opportunity to produce more than a very limited amount of green feed. The subcommittee believes that with continued improvement in management, the cost of producing pork at Folsom can be materially reduced. The subcommittee suggests that a larger area be put in permanent pasture, such pasture to contain a high percentage of ladino clover so as to provide the necessary proteins. Since the soil is shallow and in some places somewhat rocky, it may be necessary to install overhead sprinkler systems in some of the area. In this way permanent pasture can be produced on the sidehills which will both make them productive and eliminate erosion. Terraces should be built where necessary.

This irrigated pasture should not have stock put on it while wet. This is particularly true with hogs for they will root up damp ground readily but are not as likely to do so when it is dry. Also, rooting can be avoided to a large degree by ringing all hogs placed on pasture.

More cement feeding areas should be constructed and proper drainage provided in some of the areas.

It is suggested that a supply of fresh earth be made available in the farrowing pens. This has been found advantageous at other institutions.

While the brood sows did not appear to be overly heavy, averaging from 350 to 400 pounds, the subcommittee believes that even better results can be secured if the average weight is kept lower, say an average of 300 pounds. The system used at San Quentin of only farrowing sows twice results in an average weight of 250 pounds. Excellent results have been secured under this plan.

Some additional shelter houses and particularly better shelter for the hogs being fattened appears to be desirable. The open shelter at San Quentin is inexpensive and very satisfactory.

The pork production required, according to the questionnaire which is attached, is 96,000 pounds, while only some 78,000 is being produced. It appears that the number of brood sows should be built up from the present inventory of 91 to the number necessary to produce all the pork required.

(6) Poultry Plant. The poultry plant handles only 1,300 layers which last year produced 20,000 dozen eggs. This was less than half of the number required. The cost per dozen is $0.4249. This cost is higher than secured at several of the other institutions. It is recommended that the size of the poultry flock be increased to meet all requirements. This should result in reducing the cost per dozen. Unless such increase is made it will not justify a full-time employee for the poultry operations.

The proposal to build additional brooder houses should be gone into thoroughly with the Agricultural Adviser of the Department of Finance to determine whether this is necessary or if it is not better to secure chicks at intervals, brooding a smaller number at each time so as to provide a more continuous production of eggs. If this is not advisable the additional brooder houses should be completed and additional laying houses and the necessary yards should be added as soon as possible.

These buildings, as well as all others at Folsom, should be constructed by inmate labor. The subcommittee understands this to be the plan of the administration.

(7) Sheep. The area of Folsom is relatively large, being 1,313.3 acres. Buildings, lawns and shrubbery occupy only 130 acres. There are 657.7 acres in dry land pasture and 79.6 acres characterized as wasteland. This pasture land and wasteland produces a considerable amount of winter and spring feed. Much of this cannot be used because of lack of livestock. The subcommittee recommends that serious consideration be given to placing feeder lambs on this pasture in the late winter and early spring. As many lambs as can be carried on the pasture should be secured as early as possible, and when grown out and fattened they could be slaughtered and what cannot be consumed at once can be held in cold storage.

Additional lots, probably as many as 200 at a time, should be secured in succession as long as the available feed will carry them. If a small amount of ladino clover is available, even if it is not more than 10 acres, this can be used to top them off by placing the lambs on it for 10 days or two weeks just before they are fully grown out. The clover will then be fully revived before the next lot is ready to be placed on it. Lambs handled this way on natural pasture in successive lots and on irrigated pasture should have salt (half ground) with phenothiazine in proper proportions before them at all times so as to control the parasite hazard. This production should assist in the supply of meat and give more variety to the diet.

(8) Farming Practices. The subcommittee discussed the general farming practices at Folsom and had several specific recommendations to make.

They recommend that steps be taken at once to control erosion on the farm land and on the entire property. The decomposed granite soil washes away easily and wherever it is broken there is considerable erosion. Apparently little or no endeavor has been exercised in controlling erosion, and much of the best soil is washed off. Hay fields are plowed up and down the slope. There is no evidence of terracing, or dams or the planting of grass to control erosion. The subcommittee recommends that contour plowing be practiced, that is, plowing around the hill instead of up and down the slope. Also terraces should be constructed wherever there is serious danger from erosion and in some of the gullies some rock check-dams will assist in holding the soil. In some places the planting of grass would help control erosion. This grass would also provide some forage for sheep and cattle. The possibility of growing kukyu grass in the gullies where there is run-off might be tried.

The subcommittee recommends that more hay land be developed, for the purchase of hay is a very large item of cost. The largest possible amount of permanent pasture should also be developed. The development of some 65 acres of such pasture, as is planned by the institution, should cut down on the 700 tons of hay now purchased annually.

The subcommittee was surprised to find that the silo had not been used to any great extent until recently. They recommend that the fullest use be made of the silo and that plans be developed for growing the necessary ensilage. Oats and vetch should prove a satisfactory crop.

A definite plan for the development of more garden area should be laid out. A considerable amount of inmate labor can be used in developing such an area which will eventually yield large returns in vegetables produced.

(9) Slaughter House. The slaughter house at Folsom, while much less pretentious than at many other institutions, appears to be satisfactory. Some improvements and minor repairs and a full paint job would materially improve it. The minimum amount only should be spent on this slaughter house for it appears that eventually a new slaughter house will be required. This should be delayed until building prices are on a more normal basis. The present slaughter house with the remodeling and cleanup suggested will be satisfactory until that time. When the new kitchen and commissary is built at Folsom, adequate provision should be made for refrigeration, consideration being given then to increase slaughtering, including lambs, production of which was recommended previously.

San Quentin State Prison

There are no budget items or work orders pending for agricultural buildings and improvements at San Quentin which have been held in abeyance awaiting the investigation of the Agriculture and Livestock Problems Interim Committee. However, for reasons before stated, the subcommittee made an inspection of the agricultural operations at this institution.

Recommendations

(1) Farm Operations. The limited area of San Quentin and the lack of water at a reasonable price for irrigation restricts the agricultural operations at this institution to three major activities. These are the hog ranch, the dairy and the poultry plant. Even these operations are restricted and limited, and although surprisingly good results are being secured both in the hog ranch and the dairy, undoubtedly these could be carried on more economically and with better results if there was more space for handling them and sufficient suitable land particularly for the production of green feed.

In this respect the subcommittee recommends that the Agricultural Adviser of the Department of Finance, together with the Business Manager and Head Farmer, consider the possibility of securing a site for a prison farm close enough to San Quentin so that it can be operated by the prison with the fullest use of inmate labor and the minimum of free labor. Such investment should only be recommended if it clearly demonstrates its economic soundness.

(2) Dairy. The subcommittee was particularly impressed with the quality of the dairy and the results being secured. Although confined to a small area and with almost a complete absence of pasture, this dairy is in excellent shape and the herd is entirely free of tuberculosis and Bang's disease and mastitis. The herd is culled carefully with consistent eliminating of cows producing less than 11,000 pounds of milk and 440 pounds of butterfat annually. An excess of milk is produced over requirements and is sufficient to raise the necessary replacement calves.

The plan of sending your Leifers to Soledad to be kept until ready to return back to San Quentin as milk producers follows the recommendations made by the subcommittee in its first partial report for other institutions. This procedure should result in the lower cost of replacing cows, and the plan should be followed by other institutions.

The San Quentin herd is in the Marin County Cow Testing Association. This is a good procedure for its requires careful attention to testing which will result in keeping up a high producing herd.

The hay storage barn proposed to be built out of corrugated iron and to handle from 1,000 to 1,200 tons of hay proposed in the 1947-48 Budget is desirable. It is recommended, however, that the original estimate of $35,000 be reduced to $18,000 for the purchase of material and that the building be erected by the institution personnel and inmate labor.

The present barn should be repaired with a concrete floor and be rat-proof and this building used for grain storage and as a feed mixing plant. The estimated cost is $7,500.

The area in front of the dairy containing approximately 20 acres should be further filled and leveled, and this should be planted to permanent pasture and irrigated from the farm reservoir which is supplied from run-off water. It is estimated that fencing, pipe and a watering system will cost approximately $4,000. It is believed that this price can be reduced somewhat by the use of inmate labor.

The dairy barn and the calf barn should be further improved. The estimated cost is $10,000. These are temporary structures and should be replaced by permanent structures unless it is decided to secure a prison farm where there is more area and the possibility of producing more feed.

Farm fences are apparently in need of repair. Before this is done a study should be conducted to determine the proper placing of the fences, and then necessary material should be purchased and fences put up with inmate labor.

Construction of a hay storage barn, repair to the grain storage barn, and construction of the new dairy barn should not be undertaken if a prison farm is to be secured but should be deferred pending its establishment and the determination of what will remain at the prison site itself. The irrigated pasture should be improved; or, if the dairy is moved, this can be used for vegetables.

The area now used for storing manure and the tideland immediately adjacent thereto can eventually be filled and also be developed into pasture land.

San Quentin is producing a surplus of valuable calves of high production strain and disease free. For the time being this surplus can be used to build up a dairy herd at the new prison at Soledad. Some surplus can be sold to other state institutions. However, many of these institutions likewise have surplus animals. The state hospitals are now permitted to sell their surplus, and the dairy trade seeks an opportunity to secure these valuable animals. The restrictions on the sale of products produced in prisons except for state use prevents the free sale of the surplus from the prison herds and thereby prevents this general assistance to building up the herds commercial dairy productivity and profitableness.

The subcommittee recommends that legislation be enacted removing this restriction. Besides assisting the dairy industry in general, the ability to sell the surplus animals will encourage the prison administrators in the production of high producing herds, and the proceeds from the sale of valuable animals will materially cut production costs.

(3) Hog Ranch. The hog ranch at San Quentin is doing a particularly good job in a very limited area. The annual dress pork requirement is 190,000 pounds. In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, 159,000 pounds was produced at a cost of $.233 per pound. Since that time production has been increased so that for the year 1946-47 production will probably reach 180,000 pounds. The subcommittee recommends that production be increased to meet the full requirements of the institution since this activity appears to be well-managed and is profitable. The capital investment at this institution, particularly for the hog ranch, is relatively small and is approximately in line with what the commercial producer can afford.

This institution has adopted a consistent policy of having brood sows farrow twice when they are then slaughtered. This keeps the average weight of brood sows down to 250 pounds. None are allowed to reach 350 pounds, maximum weight. This procedure results in smaller brood sows with larger litters and a larger number raised per litter. This institution demonstrates the desirability of adequate records and proper care of brood sows at farrowing time. Other institutions might follow with profit the procedure used at San Quentin at the hog ranch.

The subcommittee recommends that there be an expansion of the cement slabs, particularly in the growing pens so as to keep the pigs out of the mud, particularly when feeding. They also recommend a division of the growing pens for the smaller feeders so that they will not be crowded by the larger pigs. They also recommend placing the next largest pigs to those ready to kill closer to the garbage feed pens.

They also recommend that if possible some pasture be provided for the pigs.

(4) Slaughter House. The slaughter house at San Quentin in general appeared to be quite satisfactory. However, it should be plastered on the inside to form a smooth wall in order to meet the requirements of the State Inspector.

The arrangement to conserve the blood from slaughtering for hog feed is not entirely satisfactory since the drain is so low that if slaughtering takes place when the tide is in it is impossible to save it, for it drains into the high water and is washed out with the receding tide. It is suggested that an auxilliary trough running into containers can be made and used on the occasions when slaughtering takes place during the high tide. These containers can be emptied into the feed and this valuable by-product saved.

(5) Poultry Plant. The poultry operation at San Quentin is not completely satisfactory. The cost of the eggs per dozen for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, was $.5388. This is considerably above the cost at Folsom which was $.4243 which we believe can be reduced by enlarging the plant and better management. The subcommittee recommends that the poultry plant be cleaned up and that a study be made in cooperation with the Agricultural Adviser to the Director of Finance, to determine whether or not poultry can be profitably produced at San Quentin. If it is determined it is profitable then the plant should be enlarged to provide for full production for the institution. The subcommittee suggests that comparison might be made with a poultry plant at Stockton to secure information on possible successful operation of the poultry plant.

AGRICULTURAL PLANS

Plans are underway to increase the size of poultry flock to meet annual egg requirements. This increase should also result in lowering costs of production as present number is not sufficient to justify full time employee. Brooder houses will be completed and greater housing capacity will be available during spring of 1947.

The use of about 65 acres for irrigated pasture should result in reducing hay purchases which now is about 700 tons annually. It is also expected that silo at dairy will be used and plans call for filling this season with oat hay and vetch ensilage.

Minor repairs will be undertaken at hog ranch. No major construction is proposed as a new hog ranch will be located elsewhere prior to time the large dam is constructed.

Turkeys raised (number)	-----	-----	In the above we will use 60% less barley and 20% less ground milo if corn is available.	-----	-----
Field crop (acreage)			Fruit for canning or drying (indicate kind and tonnage purchased)	-----	-----
Alfalfa	-----	-----	See all purchases for Fiscal Year 1945-1946 under Section No. 23. Our anticipated purchases will be much the same excepting the substitute of corn and replacement of commercial hog mix. If we had linseed meal, cottonseed meal, coconut meal, barley rolled and ground, beet pulp and salt we would make our own dairy mash.	-----	-----
Grain hay	-----	-----	Vegetables and miscellaneous crops for canning (indicate kind and tonnage purchased)	-----	-----

Note: Mr. F. W. A. Cording of the San Quentin Ranch would like to mix his own Dairy Mash as he used to when the necessary ingredients were available. The following is his formula for the Dairy Mash he would like to have:

Feed Ration for Milking String (1 ton mix):

	Lbs.		Lbs.
Rolled barley-----	500	Rice bran-----	200
Beet pulp-----	400	Cottonseed meal-----	100
Coconut meal-----	300	Linseed meal-----	100
Ground oats-----	200	Salt-----	20
Wheat bran-----	200
			2,020

The above ratio could be substituted for an approximate 600,000 pounds of Dairy Mash required during a fiscal year.

He would also like to make his own calf mix as follows:

Feed Mix for Calves

	Lbs.		Lbs.
Beet pulp-----	300	Linseed meal-----	100
Ground oats-----	400	(ManAmar)-----	100
Corn meal-----	200	Salt-----	13
Wheat bran-----	200
			1,313

We would use about 6,000 pounds of Calf Meal in a year.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered :

By Senator Dillinger :

Senate Resolution No. 39

Respecting the Discovery of Gold at Coloma

WHEREAS, January 24, 1947, is the official Ninety-ninth Anniversary of the Discovery of Gold at Coloma by James Wilson Marshall ; and

WHEREAS, As a result of that discovery, many of the Nation's finest came to California, and upon their arrival, made the further discovery that California held not only gold, but a wealth of other resources as well ; and

WHEREAS, During the period of nearly 100 years that has elapsed since this great State has reached a high place within the aggregation of our several states ; and

WHEREAS, We have become more and more engrossed in our daily round of duty as the days go by, it becomes more and more fitting that we should pause on this day to reflect upon the achievements and the high ideals of those pioneers who carved from the vastness of our forests and plains this great State that we love, and to draw from their precept and example renewed inspiration to sustain and guide us as we face the problems before us now. Not all the pioneering has been done. We face today some of the greatest problems that have ever faced any people, so let us now, in the light of those high ideals, consecrate ourselves this day to the tasks that lie before us, that we may prove worthy of our heritage and wisely administer our trust.

It is not alone for the accidental discovery of gold that we mark this day. Rather it is for the momentous events that flowed therefrom. The voice of the golden siren called to the shores of the broad Pacific the very flower of the Nation's manhood. None but those of the highest courage could dare the great adventure, and none but the fittest could survive its hardships ; and

WHEREAS, Beginning January 24, 1948, we begin a three-year centennial celebration of all the events leading up to and including California's admission into the Union ; therefore, be it

Resolved, That when the Senate does this day adjourn, that we do so in commemoration of the discovery of gold at Coloma, and out of respect to the memory of James Wilson Marshall and those rugged pioneers who have bequeathed to us this priceless heritage.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received, read, and, on motion of Senator Hatfield, ordered printed in the Journal:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20, 1947

J. A. Beek, Secretary

The California State Senate

State Capitol, Sacramento, California

MY DEAR MR. BEEK:

Please inform the Members of the California State Senate that today I have contacted the Department of Agriculture in regard to your wire on the livestock disease in Mexico. I was informed that the Department of Agriculture is keenly alert to the potential danger of the disease spreading to this Country.

The department informs me the disease appears, at the present time, to be centered around Mexico City, and as yet has not reached border areas. However, the border has been closed to all Mexican livestock, and even to the extent of very rigid inspection of any hides crossing over.

At the present time the department has four field experts in the disease area, and they are expected to report their findings and suggestions to the department during the coming week. The department is reluctant, naturally, to appear before Congress and ask for congressional action until Mexico officially has asked for United States help. There is nothing our government can do until this request for aid comes officially from Mexico. Then, the department informs me, immediate action will be taken for congressional aid in the appropriating of money necessary to fight the disease in Mexico.

I believe the department has many of its plans all set to participate in the disease battle, and to ask Congress for the necessary funds just the minute Mexico officially asks our aid. I know that there is very sympathetic feeling among the Members of Congress toward our helping to battle the disease before it reached the border, and I believe the Congress will respond to any official appeal from Mexico.

This is the picture to date. When there is a change I shall inform you, but meanwhile, if I can be of service please do not hesitate to call upon me.

My kind personal regards to the Members of the Senate, and to you.

Sincerely,

ERNEST K. BRAMBLETT, M. C.

MOTION TO PRINT PARTIAL REPORT

Senator Brown moved that the Partial Report of the Senate Committee on Local Government Agencies be printed in the Journal and 200 additional copies of the report be printed in 10-point type.

Motion carried.

PARTIAL REPORT OF THE SENATE COMMITTEE ON LOCAL GOVERNMENTAL AGENCIES

This committee, created by Senate Resolution No. 129, adopted June 16, 1945, is charged with the duty of studying the status of cities, counties, and public districts as owners and operators of facilities used in the service of their inhabitants and the relationships resulting therefrom between such agencies and other public agencies and individuals.

In the course of this study the committee had occasion to conduct a hearing at Hemet, Riverside County, on December 27, 1945, at which evidence was taken and information received relating to the construction and operation by the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California of a tunnel through the base of San Jacinto Mountain and the effect thereof on the water supply of the lands within the mountain area and the lands in the San Jacinto-Hemet Valley lying westerly of the mountain.

This hearing was requested by the residents of the area affected through the governing body of the Riverside County Flood Control and Water Conservation District (3)*. Senator Dilworth of Riverside County participated as an ex-officio member of the committee (2). Assemblyman Boyd of Riverside County was unable to attend because of illness (3).

The Metropolitan Water District of Southern California was formed for the purpose of importing water from the Colorado River to the district, which includes the City of Los Angeles and 13 other communities in the general vicinity thereof (8). To accomplish this purpose the district has constructed the Colorado River Aqueduct from the Colorado River across the State to the district (4).

The San Jacinto tunnel is a part of this aqueduct. The tunnel enters the San Jacinto Mountain at a point known as East Portal, and runs 13 miles through the base of the mountain to a point known as West Portal at an elevation approximately the same as the level of the San Jacinto-Hemet Valley (29-30). The diameter of the tunnel is approximately 16 feet (5, 22).

The San Jacinto-Hemet Valley lies westerly from the San Jacinto Mountains. The aqueduct after leaving West Portal bisects the valley from east to west and leads to Lake Matthews to the west of the valley (29). The valley comprises the watershed of the San Jacinto River and its area is 771.7 square miles (30).

The valley is predominantly agricultural in nature (4). In 1944 there were approximately 23,634 acres under cultivation (33) with an annual production in that year of a little more than $8,000,000 (33-34). The cultivated lands are irrigated principally by pumping from wells (34).

In constructing the San Jacinto Tunnel great quantities of water were encountered (5, 54). The interior of the mountain is criss-crossed by faults (53), and the San Jacinto earthquake fault, a branch of the San Andreas fault, bounds the south side of the San Jacinto Mountains (52).

Construction of the tunnel commenced in 1933 (4) and it was completed in 1939 (8). The greatest inflow into the tunnel occurred during the construction period (42), and during the period from 1933 to 1939, 155,000 acre-feet were drained into the tunnel from the interior of the mountain (60), the peak flow being as high as 4,000 to 4,500 miner's inches or 80 to 90 second feet.

The lining of the tunnel was completed in 1939 and the flow of water decreased for a time to one and one-half second feet or 75 miner's inches (this being in terms of the miner's inch used in Southern California). During the period from 1939 to 1944, the flow into the tunnel from the mountains increased to nine and four-tenths second feet (9) and appears to have become fairly stabilized.

A series of 22 measurements from March 1943 to June 1944 showed that when no water was entering East Portal the flow at West Portal was a minimum of 8.61 second feet, a maximum of 9.42 second feet, with an average of 8.99 second feet (148), or approximately 450 miner's inches.

The accumulated flow since the lining of the tunnel in 1939 to the end of 1945 was approximately 35,000 acre feet (61). The water which has come into the tunnel since it was lined came in through cracks in the lining, particularly in the invert or roof of the tunnel (22, 71).

The effect of the construction of the tunnel and the draining of the water from the interior of the mountain upon the lands lying within the mountain area was immediate and direct. Springs 11 miles away were affected and one spring seven miles from the tunnel dried up (59). As to these lands the Metropolitan Water District has recognized liability and settled with the land owners (10, 59).

The effect of the tunnel on the water level underlying the San Jacinto-Hemet Valley is a controversial matter. That the ground water level in the valley has been lowering over a period of years was established by the following evidence:

Mr. George E. Gertz of Riverside, commercial engineer for the California Electric Power Company, testified that his company had kept records of test wells since 1933. These records indicate that there has been general lowering of the water level since 1933, and that the decline in various parts of the valley ranged from 22 to 46 feet (86).

Mr. Normal E. Walker of Nuevo, a farmer for 31 years, testified that in one of his wells he was pumping from 156 feet in 1945 and getting 34.5 inches of water, whereas in 1938 he was pumping from 122.5 feet and getting 51.8 inches of water (89). As a result of the lack of water he had to put more land in grain and less in irrigated crops because he did not have the water to go around as he used to have (90).

Mr. Irwin E. Farrar of Hemet, a farmer for 29 years, testified that in the past six or seven years the water table under his property had declined at the rate of a foot or a foot and a half per year (37).

Mr. James H. Howard, General Counsel for the Metropolitan Water District, stated that the district did not admit that the lowering of the water table in the valley was connected with the tunnel, and attributed the lowering to increased irrigation and pumping and the development of the community (10).

Mr. Howard pointed out that there were four cases pending in which land owners in the valley were seeking a court order to require the district to prevent infiltration of the water into the tunnel and that these cases would involve complex questions of geology and hydrology (10, 11). In one of the suits there is an additional prayer for damages (25). These four cases are typical of the conditions existing in the several portions of the valley (15).

Mr. Howard stated that the district does not want any water except Colorado River water and that if it could keep the water out of the tunnel it would do so (11). He stated that the district does not want any Riverside County water (12). He also denied that the district was taking as much water out of Riverside County as would be indicated by statements he had heard that all of the water in Lake Matthews originates in Riverside County (19, 20).

Figures were presented showing that in 1945, 92 percent of the water entering Lake Matthews was Colorado River water, that the water which seeps into the San Jacinto tunnel west of the divide amounted to 4,556 acre-feet, of which 1,202 acre-feet was released to Camp Haan, Riverside County, and 2,664 acre-feet were released in the vicinity of West Portal of the San Jacinto tunnel (20, 21). Thus, only 690 acre-feet of this seepage water entered Lake Matthews (21) in 1945. Not all of the seepage going into the lake comes from the San Jacinto tunnel as some seepage occurs in Valverde tunnel just before the aqueduct reaches the lake. Seepage at Valverde tunnel amounts to .70 second feet by the most recent measurements (148).

The fact that the district releases some water in the county has not effected a physical solution to the difficulty. At the point where the release is made the underlying strata are impervious and the water will not spread out under the lands in the valley most seriously affected (57, 58).

No physical solution, other than sealing the cracks in the tunnel, was suggested at the hearing (17). On the question of sealing the tunnel tight, some fear was expressed that it would be dangerous in an earthquake area because the pressures built up might dislocate the tunnel (12, 63, 76). However, Mr. Howard mentioned that the district was investigating certain developments in the method of grouting, that is, the pumping of liquid cement into cracks or other fissures, as a possible means of sealing the tunnel (28).

At the hearing, it was also brought out that there was no agency with which the Metropolitan Water District could deal in attempting to work out a solution; and Mr. Howard stated that the district would welcome such an agency and would give it all possible cooperation (15, 16).

Since the time of the hearing, and arising out of it, there have been the following developments.

On April 22, 1946, the San Jacinto River Conservation District was formed. This district includes the area in the valley believed to be affected by the drainage of water into the San Jacinto tunnel. This will supply a public agency, representative of the individuals involved, which may negotiate with the Metropolitan Water District and possibly reach some physical or practical solution to the problem.

In September, 1946, the Metropolitan Water District decided to make another attempt to seal the tunnel. The Hemet News, in its issue of September 6, 1946, announced this decision as a welcome victory of the residents of the valley who had contended that the seepage in the tunnel was depleting the San Jacinto watershed. The San Jacinto Valley Register, in its issue of December 5, 1946, carried an item stating that the district was well under way in this work and that it was hoped that the work could be completed during March, 1947. Similar item appeared in the Perris Progress for the same date and in the Hemet News for December 6, 1946.

The committee believes that its activities in this matter have resulted in considerable advance toward a solution of the particular problem in San Jacinto-Hemet Valley.

As to possible legislation applicable to this particular problem it was suggested at the hearing that the problem involved the determination of underground water rights, which are specifically excluded from the provisions relating to the statutory adjudications of water rights—Sections 2500-2865, inclusive, of the Water Code (49). These adjudications are conducted by the State Department of Public Works acting through the State Engineer, who is the Chief of the Division of Water Resources of the department. The suggestion was advanced that in such a situation as the one before the committee the statutory adjudication procedure would be less cumbersome and expensive to the individual land owners than a series of suits against the district (14).

The committee has no recommendation to make as to whether the provisions as to statutory adjudications should be amended to make them applicable to underground water generally. The avoidance of a multiplicity of suits in this particular instance would, of course, be desirable. But the desirability of so extending the statutory adjudication process over all of the State appears to be a matter beyond the scope of the study of this committee and more properly referable to a committee concerned with the law relating to water rights.

From the standpoint of the committee's investigation of the relationships arising from the operation of the tunnel between the Metropolitan

Water District on the one hand and Riverside County and a portion of its residents on the other, the general situation presented at the hearing was this:

One public agency, the district, has engaged in the legitimate function of supplying water to the inhabitants of the communities comprising the district (26). In the course of this activity and as an incident thereto, the district has appreciably depleted the water supply of a considerable area within the County of Riverside. Certain lands within the county, those within the San Jacinto mountain area, have admittedly lost their water and have been rendered unproductive and of less taxable value. Other lands, those within San Jacinto Valley, may or may not have suffered a detriment, this being a matter now before the courts.

The State of California has an interest in making an adequate water supply available to the inhabitants of the urban areas of the State. It also has an interest in protecting the agricultural economy of the rural areas of the State. Some assurance should be provided that in procuring water for domestic use in the urban areas the supply of water for irrigation purposes upon which the rural economy is based should not be interfered with except to the extent necessary to put the water to its highest use.

The suggestion was made at the hearing that perhaps one method of avoiding the occurrence of such incidents in the future would be to have some state agency supervise the construction of such tunnels in much the same manner as the construction and operation of dams are supervised by the State Engineer (46), to the end that such a tunnel when bored would be bored in such fashion as to leave the watershed as nearly as possible in the same condition as previously existed (43).

A further suggestion was made that when, as in the case of San Jacinto tunnel, water is encountered and unavoidably taken away from the watershed, the law should provide that no rights should be gained to such water, but that the water should be held in trust for those entitled to it under previously existing conditions. The purpose of this would be to protect the rights of the individuals until it could be determined whether a physical solution could be found whereby the water could be returned to the land, or if that proved impossible, damages could be adjusted (18).

It is by no means impossible that a situation such as that resulting from the construction of San Jacinto tunnel will occur again in the course of the development of this State. The population of the coastal area is increasing and the limit of existing water supplies for that area will eventually be reached. When that occurs it will be necessary to construct additional aqueducts into the mountainous areas where the water may be obtained. Provision should be made to assure that the construction and operation of such facilities will interfere as little as possible with the agricultural economy of the areas traversed.

Respectfully submitted.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: There is herewith filed with you a true copy of the report made by the Regents of the University of California and the State Board of Education, jointly, to the Fifty-seventh Session of the Legislature pursuant to Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 12 of the Fifty-sixth Legislature.

REPORT OF THE REGENTS OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA AND THE STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION AND RECOMMENDATIONS MADE PURSUANT TO SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION NO. 12 OF THE FIRST EXTRAORDINARY SESSION OF THE FIFTY-SIXTH LEGISLATURE

To the Honorable, the California State Legislature and the Members thereof:

In conformity with the provisions of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 12 of the First Extraordinary Session of the Fifty-sixth Legislature, the Regents of the University of California and the State Board of Education have made, with the limitations imposed by the time and funds available, the investigation and study of the adequacy of existing facilities at Sacramento Junior College to serve as an institution for higher learning in the Sacramento Valley, with a view toward determining the need for expansion of such institution's educational opportunities and its conversion to a four-year college or a branch of the State University.

The investigation and study was conducted by the Regents of the University of California and the State Board of Education through the Sacramento Junior College Survey Committee appointed by the President of the University and the Superintendent of Public Instruction.

The committee is composed of two representatives of the University of California (Deans Frank N. Freeman and Edwin A. Lee), two representatives of the State Department of Education (Frank B. Lindsay and Alfred E. Lentz), and a fifth member chosen by them (Dr. A. A. Douglass, Superintendent of Modesto City Schools). The committee has held the following meetings:

October 25, Berkeley. Organization and appointment of Dr. A. A. Douglass as chairman; definition of scope of inquiry and related problems

November 8, Fresno. Appointment of Dr. C. S. Marsh as research consultant; formulation of plan for written report

December 6, Sacramento. Initial report by Dr. Marsh, summarizing previous studies of higher education installations in State and data on Sacramento area

December 30, Los Angeles. Continuation of reports by Dr. Marsh on state wide trends in post high school education in California: preparation of statement to Liaison Committee

December 30, Los Angeles. Submission of statement to Liaison Committee and instruction received from that body concerning public hearing in Sacramento

January 8, Sacramento. Public hearing with Senator Desmond and representatives of Sacramento civic groups

The committee and the research consultant have outlined the investigation and examined evidence gathered to date. Major divisions of the study are:

Previous legislative proposals of like or similar nature

Extent, population, and educational resources of the Sacramento area

Previous investigations dealing with the state policy in higher education

California students and their home residences

Population trends and industrial development in California

Future college enrollments

Possible solution of the crowded conditions in the colleges and universities

The Regents of the University of California and the State Board of Education having reviewed the findings of the Sacramento Junior College Survey Committee jointly report to the Fifty-seventh Session of the Legislature the results of their investigation and study and their recommendations, as follows:

1. The predicted increase in college students in California at both the two-year and four-year levels will demand a large increase in buildings, equipment, and personnel. In the case of the university, for which a careful study has been made, the increase beyond the present inflated enrollment is estimated to be over 50 percent by 1960 if present factors remain in operation. It is reasonable to suppose that an equal increase will occur in junior colleges and state colleges.

2. It is evident that facilities for education at the college level must be sharply enlarged within the next 10 years.

3. To care for the anticipated increase, both the University and the State College System must expand either by enlarging the present institutions or by adding new institutions, or both.

4. If the present balance is kept between the enrollment in the university and in the other colleges, the facilities of both must be greatly expanded. If the university should hold back its expansion by increased restriction on enrollment, the other colleges will have to expand still more rapidly than prediction on present circumstances would indicate. In other words, if we assume that the university will continue to emphasize the pre-professional, professional, and graduate education and to serve, both at the undergraduate and graduate levels, students of exceptional academic attainments, it will not be able to absorb an appreciable part of the increase in students attending junior colleges or state colleges.

5. The university will probably have to expand on other campuses besides those at Berkeley and Los Angeles, in order to accommodate its student body, even if the rate of increase is reduced by additional restriction on enrollment, in order that it may continue to perform substantially the functions it is now performing. One method of expanding its present facilities would be to enlarge the campuses at Davis and at Santa Barbara. Another method would be to add new campuses.

6. As the university expands its present campuses or adds new campuses, this expansion is not to be regarded as taking the place of the expansion of State College System, but rather as complementary to it.

7. To provide effectively for the great increase in students attending state colleges, new institutions of the same type should be set up to serve areas and population groups not now within reasonable distance of the present state colleges.

8. To the extent that the study upon which this report is based permits a conclusion, the committee believes that there is a definite need for increased facilities for higher education in the area of which Sacramento is a part, but it is evident before final recommendations can be made as to the nature and scope of the increased facilities needed further study of a year's length must be made in order that a proper balance in public higher education facilities may be assured. The study contemplated must, among other appropriate matters, make such investigation as is necessary to determine the total needs of the State for facilities for higher education and the types of service which should be provided by such facilities to meet the requirements of the people of the State and to determine what type of organization of higher education will best serve the people of the State. To delay decision on the Sacramento issue should insure that Sacramento will be given facilities proportionate to its merits.

9. It is therefore recommended that no new institution of higher education offering instruction beyond the fourteenth grade be established pending the completion of the study hereinbefore recommended.

10. Though studies of higher education in California have been made previously, none has ever been made under the joint sponsorship of the State Board of Education and the Regents of the University of California. These two bodies now join in recommending to the State Legislature that such a joint study be authorized and that adequate financial support be provided by the Legislature for this purpose, to the end that a specific report be completed prior to January 1, 1948.

The following bill is suggested as an appropriate one to be enacted in the present session of the Legislature:

An act making an appropriation for a comprehensive survey of the system of public higher education in California, including the junior colleges, the state colleges and the University of California.

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The State Department of Education of California and the University of California are hereby authorized and directed to make a survey of the organization of public higher education in the State. This survey shall analyze the present and future needs of the State for education above the high school, with particular reference to the needs of each area of the State. It shall take account of the need for different types of higher education and the requirements of different types of students. It shall inquire whether these needs are best met by the present organization of colleges and the university or whether some different type of organization would be better. It shall inquire also into the financial support and shall make recommendation concerning such support. The survey shall be completed in time to make recommendations at the 1948 Session of the Legislature.

SEC. 2. The state board and the regents shall conduct the survey in any appropriate manner and shall employ such director and staff as deemed most suitable to conduct the survey.

SEC. 3. There is hereby appropriated out of any money in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary during the Ninety-ninth Fiscal Year for the prosecution of the survey described in Sections 1 and 2 of this bill.

Respectfully submitted,

For the Regents of the University of California

The following resolution was offered:

By Senators Dillinger, Breed, Brown, Burns, Busch, Carter, Collier, Crittenden, Cunningham, DeLap, Desmond, Deuel, Dilworth, Donnelly, Gordon, Hatfield, Hulse, Jespersen, Judah, Keating, Kraft, Mayo, McBride, McCormack, O'Gara, Parkman, Powers, Quinn, Rich, Salsman, Slater, Sutton, Swing, Tenney, Ward, Watson, Weybret, and Williams:

Senate Resolution No. 40

In a few days—on March 1st—another zealous, efficient and highly esteemed fellow worker, Frank N. Killam, leaves the service of our great State, retiring to a well earned vacation.

In these years of pleasant association—almost a quarter century—there has grown up, along with the trees and plants that he loved and tended so well, a warm personal friendship between him and the membership of this Legislature, with whom he worked. Now, as he terminates that pleasant relationship, it seems to be a fitting time to express our appreciation of his good work and our pleasant association.

He has always taken a keen interest in preserving California's historical background and relics of pioneer days. Only last session he assisted in securing the necessary legislative action and negotiated the purchase of the well known Margaret Kelley Collection of Historical Relics that might otherwise have gone to private collectors and been lost to California. Items of that collection may now be seen in the Capitol Rotunda and at Sutter's Fort, of which he is also custodian, and which is filled with many interesting relics.

He is a veteran of the Spanish-American War and a 33d Degree Mason, a rank achieved by few and attesting to the high regard in which he is held in that fraternity.

Capitol Park is one of the most unique and beautiful in all the world, due, in a very considerable part, to the efforts of Frank Killam. To stand in that beautiful park on a moonlight night on a summer evening and look upon nature's handiwork is an inspiring experience. Such an experience leads one to understand those immortal lines of that great writer

"Lives there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself has said,
This is my own, my native land."

Resolved by the Senate of the State of California, the Assembly concurring. That our congratulations and earnest good wishes go with our friend and co-worker, Frank N. Killam. May his vacation be a long and pleasant one, and may he return to visit us often, and

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be authorized and requested to cause a suitably prepared copy of this resolution to be presented to him.

Resolution read, and, on motion of Senator Dillinger, adopted.

BLOOD BANK SERVICES IN CALIFORNIA A SUGGESTED PROGRAM FOR THEIR DEVELOPMENT

I. Preface

During the great world conflagration, World War II, the application of whole blood in the treatment of wounded combatants and the availability of dried plasma on the battlefields were among the notable contributions of science toward a final victory and the ultimate saving of many lives in civilian and military operations. The majority of California's blood banks originated during this effort to supply adequate amounts of these and other blood derivatives for military and civilian protection. Today blood and plasma banks have been proved essential for efficient, safe, and more economical transfusion services in the practice of medicine. The importance of whole blood over blood plasma is expressed by the demand for five units of blood to every unit of plasma in the hospitals which are now served by blood banks. Blood fractions or the refined products, which are made by separating plasma into its various component parts, hold much promise in the future, but the processing and manufacture of these substances is still in an early stage of development.

II

A. A Summary Concerning the Present Blood Banks in the State

(1) There are 28 blood banks in the State at present. Eleven are located north of a horizontal line through Fresno, and 17 are in the southern part of the State. (See Map I.)

(2) Blood banks are divided into three groups: 5 community type banks; 9 county hospital banks; and 14 hospital or private banks.

(3) Eighty-four hospitals containing 17,559 beds receive blood and plasma from these banks. This represents less than one-half the general hospital beds in the State and therefore less than 50 percent of all general hospital beds are now being served by blood banks.

(4) In response to a questionnaire 64 percent of the hospitals which are without blood bank services were in favor of a state-wide program, 26 percent were undecided, and 10 percent were not in favor of such a program.

(5) In 1945 the above 84 general hospitals used about 61,000 units of whole blood or an average of 3.5 units per general hospital bed per year. They also reported having used approximately 7,500 units of plasma. The total needs of the State are estimated to be approximately 140,000 units of whole blood per year on the basis of four units per bed per year, and approximately 28,000 units of plasma per year.

(6) From a questionnaire to the hospitals which do not share these bank facilities, the average use of blood is less than one unit per bed per year.

(7) Under the spontaneous development of the blood banks in the State the community type of blood bank has been formed in only a few areas. The lack of community blood banks has resulted in an uneven distribution of blood. Northern California with a potential 32 percent of the population now receives 65 percent of the total blood from the banks and Southern California with 48 percent of the population which might be served has only 35 percent of the total bank blood. There are three areas without any available banks. (Map III.)

(8) At present four of the five community banks are located in the San Francisco Bay area. These four banks serve almost all the hospitals in the area, and they furnish almost as much blood as the remaining 24 banks which are currently operating in the State. (See Table I Appendix.)

(9) The standards to which the banks adhere are quite variable. Many practices now carried on are questionable, if not potentially dangerous.

(10) The locations, size, and physical equipment of many banks make expansion of their present facilities an impossibility.

B. Recommendations for the Solution of the Problem:

(1) It is recommended that the State be divided into 14 separate blood bank areas approximately as outlined in Map II.

(2) It is recommended that there be a local community blood bank in each of these 14 areas.

(3) It is recommended that these blood banks be financed and maintained by local funds. The procedure for current financing may vary from bank to bank but experience has shown that the payment of a processing charge by the patient receiving the blood is a feasible method for maintaining the blood bank. Such charges vary from $5 to $10 per unit of blood depending upon the volume of units handled. Another possible procedure is for the community to finance the bank from donated and/or public funds. The administration and the distribution of blood should be a local function under locally employed personnel. Local, civic and public agencies should cooperate in establishing and maintaining each bank.

(4) It is recommended that the State Department of Public Health provide personnel to assist in the establishment of the community blood banks; to integrate the activities of the community blood banks; to serve as consultants and to require the maintenance of high standards in all blood banks in California. In the initial phase of the program such personnel will be one physician, one blood bank technician, and one expert in community organization and public health education.

(5) It is recommended that the State Department of Public Health assist financially to the extent of not more than 50 percent or a maximum limit of $10,000, whichever is less, in the cost of establishing any community blood bank, or in covering the cost of needed expansion of facilities of any existing community bank during any one year.

(6) It is recommended that blood fractions be processed, if possible, by commercial biological laboratories under a contract with the State Department of Public Health, or by the State Department of Public Health, and returned for distribution.

(7) It is recommended that the California Medical Association, the Association of California Hospitals, the Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons, the American Red Cross, and other interested state-wide agencies assist the State Department of Public Health in the furtherance of these plans through their constituent state and local organizations.

(8) It is recommended that an advisory committee be appointed by the State Board of Public Health to advise in the administration of the program. Such an advisory committee should be composed of representatives from blood banks, physicians and hospital organizations, and other groups which may aid in the development, maintenance and coordination of the program.

(9) It is recommended that an appropriation of $75,000 be made to perform the above tasks during the first year.

(10) As the state-wide blood bank program develops, it may be necessary for the Department of Public Health to participate in the financing of the processing costs for plasma and blood fractions. The details of this part of the program remain to be formulated. Present indications are that the Red Cross surplus of these products will be ample for the next 18 months to two years, and consequently no recommendations on this point can be made at this time.

C. Conduct of the Study:

Under the mandate of the resolution, the Division of Laboratories has conducted an inquiry into the distribution of blood banks, the operation of these banks, and the need for whole blood and plasma in the State. A questionnaire was mailed to all the hospitals in the State with requests concerning the use of blood bank facilities, the standards practiced in transfusion services, and the attitude of the hospitals toward a coordinated program in the State.

A direct survey of all known blood banks in the State was made by a physician in the Division of Laboratories.

An advisory committee, which included representatives of the California Medical Association, the California Association of Osteopathic Physicians, the American Red Cross, the Association of California Hospitals, the State Board of Health, and an expert in blood bank techniques, was formed to assist in the evaluation of this report and the proposed program. The State Department of Public Health is duly grateful for the patience, advice, cooperation, and assistance which the above committee rendered toward the proposed solutions for the wider and more plentiful distribution of whole blood and plasma to the people of California.

III. DEFINITION AND VALUE OF BLOOD BANKS

Blood banks are the facilities for the procurement, storage, and distribution of normal whole blood and plasma for the purpose of transfusion. In the field of medicine the use of these products is known as replacement therapy. The indications or requirements for these materials are listed in Table I below:

Table I

Human Whole Blood is used in :

- (1) Hemorrhage and shock
- (2) Blood destruction
- (3) Preparatory to and after operations
- (4) Certain infectious diseases

Human Plasma is used in :

- (1) Traumatic shock
- (2) Burns
- (3) Hypoproteinemia
- (4) Preparatory to blood transfusion

Under certain special conditions in therapeutics the more refined fractions of human blood are preferred to whole blood and plasma. Attention is called to the fact that at present no animal or synthetic products can replace the use of human blood or plasma, although very extensive research in this field was carried on during the war.

All people can be divided into four groups in accordance with the type of blood which they have inherited. Two of these groups are represented in only 14 percent of the population. With few exceptions the transfusions of type-specific blood is important and desirable. Failure to match the donor and recipient not only by type but also to cross-match their two individual bloods may result in a severe reaction to the patient receiving the blood.

In addition every effort should be made to have donors who are free from transmissible disease, for when a person who is already quite ill has a transfusion reaction or another disease added to his condition, the results may well be fatal. In fact, the reaction of an improper blood alone may cause death.

More recently a further division of the population into two groups on the basis of the presence or absence in the blood of the "Rh" factor has required additional laboratory tests to avoid some transfusion reactions.

A blood bank simplifies and decreases many of the risks in these tests. All blood is drawn aseptically from donors who have been carefully screened for evidence of transmissible disease, especially malaria, jaundice, and undulant fever. Their blood is preserved in a special solution under refrigeration until ready for use. Before the blood is released, properly trained technicians have performed many tests on it to obtain the correct type and for the presence of syphilis. Hence, if a patient is suddenly brought into a hospital and an immediate transfusion is required, blood plasma is usually started and the patient is typed for a transfusion. Without having to search for relatives, friends, or volunteer donors, a bottle of blood is ordered by type from the bank. Upon its arrival a short test to cross-match the two bloods is made. In most urban areas whole blood is flowing into the patient's veins in less than an hour after the order. Where no bank is available, in contrast, the long search for a donor of a rare type, the necessity of bleeding the donor in surgery, the disruption of the hospital and laboratory routine while all the preliminary tests are hurriedly run is the difference between the use of a horse and buggy and the modern automobile. And the analogy is more appropriate, if the lack of transportation in some parts of the State is considered, for the very remote regions cannot enjoy this modern service yet. Air transportation, however, may make many of those areas available for such benefits in the future. Until that time arrives the most practical bank in rural areas is the so-called "walking blood bank." Under this plan all adults are typed and educated to the life-saving importance of blood donations. All hospitals in the area have a master list of the potential donors and can call upon one or more as the circumstances require.

Blood banks have many similarities to regular monetary banks, in that depositors are required first before loans can be made from the capital reserves. Similarly the borrowers must repay the bank, if other loans and deposits are to be continued. A variety of personnel and policies are necessary to safeguard the bank. One great difference between the two types of banks remains because the community blood bank is a non-profit institution, although initial funds and service charges are required to begin and maintain the blood bank.

The essential principle in a blood bank is that beneficiaries repay loans through a service charge and with a similar amount of blood from relatives, friends, or other sources of donors. Even though a recipient of blood may refund his debt in the form of blood, there are certain unavoidable losses which prevent an even balance from accruing in the bank's accounts. Therefore some supplemental contributions of blood must be obtained in order to keep the bank solvent. There are in general three ways to meet this need: (1.) Volunteer donors from the community are a part of the bank's program; (2.) Additional replacement donors are requested from each recipient; (3.) The bank must purchase blood from professional donors. Each of these methods have one or more problems connected to it, but the first has less objections than the other two solutions. This preferable method, however, entails the organization of people who are not the immediate beneficiaries of the bank and who must regard their contributions as a form of future insurance.

A second factor in the essential operation of a blood bank is the cost of special equipment and the personnel to operate it. During the war a scarcity of material forced banks to use substitutes or to compromise on standards of safety in order to operate. Today the physical plan can be standardized. There is an initial installation cost at the start and a continuing operating charge. Technical personnel are still insufficient in number, are variable in their proficiency and training, and will require a recruitment program, if the present volume of blood is to be expanded. Recent additions to the regulations of the Biologics Act will require approval and licensure by the Division of Laboratories of the State Department of Public Health of all banks in the future.

Most blood banks began as "centers" for the manufacture of human blood plasma, which is the fluid blood from which the red cells have been removed. The difficulties in producing a sterile product, the extra necessary precautions, and the shortage of trained personnel have all contributed to the low volume of plasma which is now being processed. The distribution by the American Red Cross of dried plasma, which was surplus from the armed forces, to the people through the State and local Health Departments has lightened the demand on the banks for this product.

The estimated supply of this free plasma is expected to meet the needs of the State until 1948. The present production of plasma from blood banks and commercial drug companies is not sufficient to fill the gap when Red Cross plasma is no longer available. Hence the stimulation for an increased processing of plasma will be a necessary part of the program.

Albumin, gamma globulin, fibrin, thrombin, and fibrin foam are among the useful extractions from blood which can be made at present. Two laboratories of State Health Departments (Massachusetts and Michigan) have begun to process these various fractions for distribution to their citizens. Since one of these materials, gamma immune globulin, has both active and potential applications in the field of public health, blood banks should cooperate in a plan to obtain a supply of this valuable agent as a by-product of their activities.

IV. RESULTS OF A SURVEY BY QUESTIONNAIRE AND DIRECT INSPECTION OF BLOOD BANKS IN CALIFORNIA

(A) A questionnaire was mailed to all hospitals in the State. The returns were fairly evenly distributed throughout the State in proportion to the population densities, and over 50 percent of the hospital beds are represented in the replies.

Table II below gives the opinions of 193 hospitals in California on the desirability of a state-wide coordinated program for the procurement and distribution of whole blood and plasma.

(B) In order to further clarify the status of blood banks in California, a detailed report of the information obtained from a recent survey is now appended:

Of the 28 blood banks in the State, 11 are located north of a horizontal line through Fresno, and 17 are south of this area. (Map I.) The 11 northern banks could serve a potential population of 2,800,000 people, which represents approximately 32 percent of the total population (1945 estimate). The 17 southern banks could serve a potential population of 4,250,000 people, or approximately 48 percent of the whole. Hence together the 28 banks might conceivably cover the needs for the whole blood of 80 percent of the population (see Map II), if they were all community blood banks.

Map II

Fourteen Recommended Areas of Service for Community Blood Banks

Stated in different terms the present banks distributed around 61,000 units of whole blood in 1945 (each unit is equal to 500 cc. of blood). This amount will be considerably increased this year on the basis of present information. Eighty-four hospitals received blood from these 28 banks. They contained 17,559 general beds which is somewhat under 50 percent of the total general hospital beds in the State. The average number of units of whole blood per bed per year for these 84 hospitals was 3.5 units on this basis. The 11 northern banks served 9,469 of these beds with 39,987 units of blood, or 4.2 units per bed per year as an average. The 17 southern banks furnished 21,258 units of the total blood to 8,090 beds which is an average of 2.6 units per bed per year.

As far as the blood banks are concerned we might conclude that 65 percent of their blood goes to a potential 32 percent of the population in Northern California, whereas only 35 percent of their blood is available to a potential 48 percent of the population in Southern California.

The spontaneous development of blood banks has resulted in three distinct types, which for convenience are labeled community, county hospital, and hospital-laboratory groups.

The community banks are sponsored or jointly controlled by county medical societies. They have rather uniform service charges for whole blood, and they serve hospitals either within a city or within a geographical area.

The county banks are located in various county hospitals in the State. Blood is supplied free of charge to patients in these hospitals and is loaned to other institutions only in an emergency. The cost of these services is provided for in the budget of the county hospitals. The standards are not as rigid as in the first group.

Hospital-laboratory banks comprise one-half of all the banks in this State. They are private or semiprivate enterprises whose charges and standards are variable. Cooperation with other hospitals is fraught with economic pitfalls for this group, and as a result their services are apt to be confined to the patients in a single institution, where some control over replacements can be exercised.

Certain conclusions in respect to the functions of these three categories of blood banks may be made from the survey data (see Table I, Appendix). The volume of whole blood delivered by community blood banks is equal to or greater than the other two groups. Hence five blood banks in the State are now equivalent to 23 other ones, and with one exception, they are located in a less populous area of the State.

Community blood banks serve twice as many hospitals in their areas than the others, and the ratio is six to one if only those hospitals which are located outside the blood banks are included.

Community blood banks have a uniform replacement requirement of one pint of blood for one pint of blood withdrawn, whereas fifty percent (50%) of the others demand a ratio of two replacements for one withdrawal. This latter policy places a heavy obligation upon those patients who are unfortunate enough to require several transfusions.

All blood banks approach a certain standard of operation so that the donor of the blood may be protected, a sterile and adequate product is produced, and the recipient is safeguarded to the extent that modern scientific knowledge will allow. The present status, nevertheless, of the 28 blood banks is a variable picture throughout the State. Tables I to

VIII in the appendix give a detailed summary of the recent survey of these blood banks. A shorter analysis of this data is as follows:

Only five of the blood banks have complete and carefully printed standards by which donors are screened. As a result of this policy in some blood banks age limits are not strictly enforced; donors who have had malaria in the past are accepted; people with high blood pressure are bled without any knowledge of the condition; anemic persons can donate because of the failure in one-third of the banks to make a hemoglobin determination; and inability to know the correct temperature of the donor in over 80 percent of the banks may permit people with acute infections to be bled.

Without being too critical of the various types of equipment, bottles, and solutions that are now in use, the admission of such heterogeneous groups into a state-wide system of integrated banks would be difficult. Not all of the equipment allows for a closed system in processing the blood and thereby increases the risk of bacterial contamination.

The number of days that blood may be stored is a function of the solution with which it is mixed, the storage temperature, and the demand for its use. A third of the banks did not know the temperature of their ice box for lack of a thermometer. Less than a fourth of the banks possessed alarm systems to warn them, if freezing temperatures were obtained. Blood which has frozen and then thawed is a dangerous product. The presence of materials other than blood in the refrigerator is not in accordance with accepted principles.

The laboratory tests by which a donor's blood is grouped are very important procedures. A considerable number of hematologists agree that the test tube method and centrifuge technique is preferable. There is room for closer agreement among laboratories on these techniques. More recently the knowledge concerning the "Rh" groupings in the population has made transfusion a safer operation, particularly in women who have borne children. Twenty-four of the banks are equipped to perform these tests, but only 19 banks perform them routinely. Moreover, it is known that many hospitals which borrow blood from these banks are not prepared to do this test on the recipients. The difficulty in procuring potent sera and the lack of uniform agreement as to the most satisfactory methods for such typing have acted as deterrents to the universal adoption of the test.

At present not all the banks are observing the standards which the regulations of the Biologic Act require to rule out syphilis.

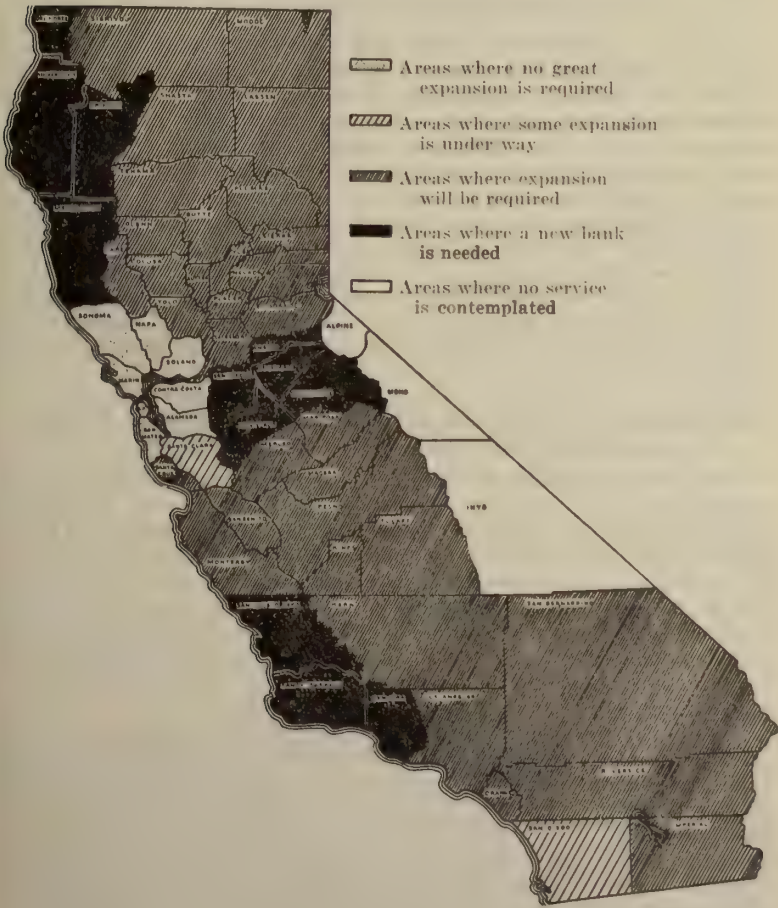

The cross-matching of a blood which is to be used in a transfusion requires careful techniques and judgment. The element of time during which the bloods must remain mixed differs in various tests, but some banks are not conforming to the accepted standards for each of these several methods.

The practice of filtering blood in the open air through layers of fine gauze before a transfusion is questionable in view of the available apparatus which allows for a closed system.

Less than one-half of the banks are now processing plasma, and the four community banks together produce as much as seven other banks. Since commercial manufacturers are required to meet rigid standards, it is only fair that the blood banks should adhere to the same rules and regulations which are set up for the protection of the public. Because of the machinery necessary to make dried plasma only two banks are equipped to do this job. Preference for the liquid form of plasma is increasing, however, because it can be used immediately.

At present a centralized plant with specialized machinery is required to make the blood fractions, and an individual bank would afford to do this type of work.

V. PROGRAM FOR BLOOD BANKS AND PLASMA IN OTHER STATES

There are nine states which have definitive plasma and/or whole blood programs, and 11 others are in various stages of discussion on the subject (see Table IX Appendix). Five of this first group, New York, Massachusetts, Michigan, Iowa, and North Dakota have developed rather well-known operations. With the exception of Iowa, they have begun with the procurement and processing of plasma and/or fractions and expect to add whole blood as a final item of service. In Iowa there are regional blood banks under the control of the University Hospital, East Massachusetts and Michigan have incorporated the Red Cross in their donor procurement plans, but the control lies in the Division of Laboratories. New York and Michigan both have programs based essentially on their rural areas, where the donor response is known to exceed that in the cities. No states have a complete blood bank program in operation as yet.

VI. PROPOSED PLANS FOR A COORDINATED STATE-WIDE PROGRAM OF BLOOD AND PLASMA BANKS IN CALIFORNIA

Map III and Table X (appendix) show the percentage of general hospital beds in the various counties of the State that are now served by blood banks. And Map IV summarizes the 14 proposed areas of the State where donor banks or new facilities are needed. A close analysis of the situation would show that many general problems must be solved before such a proposed coverage could exist. The chief hurdles are involved in the expansion of some of our present banks, reconstruction and financing of others for a community type of bank, integration of the various communities and hospitals within an area, and the revision of standards and techniques in many of the banks.

Although each area will require individual planning to have a truly community bank, certain basic factors should be common to all. The licensing and the enforcement of the regulations for blood banks will be conducive to a uniform standard of operation. Furthermore, the State Department of Public Health will furnish for a limited period from the Division of Laboratories a technician of special qualifications to aid in the establishment of careful methods of operation in any area that requests such help. Adequate initial financing and continued support either through service charges or local subsidies is essential. This monetary fund should be raised within the local area, if possible, but where some difficulty arises the Department of Public Health should be able to render aid in the form of equipment and material up to one-half of the necessary cost or not to exceed a maximum of $10,000 per bank in any one year.

Proper direction of the blood bank by local medical organizations is preferable, although in determining policies other than those of a technical nature, representation from civic and private agencies should be a factor. The State Department of Public Health will encourage and act as advisor in the organization and establishment of these various community blood banks.

The location of the blood bank outside and separate from any one hospital in the area allows a wider distribution of blood. Table XI. (appendix), shows the potential limit in each area. If the standards of the bank are high and the representation is broad, a true community enterprise can be built. Since the hospitals are the main customers of a bank, their cooperation and representation in procurement policies of the blood bank is an important objective. The State Department of Public Health will aid in the coordination between these various groups and assist in determining their needs for blood.

Earlier in the report mention was made of the procurement of blood for the bank. Most experts agree that those patients who require blood from the bank should repay with blood from friends, relatives, or professional donors, if it is possible. On the other hand there is a need to replace blood which has been loaned to indigent, friendless patients, and blood that has been made into plasma. Thus some sort of community cooperation is necessary to supplement the usual sources. The Department of Public Health proposes to loan a specialist in health education to assist the various areas in this very important field of organization. The California Medical Association is appointing a committee from its members who live in the various areas and are interested in this field to act as guides in the local program. They will also assist with any public relations work or necessary publicity in connection with the local bank. Encouragement in the proper use of the blood bank and its products by the local physicians and hospitals will be a further objective.

The moderate size bank which furnishes 300 to 500 units per month will require a personnel of approximately eight persons in the following categories:

- 1 Part-time physician
- 1 Supervising technician
- 1 Medical technician
- 2 Nurses

- 1 Senior stenographer
- 1 Intermediate stenographer and clerk
- 1 Laboratory helper

Approximately $8,000 for fixed equipment will be needed. Rent and expendable materials will amount to another $8,000. Salaries approach $20,000 so that the total costs will be around $36,000 for the first year. At the maximum production the cost of 6,000 units of blood will require $6 per bottle as the service charge. To start the bank between $15,000 to $20,000 will have to be raised locally for fixed equipment, salaries, and rent. Until a complete program is under way the initial service charge should be slightly higher than the figure presented.

The present banks will probably continue to serve their respective hospitals, if they conform to licensing standards. In some cases efforts to convert the present blood bank to a community one should be made. Rarely will two or three blood banks combine to serve as the new nucleus. Since some of the present equipment in banks is obsolete, care must be exercised in any reconversion project about the use of these materials. In order to provide whole blood whenever needed throughout the State will cost approximately $800,000. An additional $200,000 will be needed to provide plasma. These figures are on a basis of free donation of blood, and therefore represent only the bleeding, processing, and handling costs of the blood banks. Approximately $400,000 is now being expended for providing less than one-half the blood which is needed for a state-wide coverage.

The distribution of blood in the proposed areas will be a difficult problem, but the use of common carriers, voluntary organizations, such as the American Red Cross, and perhaps the California Highway Patrol in emergencies, should allow a satisfactory system to be evolved.

Closely related to the procurement and distribution of blood is the problem of human plasma. Blood banks will be encouraged to manufacture their own from out-dated blood, but centralization of the processing is cheaper, safer, and results in a more uniform product. Thus some special arrangements for the sterility tests and hemoglobin determinations to be performed by a larger bank, the laboratories of the Department of Public Health, or by contact with a commercial manufacturer are probably more efficient. Special drives in the areas to collect blood for processing into the blood fractions and some plasma are preferable in view of the cheaper rates for preparing large lots of these materials. All products would be returned to the individual areas at cost, and the State Department of Public Health would only act as the facilitator of the operation by signing contracts with the commercial manufacturers. In times of disaster the State Department of Public Health might be empowered to move these products with the consent of the bank. In order that this program may be begun, it is recommended that the following personnel be added to the staff of the department:

1 Medical officer
1 Supervising blood bank technician

1 Consultant in community organization and health education
1 Intermediate stenographer and clerk

The salaries of this personnel together with a possible reserve fund for subsidies to some banks which have difficulties in reconversion to a community bank or to communities unable to raise sufficient funds for a new bank, the sum of $75,000 will be required for the first year.

For the over all integration and smooth operation of this program the appointment of a permanent Advisory Committee on Blood Banks by the State Board of Health is proposed. The members of the committee will be chosen from representatives of the blood banks, the California Medical Association, Association of California Hospitals, California Osteopathic Physician Association; and any other groups which may be necessary. Authorization for funds to pay the travel and necessary expenses of these members to meetings will be requested in any proposed legislation. The members are to be appointed for varying terms of office and are to elect a chairman each year. Meetings are to be held at least twice each year and whenever other sessions are required.

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received, read, and, on motion of Senator Rich, ordered printed in the Journal:

LEGISLATIVE BUDGET COMMITTEE, CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

CAPITOL, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 27, 1947

Honorable Goodwin J. Knight, President and Members of the State Senate

Senate Chamber, State Capitol, Sacramento, California

GENTLEMEN: The Joint Legislative Budget Committee wishes to call to the attention of the Senate a matter which it encountered and made inquiry into in the course of its investigation of the financial matters of the State. The committee did not feel this matter was a part of its regular purview and believed it should be referred to the regular standing committee of this session on Social Welfare.

In the course of its regular studies and investigation, the Legislative Budget Committee, through its Legislative Auditor, reviewed amongst other departments the operation of the Department of Employment. The purposes of this study were to ascertain if the funds spent by this department were yielding the largest possible return or if any economies could be introduced in the interest of the State. In the course of this investigation other abuses were encountered in the administration of the Employment Stabilization Act, and many complaints on the same were received from the general public. The Budget Committee, finding that there was no interim committee to look further into this matter, concluded to make a partial investigation wherein it involved the expenditure of state funds. In connection with the abuses that were encountered, the committee concluded that the Legislative Auditor should make a review of them and that the Budget Committee call this to the attention of the Senate and suggest the matter be referred to the regular Committee on Social Welfare handling this subject.

The files of the Budget Committee contain a great deal of information on the administration of the Department of Employment, the abuses that were encountered, and many complaints from employers and taxpayers, together with specific recommendations for remedy. These files will be made available for the regular committee if it desires them.

In addition to this, we have had the Legislative Auditor summarize the general situation and the complained of abuses.

First of all, let me say that we found practically every employer and everyone who has had experience with the Stabilization Act now believe in the general principle of the act, but they believe it should be for the stabilization of employment and that it should be so administered. They in general now claim the administration is such that almost anyone can get on the unemployment relief roll, and instead of stabilizing employment it is frequently used to create unemployment. This they point out must be true, for a very large number of persons are drawing unemployment benefits. At the same time there is a pronounced shortage in labor for every skilled profession and for a great many unskilled workers at the highest wages ever paid in the history of the United States.

Secondly, the legislative action suggested by the various persons cover the following:

(1) An act to tighten up the administration in general so that chiselers will be eliminated.

(2) A definition of what is suitable employment so that if there are jobs available which the applicant can satisfactorily fill that are not dangerous to health, he should be required to accept the same or not be entitled to unemployment insurance benefits.

(3) A provision actually making some penalty other than just a waiting period when a person violates the provisions of the act in an endeavor to secure unemployment benefits.

(4) An act which will prevent seasonal workers from using unemployment benefits merely to increase their income.

(5) An act which would definitely prohibit the payment of unemployment insurance benefits when an employee actually withdraws himself from the labor market.

(6) An act definitely requiring the Department of Employment to collect refunds where overpayments have been made and holding the commission responsible for such overpayments and requiring it to make specific determination as to whether undue hardship would be caused by requiring a refund.

(7) An act definitely spelling out when an employee definitely becomes ineligible for benefits.

(8) An act requiring that the applicant shall actively seek employment and it will not suffice merely to register with the State Employment Office.

(9) An act to reduce the amount of the tax levied on employers to just what is necessary to pay benefits and keep the reserve fund actuarially sound. (Mr. Mugford of the Employment Stabilization Commission indicated that this was possible.)

In addition to active legislation, our committee strongly recommends that steps be taken to safeguard the benefit checks which are drawn in advance and which are held in every branch office for the payment of benefits. The present method of handling appears to be hazardous. There is considerable danger of these instruments being lost or stolen. They can readily be made negotiable by entering the date and any name from a long list of claim examiners.

Respectfully yours,

W. P. RICH

Chairman, Joint Legislative Budget Committee

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received, read, and, on motion of Senator McCormack, ordered printed in the Journal:

Every newspaper in California, some 500 daily and weekly publications, currently is publishing a large display advertisement underwritten and presumably paid for by the Western Oil and Gas Association. It is captioned "No Need to Increase Your State Gasoline Tax!"

In the advertisement are figures which seek to prove their further declaration that the "State has enough money to build new roads without increased taxes!" They conclude with the statement, "There is no apparent reason why the state gasoline tax should be doubled or even increased," and seek to show a surplus of $35,000,000.

Their figures are ridiculously misleading and their implications are entirely false, and are based on inflated ideas of revenue.

The fact is, the Construction Fund of the State Highway Department will be under contract by June 30th of this year. All available construction moneys will be under contract by that date. This I have told you before and I stand by that statement.

I repeat, statements such as this advertisement are designed to mislead the public into believing it is not necessary to have additional funds in order to build much-needed new highways are utterly false.

The figures used in the advertisement are their estimate of revenues for the next four years. The fallacy is their inclusion, apparently, of all revenue now on the books, whether obligated by contract or not, and into this total they have added all moneys for cities, counties and State, and including about $73,000,000 from local property tax sources. Of this latter, certainly, the State has no control. Presumably added also are $50,000,000 from federal sources for the four-year period in question. Actually approved federal aid is $17,140,000 and the State Highway Commission cannot spend money which merely is in anticipation of a continuation of national policy.

In other words, the oil and gas figures include money from every conceivable source. It is impossible to reconcile them with our own, so far as the implications they leave with the general public, and the absolutely incorrect conclusion that any surplus exists beyond that which will be under contract by June 30, 1947.

I previously have stated we need and can use $75,000,000 a year for construction on the State Highway System. This construction feature alone would require an additional two-cent tax on motor fuel.

Recently the California Highway Commission approved its budget for the 1947-48 Fiscal Year. For highway and bridge construction, construction engineering and highway construction with convict labor, we had a total of $22,961,000 to allocate. That left, in already agreed-upon postwar projects, approximately $40,000,000 worth of work that must go over to the fiscal year starting July 1, 1948. This represents already planned and urgent work.

It is ridiculous to suppose that State Highway Commissioners and engineers would not immediately call for bids on this postponed program if funds from any possible sources were available. I am certain the Governor also would demand that this be done.

Let me summarize quickly some of the figures and estimates we previously have prepared. These are based, of course, on anticipated highway use and gasoline revenues but I am sure they are as accurate as it is humanly possible to project them.

Recently we gave you a revised 10-year State Highway System Deficiency Report, 1946 to 1956, which shows in some detail the highways in your own districts which are considered by State Division of Highway engineers to be of top priority in a 10-year construction program.

You have seen this report; you each know the need for every unit is now and not 10 years hence. You probably personally know that in many instances, due to high accident rates or traffic congestions, the conditions covered not only are critical but of a highly urgent nature bordering on extreme emergency need. The total of this 10-year program, detailed county by county and substantiated by engineering data, calls for an expenditure of $1,458,924,130.

What can we anticipate, from present income sources to meet this critical construction need? Just $28,001,000 a year!

This tabulation, recently completed in the department, shows the revenue that will accrue over a 10-year period from present sources (Fiscal Years 1947-48 to 1956-57). It is as follows:

From the present two-cent gasoline tax (excluding the one-cent to counties) but including the one-half cent to the cities over which the State has some jurisdiction, total anticipated revenue for the 10 years of $543,780,000.

From motor vehicle fees, $63,574,000.

From used fuel tax (diesel), $27,704,000.

From caravan fees, $1,363,000.

From federal aid (moneys actually allocated), $17,140,000.

This totals $653,561,000 which represents, I repeat, the revenue that will accrue for state highway purposes from the present sources of income for the 10-year period.

Now, how will this be spent:

About two and three-quarters of a million dollars will go for administration each year, based on actual estimates of $2,724,516 for the 1947-48 fiscal year. This item totals $26,074,516 for the 10 years.

For maintenance and for buildings, plant, equipment, etc., $159,520,000 (about $16,000,000 a year) will be spent.

For the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, $9,500,000.

Engineering and planning runs about two and a half million a year, a total of $24,223,484.

For emergency repairs, contingency reserve, and miscellaneous items $2,500,000 a year, a total of $24,886,000.

From this, so far as state highway construction total is concerned, is deducted the one-half cent to the cities, an estimated $135,945,000.

That leaves $273,412,000, to which is added the return of the loan to the Bay Bridge for approaches, $6,600,000, and there is anticipated for construction for 10 years a total of only $280,012,000, or $28,001,200 a year for highway construction. Based on our estimates, this is the most accurate figure I can give you.

Now, in conclusion, let me remind you that the oil industry, which is opposing proposed increases in gasoline taxes, has itself since August 1, 1946, increased the price to its consumers of one and one-half cents (one cent on that date and a half cent January 20, this year). Not one penny of this money goes to needed highway construction. This cent and a half represents a major part of the amount that is needed to make better and safer highways throughout California; a need none will deny after the years of legislative study backed by public demand for an adequate, safe, modern highway system.

REPORT OF JOINT INTERIM COMMITTEE ON PACIFIC RELATIONS

SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA, January 29, 1947

Honorable Goodwin J. KnightPresident of the Senate of CaliforniaState Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: The Joint Interim Committee on Pacific Relations created by Assembly Concurrent Resolution No. 25, Chapter 131 of the Statutes of the Regular Session of the Fifty-sixth Legislature (1945), submits herewith its first and final report. The membership of the committee consisted of Senators Swing, Shelley, and Biggar; Assemblymen Lyon, Leonard, and Robertson. This joint committee, duly organized during the Fifty-sixth Session of the Legislature, elected the undersigned, Charles W. Lyon, as chairman thereof.

Three meetings were held during the legislative session, and communications were addressed to the following: The Honorable Mayor of the City and County of San Francisco, mayors of the cities located in the San Francisco Bay area, members of boards of supervisors, chambers of commerce, labor organizations, civic clubs, and others then interested in the establishing of a permanent home for the United Nations Conference in that locality. In these communications we offered the cooperation of the committee and its facilities and powers to assist those having charge of the activities.

It was apparently not necessary for your committee to perform any service, and although three meetings were held no expenses were incurred. We, therefore, wish to be discharged, and the appropriation of $10,000 authorized by the above numbered chapter may be returned to the proper fund of the State.

Respectfully submitted.

CHARLES W. LYON, Chairman

President Pro Tempore of the Senate Presiding

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received, read, and, on motion of Senator Cunningham, ordered printed in the Journal:

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, JANUARY 28, 1947

To Honorable Goodwin J. Knight, Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate:

To Honorable Sam L. Collins, Speaker of the Assembly:

Assembly Bill 1400 (Chap. 1527) as passed the Senate and the Assembly in the 1945 Session of the Legislature and signed by Governor Earl Warren contained an appropriation to pay for the California State Bell in the National Carillon at Valley Forge, Pennsylvania.

Acting under approval given by Governor Earl Warren the California-Nevada District delegation of Kiwanis International, en route to its international convention in Atlantic City, on June 9, 1946, stopped at Valley Forge and in formal ceremonies in the Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge, presented and dedicated the California State Bell.

Believing that the Members of the Legislature would be interested in a report on the presentation and dedication of this bell, I am, for that purpose, furnishing you herewith a copy of my report as Past President of the California State Society, Sons of the American Revolution, and as Chairman of the Dedication Committee of the California-Nevada District of Kiwanis International. I especially call your attention to the inspiring dedication address of Benjamin H. Pratt, District Governor of the California-Nevada District of Kiwanis:

"The bells of our valley peal
Forth sweet and clear,
Reminding all people of truths
we hold dear;
'For God, Home and Country' together they ring,
Proclaiming the freedom to which we still cling."

In the presence of over ten thousand American patriots gathered at Valley Forge in commemoration of 150 years of American independence, the Star Spangled Banner National Peace Chime was dedicated July 4, 1926. Thirteen state bells, representing the original colonies, made up this first carillon.

Great as it was, the Star Spangled Banner National Peace Chime was inadequate for Valley Forge, where our Nation began and where the American people must be fully represented. It was intended only as the first step in a great musical tribute to the Nation and to those who at Valley Forge froze, starved, and suffered illness but kept faith and prepared for the victorious battle making possible this Nation. Back of the original chime was the ideal of a great national carillon of 49 bells, one for each state, and a national birthday bell. Forty-three of these bells have now been secured.

The state bells, outside of those for the 13 original colonies, were assigned in the order of the population of the state. To members of our Kiwanis delegation en route to the international convention in June, Governor Earl Warren gave the signal honor of making the formal presentation and dedication of the bell on behalf of California.

On Sunday, June 9, 267 Kiwanians and ladies from the California-Nevada District visited the historic shrine at Valley Forge, site of the winter encampment of General George Washington and his continental army between December 19, 1777, and June 19, 1778.

In the beautiful Washington Memorial Chapel, which President Wilson named the "Shrine of the American People", filled with memorials of our first great leader, special services were held for the Kiwanis delegation, followed by Governor Pratt's dedication of the California bell:

"Through the harmonious and beautiful music of this carillon, we are able to see more clearly back through the intervening ages, to appreciate vividly the suffering, the privations, the frustrations and the mistreatment by government of those few thousand intrepid resourceful continental soldiers, who here in the terrible winter at Valley Forge, either persisted with steadfast purpose or gave up their lives to secure the freedom of men in this Nation and all over the world.

"But we must understand that this spiritual power of Valley Forge comes not primarily from the record of the suffering of those continental soldiers. That tremendous spiritual power comes almost exclusively from the magnificent personality who here held those intrepid, highly individualistic, ill-disciplined continental soldiers true to their high purpose. For Washington was able to lead those soldiers effectively, spiritually, through disappointment, defeat and disaster, till, expanding into our victorious armies, those soldiers and Washington together secured victory in our desperate Revolutionary War.

"And Washington continued to lead his people, the armies and civil population alike, until almost single-handed he had devised, set into operation and firmly established through successful accomplishment, that unique government under which we and generations of our forefathers have enjoyed a greater degree of individual freedom in enterprise and opportunity than has been accorded under government to any other people.

"Then the essential integrity of Washington, the common honesty that determined his actions and his purpose, publicly as well as privately, compelled him to relinquish completely to worthy successors his personal control of that government, at just the proper time to make it forever a government of written instrument and not a government of popular personality. * * *

"So here and now we do formally dedicate this California bell to its high purpose, firm in the belief, confident in the conviction, that true to this bell's example, our State will always work zealously with all her sister states to secure the social advancement and the political freedom of all men. We so dedicate this bell under the spell of Washington pervading this atmosphere of Valley Forge. Yet we are all fully conscious of the wisdom of Lincoln's glorification of Washington more than a century ago: 'This is the one hundred and tenth anniversary of the birthday of Washington. We are met to celebrate this day. Washington is the mightiest name of earth; long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty. On this name no eulogy is expected. It could not be. To add brightness to the sun or glory to the name of Washington is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe pronounce the name and in its naked, deathless splendor leave it shining on.'"

Housed for the past 20 years in a temporary wooden structure behind the chapel, the Washington Memorial National Carillon, the first made in America by American bell-makers, fills the air of Valley Forge with the music of religion and patriotism. Familiar hymns and patriotic airs are played every hour from 10 in the morning until 5 in the evening, and at sunset the National Anthem fills hill and dale with its stirring strains.

October 1, 1941, the foundation of the long proposed bell tower for the carillon was laid, and work will proceed on the tower as soon as building restrictions are lifted. The tower will be dedicated to "Revolutionary patriots who established the American way of life and to the men and women of World Wars I and II who have preserved that precious heritage."

In the tower there will be a memorial roll of honor—a wainscoting of three series of metal plates on which names may be inscribed. The first series will record the Revolutionary patriots; the second series will contain names of men and women of World War I and II whose ancestors were Revolutionary soldiers; and the third series will give names of those serving in the two World Wars whose families came to this Country more recently. * * *

Valley Forge is an immortal symbol of the spirit which won independence for America and to infuse and perpetuate those principles for which the War of Independence was fought, no better example may be offered than the inspiring record of courage written in blood-stained snow amid icy winds on the hills of Valley Forge. That record will not soon lose its inspiration for those of our Kiwanis group assembled at Valley Forge in June.

"The bells of our valley must never be stilled
While the hearts of her children with courage are filled.
Our prayer to high heaven forever shall be,
'Protect, oh Our Father,
this land of the free.'"

On behalf of those who have been interested in this worthy project, I express sincere thanks and appreciation to the California Legislature for its important and essential action which made the dedication of the bell possible.

Yours very truly,

ARTHUR L. SCOTT

Chief Assistant Secretary Cleve V. Taylor at the Desk

STATE RECONSTRUCTION AND REEMPLOYMENT COMMISSION

SACRAMENTO 14, January 30, 1947

Honorable Earl Warren, Governor of California

Honorable Goodwin J. Knight, President of the Senate

Honorable Sam L. Collins, Speaker of the Assembly

This is the third report of the State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission to the Governor and the Legislature.

The accomplishments which the commission is able to document here are due in great measure to the efforts of hundreds of Californians who unstintingly gave their time and wise judgment so that the commission's work might go forward. The commission and its small staff could not have met the responsibilities entrusted to them by the Legislature without the help of the members of the Commission's Citizens' Advisory and Project Committees. These public-spirited men and women received no compensation other than the knowledge that their time, their talents and their efforts have immeasurably aided their fellow citizens.

Respectfully submitted.

REPORT OF THE SENATE INTERIM COMMITTEE ON STATE AND LOCAL TAXATION

Letter of Transmittal

February 4, 1947

President of the Senate

California Legislature

Sacramento, California

DEAR SIR: Pursuant to Senate Resolution 127, read and adopted June 16, 1945, at the Fifty-sixth Regular Session of the Legislature, the Senate Interim Committee on State and Local Taxation herewith submits a partial report. This partial report consists of Part One, Summary of Findings and Recommendations of the Committee. Part Two, State and Local Government Finance in California, is a comprehensive and detailed fact-finding report, and will be submitted at a later date.

The committee's procedure in the conduct of this inquiry and the details of its investigation, both through public hearings and through its technical staff, are related in Chapter One of the report submitted herewith. The form of the complete report is also described in this chapter.

Chapter Two constitutes a general summary of the fiscal problems of county and city governments in California. The remaining chapters, with the exception of Chapter Seven, supply a summary of the factual materials from which the committee derived its findings and which the committee has used to support its conclusions. Chapter Seven contains the recommendations of the committee in regard to the fiscal problems of state and local government in California.

The committee expresses its appreciation to the officials of the State and the many local government units as well as to the representatives of private organizations who assisted it in this inquiry by generously providing information and unselfishly giving their time to confer with the committee and its staff.

Respectfully submitted,

BEN HULSE, Chairman

CLARENCE C. WARD, Vice Chairman of the Committee

CHAPTER 1
Organization of the Committee

A. Legislative Authority

The Senate Committee on State and Local Taxation was established pursuant to the provisions of Senate Resolution 127, read and adopted by the Senate on June 16, 1945.

B. Procedure in the Conduct of the Inquiry

To implement its study of the fiscal problems of units of government in California, the committee appointed a staff consisting of an executive secretary and clerical assistance. This staff was charged with the compilation, organization and analysis of basic financial data for committee purposes. In addition to staff aid, the committee resolved to seek information from the official personnel of the governmental units with which it was concerned and to hear the views of all other parties interested in this problem. To this end, public hearings were held, with a view of offering ample opportunity, both geographically and to business, labor, tax-paying, and governmental interests, to express their views on the fiscal problems of the state and local governments in California. Public hearings were held in the following places and on the dates shown:

- (1) San Francisco.....August 26 and 27, 1946
- (2) Oakland.....August 28, 1946
- (3) Santa Barbara.....August 30 and 31, 1946
- (4) Los Angeles.....September 3 and 4, 1946
- (5) San Diego.....September 6 and 7, 1946
- (6) Fresno.....October 7 and 8, 1946
- (7) Sacramento.....October 10, 11, 12, 14 and 15, 1946

Appearances before the committee included representatives of the State of California and of thirty-three (33) counties, seventy-two (72) cities and one (1) city and county. The delegates from the cities and counties represented a population of 5,259,498 or 76 percent of the total population of the State. Nongovernmental organizations represented were as follows:

Nongovernmental Organizations

Alameda County Taxpayers' Association
 California Association of Ice Industries
 California Farm Bureau Federation
 California State Chamber of Commerce
 California State Federation of Labor
 California State Real Estate Association
 California Taxpayers' Association
 Congress of Industrial Organizations

County Supervisors Association of California
 League of California Cities
 Los Angeles Citizens' Budget Committee
 Pacific States Cold Storage and Warehousemen's Association
 Redwood Empire Association
 State Assessors Association
 The Trucking Industry, Inc.

C. Committee Investigation

The committee determined at the outset that, in view of the circumstances which led to its creation, the first task should be the investigation of the financial problems of county and city governments as distinct from those of the State. The committee does not under-estimate the emerging fiscal requirements of the State Government. However, the present volume of state revenue and the fact that the full impact of a number of financial commitments is deferred for a time, postpone the urgency of the State's fiscal problem. Local governments generally, however, and the counties and cities in particular, face immediate and serious financial problems for which some provision must be made. It was thus considered more important at the outset to examine carefully the fiscal position of these two local government jurisdictions than to deal superficially with the fiscal problems of all.

An analysis of the financial problems of local government in California involves a study of over 4,700 active taxing jurisdictions. The distribution of these local units in 1946 is listed below:

Counties -----	57
Cities -----	287
School districts -----	2,662
Active special districts -----	1,711
Inactive special districts -----	82
Total -----	4,799

It should be noted that 2,662 of these units are school districts which both require and need separate and special analysis. A recommendation with respect to the need for a separate inquiry into the problems of these units, and other special districts, is submitted herewith.

The work of the committee has been facilitated by the cooperation of many county and city officials and various governmental departments of the State of California, including the Office of the State Controller, the State Board of Equalization, the State Department of Finance, and the Office of the Legislative Auditor. The committee also acknowledges the cooperation and assistance of the County Supervisors' Association of California, the League of California Cities, the California State Chamber of Commerce, and the California Taxpayers' Association.

Even with the cooperation of the governmental agencies and organizations mentioned above, the staff of the committee faced serious difficulties in the compilation of data. The principal difficulty in this connection arose from the diversity of accounting and reporting systems which exist among the various county and city governments in the State. These differences raised the question of whether or not to rely upon available secondary data already published. It was also necessary for the committee to determine whether it would depend in all cases upon published records and reports for its most important basic data, or whether it would assume the difficult task of inspecting the original records of local governments in order to secure refinements of data not presently available. The staff of the committee has secured data from original local government records and reports whenever this was practical and feasible. Where other data are used, the committee wishes to indicate its sources without exception. Any omissions are not intended and must be charged as an oversight of the technical staff. It must be pointed out, however, that much of the data which the committee required should, within all reasonable expectations, have been readily available and completely reliable since it is concerned with the receipt and expenditure of public moneys. To whatever extent the committee has added to the basic fund of available information regarding local government finance especially, it is hoped that this, and even more comprehensive data will hereafter be currently maintained. With respect to these matters, the committee makes certain recommendations noted later.

D. Form of the Report

The report of the committee is presented in two parts. Part One, submitted herewith, contains a summary of certain sections of the fact-finding investigation conducted by the committee and its staff, and the committee's recommendations pertaining to certain aspects of government finance in California. The purpose of this summary is to make those findings of the committee which are most relevant to its recommendations conveniently available to all interested parties.

Throughout the summary appropriate references are made to the chapters and section in the second part of the report.¹ Part Two, State and Local Government Finance in California, is a comprehensive fact-finding report containing detailed data and analyses relative to the fiscal operations of the state and local governments. It provides supporting data for the Summary Report of Findings and Recommendations of the Committee. It is hoped that interested parties will study this detailed fact-finding report carefully. It will be most useful as a reference work, supporting the conclusions and recommendations drawn herewith.

It should be noted that this summary report concentrates upon the financial problems of counties and cities to which the committee, as previously stated, directed its primary attention. Part Two contains, in addition to the analysis of these units, a consideration of government finance at the state and district levels. In the case of the State Government, the committee makes certain recommendations concerning the disposition of the large General Fund surplus arising out of retail sales and use tax collections, but no major modifications in the State's revenue structure are proposed. Furthermore, in the light of its findings up to this time, the committee feels competent only to recommend further investigation of the fiscal operations of schools and other districts. An exhaustive study of district taxing jurisdictions would require more time, staff, and funds than are available to the present committee.

CHAPTER 2

The Fiscal Problems of County and City Governments in California

This section of the summary provides an overall view of the financial position of counties and cities and the historical antecedents by which these problems have come to be immediate and urgent. It also purports to distinguish between those fiscal problems which are of long duration and which, in effect, were left unaltered by the consequences of the war and those problems which, while they have long been of considerable importance, were rendered both more immediate and more urgent by the war and the enormous changes in population and levels of economic activity which characterized the war years.

The fiscal problems of the counties and cities, like those of every budgeting unit, derive from the difficulties associated with raising funds in sufficient amounts to support various activities which are demanded and believed to be desirable. In testimony before the committee, one witness put the matter succinctly by stating that the financial problems of local government could be attributed to "Too much expense and not enough money." While this statement of the problem is basically accurate, it represents, of course, an over-simplification of the problems. Many of the necessary expenditures of local government agencies are beyond their control and the sources of revenue which they may legally and in good judgment exploit, are by no means without limit. It is also true that many important sources of local government receipts are insensitive to a variety of factors which increase the burden upon the public purse. For this reason this Summary Report contains in the following sections a treatment of the problems of financing county governments, a discussion of the fiscal problems of city governments, a section on the finances of the City and County of San Francisco, and a descriptive treatment of the effects of property tax exemptions which have their impact at all levels of local government. Materials in the following sections are largely descriptive and, whenever possible, they are arranged in such a way as to provide a chronological summary of the behavior of important financial data. The present section is concerned with the principal factors influencing the complete picture of county and city finance and which must be considered in any legislative solution of their problems.

There has been a secular increase in the financial burdens of county and city government over many years. California has experienced population increases in the last two decades which have literally transformed the character of the State. This population growth and the accompanying industrialization and general development of business activity in the State resulted in large increases in the demands for the services, and hence upon the funds, of local governments. Many of the principal items of expense in the budgets of local governments are extraordinarily sensitive to changes of this character. Every major increase in the population of an area brings with it increased burdens in the provision of protection of persons and property, in the provision of parks, playground and recreational facilities, and in the maintenance, construction and improvement of streets, roads and highways. These items represent increasing burdens over many years and even in the years of the depression of the thirties, the expenses associated with many of these functions continued to increase or fell off very little. With the enormous in-migration of population to California during the war years, this problem became even further accentuated to a degree which is not even now fully evident in current data. Many of the facts at hand tend to support the conclusion that further substantial increases in many costs of local governments will occur in the immediate future, even to restore prewar levels of government service. During the war years when the expanding population brought large increases in the demands upon the services of many departments in local government, there were other services which in the very nature of the case could not be maintained at a level similar to that which had been established in the years prior to the war. Thus highway maintenance was permitted to be deferred in many cases because of labor and material shortages. While such deferments were not undertaken for financial reasons in many cases, they nevertheless lightened the current burden upon the finances of local government. Provision must now be made for a considerable volume of deferred maintenance and local treasuries will no longer show the benefits, which were apparent rather than real, of reduced expenditures on such items. Capital outlays were also deferred during the war years although this was not a situation vastly different from that which had existed during a large part of the thirties. In the face of falling revenues and rising costs during part of the thirties, capital outlays were deferred as a means of balancing budgets and the backlog of needed facilities which thus developed had only been partially reduced prior to the war years. On the expenditure side of the picture it can be said that while there has been a secular increase in the costs of local government, a phenomenon naturally associated with increases in population, the economic growth of the State and the pressure of the citizens for a constant expansion of the services of local government, this long time increase is not over. In fact, present evidence suggests that further increases will be forthcoming if local governments are to succeed in even restoring the prewar level of local government service, and this does not take into account the continued pressure from large parts of the electorate to expand further the services of local government.

The behavior of revenue sources while these movements on the expenditure side have been taking place must also be considered. Both county and city governments have received funds in the form of subventions and grants from higher levels of government for purposes in which there is a state interest. Apart from these funds however, the counties and cities have placed their principal reliance for funds on the general property tax. The behavior of the yield of the general property tax is described in detail in following sections. As these sections indicate, the yield of the property tax depends upon assessed valuations of property and tax rates. The behavior of assessed valuations for counties and cities is highly similar, which is to be expected since at present 114 cities, which include within their corporate limits more than 80 percent of the total property subject to taxation by city governments, have their assessments determined by county assessors under contractual agreements with the counties in which they are situated. In these cases, of course, the assessed valuations of property in the county and the city are highly correlated. The essence of the history of assessed valuations in the State over the period from 1929-30, is that assessments declined greatly during the period of the early thirties and this loss was not recovered until well into the war years despite the addition of state assessed property to the local tax base pursuant to the Riley-Stewart Amendment. This has, of course, been a matter of major concern to the counties which, as a consequence, have met large parts of the increased cost of government by means of heavy increases in the tax rate in recent years. In the case of cities, however, the decline had more serious implications. The majority of cities operate under tax rate limitations for general fund purposes which are established either by charters or by general law. A large number of cities, indeed a majority, were at or within 10 cents of their legal tax rate limitations in 1946-47. In brief this means that, in the absence of increases in assessed value of property subject to taxation by cities, no further additions to revenue can be anticipated from this source. This forced many cities to seek new sources of revenue and 44 cities have already adopted municipal sales taxes, some 65 have installed, and many more have awarded contracts for, installation of parking meters and recourse has been made to business license taxes which apply both to general business and places of amusement.

These new sources of revenue, however, have not solved the problem posed by declining yields of the property tax. They have provided considerable assistance in the emergency situations which led to their adoption, but they have not provided, on the whole, the final answer to adequate provision for deferred capital outlays. The need for these deferred capital outlays by counties and cities in the State is imperative. Many communities require major expenditures for sewage disposal, street and highway construction, expansion of municipal office and agency facilities, purchase of new motorized equipment, the inventory of which is now at very low ebb, and a variety of other capital expenditures which can hardly be provided out of budgets based on a property tax of declining relative importance to total receipts and upon the yield of collateral forms of revenue now adopted. It should be pointed out, moreover, that the counties, which are in a more favorable position than the cities with respect to the property tax since they do not labor under tax rate limitations, are less favorably situated with respect to collateral types of revenue because they lack the legal authority to tap many of the sources of revenue to which the cities in their extremity have turned.

The entire solution of these problems is not to be found by further increasing general property tax rates. The total tax rates of counties, cities, school districts, and other special districts combined, have already reached very high levels. The magnitude of some of these combined property tax rates and the changes which occurred since 1940-41 both in the combined rates and in the total tax rates of the different component units of government are of sufficient importance in the analysis of this problem to warrant further consideration.

Total tax rates of county, city, school and other districts have been collected for 79 cities for the years 1940-41, 1945-46, and 1946-47. Combined tax rates for 1945-46 were lower than the corresponding rates for 1940-41 in 17 of the 79 cities. The major part of these reductions occurred with the tax rates levied for county and school purposes. However, in 1946-47 combined rates were lower than in 1945-46 for only 3 cities, (Brawley, Hanford, and Watsonville), and were the same as 1945-46 in 2 cities, (Santa Cruz and Vallejo). Increases in the other 74 cities are summarized below:

Amount of increase	Number of cities
$2 00 and over -----	2
1 80-$1 99 -----	1
1 60- 1 79 -----	---
1 40- 1 59 -----	3

0 40- 0 59 -----	13
0 20- 0 39 -----	8
Less than 0.20 -----	---
	74

The cities with the largest increases in dollar amounts were Riverside ($2.12); Marysville ($2.005); and Petaluma ($1.83). Higher rates and thus greater increases for county and school tax purposes were responsible for the bulk of these increases. The ranges of these total tax rates for selected years is presented below:

	Range	Median
1940-41	$3.57 (Hanford) to $6.0283 (Redondo Beach) -----	$4.99131
1945-46	$4.0199 (Anaheim) to $6.49 (El Centro) -----	$5.195
1946-47	$4.37 (Hanford) to $7.36 (Petaluma) -----	$5.83

In five cities in 1946-47 the combined tax rates were in excess of $7 per $100 of assessed valuation. These cities are El Centro, Marysville, Oroville, Petaluma, and Santa Monica. In 29 cities combined rates were between $6 and $7 per $100 of assessed valuation; in 35 cities combined rates were between $5 and $6; and in 10 cities they were between $4 and $5 per $100 of assessed valuation.

Higher tax rates for county and school purposes have been responsible for the major share of the increases in the 1946-47 combined tax rates. This is shown quite clearly in the following summary:

Amount of increase 1945-46 to 1946-47	Number of county rates	Number of city rates	Number of school rates	Number of special district rates
$1 00 and over -----	3	--	1	--

0 80- 0 89 -----	3	--	1	--

No rate applicable -----	--	--	--	10
	79	79	79	79

In over half of the cities the rates for city and special district purposes in 1946-47 were below or the same as in 1945-46. Only in two cities were the rates for county purposes in 1946-47 lower than in 1945-46 and in only eight cities was this the case with respect to rates for school purposes. Rate increases for city purposes were generally less than 40 cents per $100 of assessed valuation while rate increases for county purposes were, largely, above this figure. Rate increases for school purposes of 40 cents or more per $100 of assessed valuation were also relatively numerous.

Detailed discussions of subventions and grants from higher levels of government to the counties and cities appear in the sections of this summary dealing separately with these two units of local government. The principal point to be made here is that subventions and grants represent approximately 50 percent of the total receipts of county governments, whereas they represent a much smaller proportion of the total receipts of city governments. This follows in part from the constitutional limitations prohibiting grants of moneys by the State to municipal corporations. Subventions and grants represent both centrally-collected, locally-shared taxes and contributions in support of particular functions administered locally, e.g., categorial aids under the Social Security Act. As a general principle, they are made to levels of government lower than the State only where the State has an interest in the performance of the function supported. There are substantial advantages in this arrangement which should not be forgotten in the present financial stringency. But, particularly in the case of municipalities, it appears wiser to discover methods by which they may secure, from locally collected revenue, funds for the support of all proper municipal services. Subventions and grants from higher levels of government should be the recourse only in those cases where the higher unit of government has a real and abiding interest in the function performed. This point is made because, in view of the present financial position of the State, it might well be suggested that a part of the solution to the problems here set forth, could be provided by subventions from the State for General Fund purposes.

It is true, of course, that recent developments which have so burdened the financial resources of local governments, especially the large in-migration of population during the war years, have required increased expenditures by the State as well. But the sources of revenue upon which the State relies, unlike those upon which local governments depend, are extraordinarily sensitive to a comparatively greater degree, to the same factors which give rise to the need for increased expenditures. Thus, the bank and corporation franchise tax, the personal income tax, and the retail sales and use tax could be expected to react favorably to growth in population and the consequent increase in business activity, increases in money incomes resulting from expanded production, the in-migration of large numbers of people, and the expanding level of prices. As a consequence, even with the reductions in state taxes effective in 1943, a substantial inherited deficit has been retired and the State Government has accumulated a sizeable surplus. This more favorable sensitivity of the sources of state revenue on improving economic conditions means, of course, that in periods of such improvement the State Government is in a position to discharge its obligations readily, whereas the insensitive character of the sources of local revenue funds presents the counties and the cities with serious financial problems in such periods. These problems and the manner in which they have become accentuated during the war years, even though that accentuation is a continuation of a long-time trend, is the real and detailed subject matter of this report and of the following sections of this summary, and of the extensive Fact-Finding Report of the committee.

It is obviously true that the sensitivity of state sources of revenue to changes in economic conditions tempts the counties and cities, in their search for additional funds, to enact tax legislation which exploits the same sources of revenue. Many municipalities have adopted sales taxes and a variety of business taxes and it is probably true that counties would also move in this direction were it not for the legal limitations on their taxing powers. This means that the tendency is toward increased overlapping in taxation by the various levels of government, and to a greater and greater extent local governments will probably consider themselves forced to invade fields of tax revenue heretofore the more or less exclusive preserve of the Federal and State Governments. Unless this tendency is studied with a view of achieving some solution immediately by which local governments may be equipped to finance themselves within the province of their own revenue sources, it is virtually certain to be realized.

The following sections present a summary of the facts concerning the financial situation of the counties and cities of California. On the basis of these materials, and on the basis of a much more comprehensive investigation contained in the Fact-Finding Report, the committee, in the interests of promulgating what are, at least, partial solutions to these problems of the counties and cities, has appended certain recommendations.

CHAPTER 3

Financing County Government

Assuming the existing expenditure pattern of county government, which includes both those functions which counties typically provide to their citizens and those functions which are added to their activities by higher legislative authority, an analysis of the fiscal problems of county government in California must be concerned not only with total receipts, but also with the major component items which make up this total. This summary of county finances is therefore concerned with the pattern of changes in total county receipts, in property tax receipts, and in receipts from nontax sources and from subventions and grants.

Receipts of County Governments

The aggregate total receipts of the 57 counties in California were higher in 1944-45 than at any time in their previous financial history.² The total for this fiscal year reached $222,765,748 and present evidence indicates that when final figures for 1945-1946 and 1946-47 are available, further substantial increase will be shown. Total receipts of counties from 1929-30 through 1944-45 are shown in Table 1. With the decline in economic activity in the early thirties, total receipts fell from $148,588,670 in 1929-30 to $99,697,839 in 1934-35, or by approximately 67 percent. This decrease was due primarily to a shrinkage in the property tax base and to rising delinquency rates which were reflected in reduced receipts from ad valorem taxes. From the low point of 1934-35, total receipts increased each year during the remainder of the thirties, reaching $190,244,881 in the last prewar year of 1940-41. This was an increase of 91 percent above the 1934-35 level. The addition of state-assessed property to the county tax base under the provisions of the Riley-Stewart Amendment and the upward movement of locally-assessed property valuations with improved economic conditions, combined with generally higher tax rates after 1935-36, brought substantially larger receipts from property taxes. During this same period receipts from subventions and grants more than trebled.

The war years show only moderate changes in total county receipts. In 1944-45 the total of $222,765,748 was only 17 percent above that of 1940-41 and increased subventions and grants account for the bulk of this increase. (Chapter 3, Section 1.)

The General Property Tax

The general property tax provided $115,050,768 of receipts in 1929-30 which was higher than its yield in any of the subsequent years. One of the reasons for this maximum yield was the inclusion of amounts collected to match state grants in support of elementary and secondary public schools through 1933-34. The low point in receipts from general property taxes was reached in 1934-35 and thereafter receipts from this source increased as a result of the addition of State assessed property to county assessment rolls in 1935-36, the generally increased assessed valuations of locally assessed property, and higher tax rates. A prewar peak was reached in 1941-42, when total receipts from the general property tax amounted to $99,551,329. In the war years subsequent to 1941-42, the yield shows relatively mild declines to a war-time low of $91,209,110 followed by a recovery to $95,960,968 for the year 1944-45. Present evidence indicates that when complete and final figures for 1945-46 and 1946-47 are available, further increases will prevail.

Since 1929-30, the property tax has become less and less important as a source of county receipts while subventions and grants have steadily ascended to a more important position. As a consequence, general property taxes, which at one time were the principal support of county governments, now occupy a secondary role. Table 2 indicates the declining trend in the proportion of total county receipts provided by general property taxes. Property taxes provided over 75 percent of total county receipts for 52 counties in 1930-31. This percentage steadily declined for the majority of the counties until by 1944-45, they provided only between 25 and 49 percent of total receipts for the majority of the counties.

While the table above demonstrates the declining percentages of total receipts comprised by county property taxes between 1930-31 and 1944-45, the data below indicates the decline of aggregate property tax receipts for all the counties as a percentage of aggregate total county receipts and the increasing percentage of these total receipts which subventions and grants, in the aggregate, have become since 1930-31.

Per capita property tax receipts also declined over the period from 1930-31 to 1944-45. This is obviously due to the great increases in population between these years and to the smaller percentage increases in receipts from property taxes. Table 4 shows that per capita receipts from general property taxes varied between $20 and $39.99 for 45 counties in 1930-31, and by 1944-45, 49 counties revealed per capita receipts from property taxes of less than $30.

These changes in receipts from general property taxes must obviously be explained in terms of the two determinants of its yield, (excluding delinquency), viz., the tax base of net assessed valuations and the tax rate. The following two sections will relate changes in these two variables over this same period to the changes indicated in the foregoing relative to property tax receipts (Chapter III, Section 2).

A. Assessed Valuations

The net assessed valuation of property subject to county taxation is shown in Table 5. These valuations declined from a high of $6,227,631,371 in 1929-30 to a low of $4,548,704,368 in 1933-34, and this decline may be explained by reference to two important factors. In part, the decline is a reflection of the general decline in economic activity during the depression of the early thirties. On the other hand, it also reflects the inflated property values which resulted from the real estate and building boom of the late twenties, much of which was concentrated in the southern part of the State. This inflation of values, which gave rise to the possibility of such a significant subsequent decline is at least suggested by presumptive evidence. In the period 1920-21 to 1930-31, net assessed valuations in eight southern counties rose by 172 percent as compared with an increase of 30 percent in the remainder of the counties of the State. Similarly, with respect to the depression decline, the eight southern counties showed a drop of 33 percent compared with 14 percent in the remainder of the counties of the State. It is, of course, impossible to estimate which of these two major causes—the generally depressed conditions of the thirties or the artificial inflation of property values which took place earlier—was responsible for the bulk of this collapse in total assessed valuations for all the counties of the State, but both sets of circumstances contributed.

In 1934-35, despite the fact that many counties reached a low point in assessed valuations, minor recoveries in the major counties gave rise to a small increase in the total. The figure for assessed valuations in 1934-35 increased to $4,649,274,553, and a more significant increase appears in 1935-36, bringing the total to $5,784,522,742. Undoubtedly some real economic recovery from the low point of the depression contributed to this increase in assessed valuations, but a more important factor was the addition of state assessed property to the county tax base under provisions of the Riley-Stewart Amendment. Also in this same year horizontal percentage increases in assessed valuations were ordered in 31 counties by the State Board of Equalization. Three counties were similarly ordered to decrease assessed valuations, but these three counties were unimportant in terms of the total. Thus, even though the total for 1935-36 included both county assessed and state assessed property, assessed valuations were not as high as they were in 1929-30.

In the years subsequent to 1935-36, total net assessed valuations subject to taxation by counties, including state assessed property, show regular year to year increases reaching a high of $8,240,136,847 in 1946-47. Two aspects of the behavior of assessed valuations during this period should be noted. First, it is apparent that the total of county assessed property valuations, although raised by horizontal valuation increases ordered by the Board of Equalization in 1935-36, 1936-37 and 1937-38, did not reach a figure equivalent to the 1929-30 total until 1944-45, almost at the end of the war period. Secondly, with the inclusion of state assessed property, the total assessed valuations of the counties surpass the 1929-30 total in 1939-40 and continue to climb steadily to the peak figure of 1946-47. While the factors of state assessed property and horizontal valuation increases ordered by the Board of Equalization were contributing to higher total assessed valuations in 1935-36 and after, it should be recalled that the totals would have been still larger if it had not been for the passage of the automobile "in lieu tax" in 1935-36, which deprived the counties of this amount of personal property in their tax base.

The foregoing analysis indicates the changes in the totals of county assessments after 1929-30 and the reasons for these changes. Certain additional characteristics of these changes in assessed valuations should also be considered. The state assessed property valuations added to county rolls in 1935-36 constituted about 14 percent of the aggregate total assessed valuations of the counties in that year. Since that time, they have maintained approximately the same relationship to the aggregate of total assessments, varying between 14.3 percent in 1936-37 and 12.7 percent in 1946-47. Among individual counties, however, state assessed property valuations constitute widely varying proportions of the total of assessed valuations. The following table indicates the number of counties which fall within various classes of these proportions and the range over which the proportions of state assessed property valuations to total assessed valuations, within the counties, vary. These data also indicate that the percentages of state assessed property valuations to total assessments in the individual counties fluctuate very little over these selected years since the numbers of counties in the various class intervals change very little. In this respect the behavior of state assessed property valuations in individual counties seems to be similar to that which has been indicated for the aggregate situation of all counties.

State assessed property valuations in outside areas are greater both in absolute amount, and as a percentage of the total assessed valuations of outside areas than they are for areas within incorporated cities. This has been one of the factors contributing to the decline of the proportion of total assessed valuations inside of incorporated areas from 67 percent in 1930-31 to 60 percent in 1946-47. Over the same period, the percentage of total assessed valuations comprised by property outside of incorporated areas has grown from 33 percent in 1930-31 to 40 percent in 1946-47.

Changes in the assessed valuations of the different component types of property which make up the total tax base, indicate a shift in the relative importance of land, improvements and personal property valuations for tax purposes in the years since 1929-30. Table 7 shows the assessed valuations of land, improvements, and personal property and money from 1929-30 to 1946-47 for county assessed property only. The assessed valuations of land declined from 1929-30 to 1934-35, increased again after 1934-35 to 1937-38 and declined thereafter until 1944-45. Over the years since 1930-31, the assessed valuation of land decreased from 57 percent of total assessed valuations, to 42 percent of total assessed valuations in 1946-47. The total of assessed valuations of land located inside incorporated areas declined from $2,275,260,807 in 1929-30 to $1,581,808,419 in 1946-47, a 30 percent decrease. Assessed valuations of land in outside areas were 15 percent higher in 1946-47 than in 1929-30. From 1944-45 to the present, the aggregate total of the assessed valuation of land has persistently improved and between 1945-46 and 1946-47 shows an increase of 7.5 percent which compares favorably with a 8.5 percent increase in assessed valuations for improvements and an increase of 11.3 percent in personal property.

Improvements, on the other hand, decline from a peak of $1,840,720,712 in 1931-32 to the low point of 1934-35. From this minimum of $1,534,092,369 total assessed valuations of improvements increase steadily to a new high amount of over $3,000,000,000 in 1946-47, with the result that improvement valuations, which constituted 29 percent of the total assessed valuations for all types of property in 1930-31, became 40 percent of this total in 1946-47. Personal property and money valuations also assumed a larger proportion of total assessed valuations over the period, rising from 14 percent in 1930-31 to 18 percent in 1946-47. B. Property Tax Rates

An analysis of county property tax rates and the changes in their magnitude over time, is subject to many qualifications of data and limitations as to any conclusions which may be drawn from their behavior. In any one county, over time, the total county tax rates for different years may include or exclude many different items. Unbudgeted reserves or rates for building by taxation may be included in the total tax rate for one year and not in other years, making it inadvisable to compare total county tax rates with any implication that the changes which occur are the result of changes in the same component rates over the period. It is also inadvisable to compare the component rates for various county funds for any one county over time unless it is fully realized that the rate for a given fund may include different county functions and services from one year to another. For example, the general fund rate for any one county may include only general government functions for several years, and then include highway, welfare and security and other functions in other years.

Not only is it unrealistic and inadvisable to draw inferences from over time without full knowledge of the composition of both total rates changes in county tax rates about the various functions of any one county and rates for various funds, but it is also equally hazardous to make comparisons of changes in total county tax rates over time between different counties, or of changes in what appear to be, at least in name, rates for similar county funds in several counties. Over several years, several different counties may have many different funds included in their total tax rates and include or exclude the tax rates for these different funds in different years. Over a similar period, similar funds comprising the total tax rate in several counties may include many dissimilar items and include these dissimilar items in one year and not in another.

As used herein, the term "tax rate" refers to the basic total tax rate only. This rate is the sum of all of the separate fund rates uniformly applicable throughout the county to all property both inside and outside of incorporated areas. It is distinct from what might be considered as the maximum total tax rate which in addition to the basic rate includes all other rates which are applicable only to all or a part of the county property located outside of incorporated areas. This maximum rate is even more heterogeneous in its component structure. In all cases, tax rates are stated in terms of dollars or fractions of one dollar applied to units of $100 of assessed valuations.

The analysis of changes and trends in county tax rates presented in this report takes full cognizance of these limitations of the data and concentrates on a description of the behavior of the basic total tax rate only. Difficult as this is for the reasons noted above, such description, if interpreted with care, is useful. The description is organized in terms of four time periods: (1) 1930-1935; (2) 1935-1940; (3) 1940-1945; and (4) the first full postwar years, 1945-46.

Table 8 indicates the highest, lowest and median basic total tax rates prevailing among the counties in five selected years.

In the period 1930-31 to 1935-36, basic total tax rates were reduced in 40 counties, while the remaining 17 counties raised their respective rates. The percentage decline in the median tax rate in this period was 19 percent. The pattern of reductions in tax rates for separate funds, evidenced by these decreases in basic total tax rates is of considerable interest. During this period 44 counties lowered their rates for general fund purposes, while 40 counties reduced salary fund tax rates. On the other hand, 31 counties experienced an increase in tax rates for welfare and security purposes. The record indicates, however, that the weight of the changes during the early thirties was in the direction of lowered basic total rate rates for most of the counties.

In the period from 1935-36 forward, and particularly in the years immediately subsequent to 1935-36, further reductions in basic total tax rates might have been expected. The Riley-Stewart Amendment and its effect on the magnitude of assessed valuations, discussed heretofore, might have been expected to provide an opportunity for tax rate reductions.

The experience, however, was to the contrary, and, in the period 1935-36 to 1940-41, basic total tax rates were increased by 50 of the State's 57 counties. Thirty-five counties increased General Fund tax rates, 39 increased salary fund tax rates and 40 increased welfare and security. The median tax rate increased 30 percent during this period.

As a consequence of the war many counties witnessed a large and rapid population growth, shifts in population distribution, and an unparalleled expansion of employment and economic activity between 1940-41 and 1945-46. All of these characteristics would normally point to an unprecedented demand for, and the expansion of, the services provided by county government. Yet, by virtue of the same cause, this was a period in which many of the usual current expenditures of county governments for operation, maintenance, improvements, and capital outlay could not be undertaken because of shortages of both labor and materials. With respect to the basic total tax rate it was a period characterized by reductions in 39 counties. The reduction in the median basic total tax rate amounted to 9 percent. These reductions, resulted primarily from lowered general fund and welfare and security fund rates. As might be anticipated, 50 of the counties found it necessary to raise tax rates for salary funds. Thirty-four counties reduced general fund rates while 51 reduced their welfare and security fund tax rates.

The period from 1945-46 to 1946-47, which was nearly all subsequent to the termination of hostilities, is a period of spectacular change in the behavior of basic total tax rates. The basic total tax rate increased in 54 counties during this period, while the remaining three counties showed decreases of insignificant magnitude, the largest of which was less than 4 percent. Increases, on the other hand, were large both in absolute magnitude and as percentages of 1945-46. The percentage increases in basic total tax rates ranged from 2 percent to 106 percent, and the percentage increase in the median tax rate was 24 percent. Over 40 counties increased their general and salary fund tax rates and more than 30 counties increased welfare and hospital fund rates. The end of the active hostilities brought continuing increases in wages, salaries and prices and these, in turn, brought pressures for higher wages and salaries to county employees and higher costs of material and equipment. Increased need for additions and repairs to county roads, hospitals, and other public facilities and institutions, and the possibility of undertaking the necessary steps to fulfill such needs also became apparent at this time. This, together with what must have been viewed, in the light of increased money incomes of a large segment of the population, as a decreased resistance to increased local tax rates, resulted in sharp upward changes in the basic total tax rate for the counties of California considered in the aggregate. (Chapter III, Section 2).

C. Nontax Receipts

The category of nontax receipts includes licenses and permits, fines and penalties, receipts from privileges and franchises, property sales and rentals, interest, fees and commissions, receipts from special services rendered, and a large number of miscellaneous items too numerous to set forth in separate classifications. The total of nontax receipts has been a relatively unimportant item in the total receipts of county governments. For the counties of California, as an aggregate, they represented 10 percent of the total receipts in 1930-31, 7.9 percent of the total in 1935-36, 6.2 percent of the total in the year 1940-41 and in the last year for which the calculation can be made, 1944-45, they represent 8.2 percent of the total receipts of county government. Table 9 indicates the number of counties falling within certain class intervals of the percentages of total county receipts comprised by these nontax receipts. It is clearly apparent that in each of the selected years, the majority of counties received between 3 and 8.9 percent of their total receipts from these fiscal devices. In 1944-45 there is a distinct increase in the number of counties receiving over 9 percent of their total receipts from nontax sources.

The percentage of total receipts comprised by nontax revenues varies, of course, from county to county and from year to year for the same county. In no case, however, do nontax receipts constitute a major proportion of the total. Fees and commissions and receipts from special services comprise the major segment of nontax receipts over most of the years while all of the other items vary around 1 percent of total county receipts. Table 10 indicates the relative importance of both the total of nontax receipts and the various component items to the total of county receipts for various selected years.

As Table I reveals, the total of nontax receipts stood at a prewar high in 1929-30 when the total nontax receipts for California Counties reached $16,651,317. The total then decreased and reached a minimum amount in 1935-36 of $8,430,621, or slightly more than 50 percent of the total for 1929-30. Subsequent to 1935-36, nontax receipts show constant but relatively small additions annually but do not approximate the 1929-30 level until 1943-44. The last year for which data are presented shows a large increase over 1943-44. This change to an all time high in 1944-45 of $18,343,644 represents a 55 percent increase over 1940-41 and a 14 percent increase over the previous year of 1943-44. Improvement in these receipts came mostly from fees and commissions, special services and interest. While the rise in these receipts is large in percentage terms, the total of nontax receipts is such a small fraction of total county receipts that their effect is negligible with respect to changes in the latter (Chapter III, Section 3).

D. Subventions and Grants

Receipts of county governments from subventions and grants includes both receipts from state-collected, locally-shared taxes and from grants for various aids. These receipts increased from $16,886,585 in 1929-30 to an all time high of $108,461,136 in 1944-45, an increase of 542 percent. Clearly the increase in total county receipts is largely attributable to the increase in receipts from subventions and grants. These funds represented 12 percent of total receipts in 1930-31 and by 1944-45 they comprised 49 percent of the total.

The great increases in subventions and grants can only be explained in terms of a variety of factors. The first significant year to year increase is reflected in the change from 1931-32 to 1932-33, and stems from relief grants in this period. The next major increase from $23,843,146 in 1935-36 to $39,424,559 in 1936-37 results principally from the motor vehicle in lieu tax and from receipts of federal grants for various categorical aids under the Social Security Act. The large increase from 1935-36 to 1936-37 is followed by a further large increase to 1937-38 of $57,893,522, which is largely the result of further increases in federal grants for these same categorical aids, especially aid to the aged. No further increases of a similar order of magnitude occur in the figures for subventions and grants until the increase from 1942-43 to 1943-44, when the totals increased from $77,975,785 to $104,678,007. This is largely a result of further increases in state grants in support of the needy aged, resulting from the action of the 1943 Legislature. This action increased the amount of aged aid and reduced the support required from counties, but placed the added cost on the State Treasury.

The total of subventions and grants has thus become a larger and larger segment of the total of county receipts. Table 11, below, indicates the proportions of total county receipts which have been provided by subventions and grants over selected years. These data show a continuous movement of the majority of counties to positions where more and more of their receipts are derived from subventions and grants. In 1930-31, 52 counties received less than 20 percent of their receipts from this source. By 1935-36, a majority of counties were securing between 10 and 30 percent of their total receipts from these aids, and in 1940-41, 48 counties show between 30 and 50 percent of their total receipts from this source. Again in 1945-46, a majority of the counties moved into even higher percentages with between 40 and 60 percent of their total receipts deriving from subventions and grants.

Both the relative importance of the amounts received for different purposes by the counties, and the relative importance of shared revenues as against subventions in the total of subventions and grants changed considerably over this period. Apportionments for highway purposes constituted over 81 percent of the total of receipts from subventions and grants in 1930-31. By 1944-45, receipts for this purpose amounted to only 14 percent of the total. Categorical aids to needy children, blind, and aged which comprised 11 percent of total subventions and grants in 1930-31, had increased to a point where they provided 77 percent of the total in 1944-45. These changes denote a shift from a situation where the great bulk of the funds from this source derived from state aid for highway purposes to the position where federal and state grants in support of categorical aids now provide the major proportion of the total. In 1930-31, approximately 82 percent of the funds received in this category of subventions and grants came from locally-shared revenues, while 18 percent derived from subventions. Shared revenues provided only 19 percent while subventions provided 81 percent of total receipts from subventions and grants in 1944-45 (Chapter III, Section 4).

Summary of Expenditures

The behavior of the expenditures of county governments is viewed only since 1934-35, because prior to that time it is difficult to segregate outlays from the proceeds of bond issues from payments made from current receipts for both operations and current capital outlay. In the absence of a meticulous accounting investigation of the records of each county for each year prior to 1934-35, it is not possible to derive comparable expenditure figures over as long a period as considered in the description of receipts.

Table 12 shows the changes in the aggregate total expenditures of all the counties over the period from 1934-35 to 1944-45. From 1934-35 to 1944-45, aggregate total expenditures of the counties increased by more than 100 percent. The absolute figures for this total increased from $102,530,613 for 1934-35 to $217,881,380 for 1944-45. It should be noted that total payments increased steadily from 1934-35 well into the war period in 1942-43. They fall off in 1942-43, but then increased to new levels in 1943-44 and 1944-45 which were even higher than the previous high total of 1941-42.

Changes in the distribution of total expenditures as between the various functions of county government are set forth in Table 13 below for three selected years.

Percentage Distribution of Total County Expenditures for Governmental Functions and Debt Services

Function	Percentage of total expenditures
	1935-36	1940-41	1944-45

Protection	9.4	6.9	8.3

Debt interest and redemption	4.9	2.3	1.5
Miscellaneous	1.7	2.1	1.5
Total	100.0	100.0	100.0

These percentages indicate that charities and corrections constitute the most important function among these activities of county government. Not only do payments for charities constitute 60 percent and better of total expenditures in 1940-41 and 1944-45, but the percentage increase in amounts spent for this function was over 160 percent between 1935-36 and 1940-41. It should be remembered, regarding this function, that the great increase in the amounts spent for charities and corrections since 1935-36 has not been entirely county-determined. For this category of county functions, the amount has been largely determined by higher legislative authority and referred back to the counties. In this regard it should also be remembered that the great increases in subventions and grants during this period were for this very same function. They do not, therefore, represent large increases in county receipts to finance essentially county-determined services. They simply pay for a function wherein the county is largely only the administrative agency and not the determining agency.

The impact of higher wages, salaries, and prices occasioned by the war on costs of county government are not shown too clearly by these figures for total expenditures through 1944-45. During the war years expenditures for services, outlays, and salaries were largely restricted. The costs of additional personnel, higher wages, greater outlays and deferred general maintenance expenditures will be more significantly reflected in figures for 1945-46 and 1946-47. Examination of the final expenditure data for 46 counties in 1945-46 shows substantial increases in their total expenditures over 1944-45, and the budgeted expenditures for these 46 counties in 1946-47 indicate similar large increases in the total for this very latest years. (Chapter III, Section 5.)

CHAPTER 4

Financing City Government

The present section provides an analysis for the cities which is similar in organization to the preceding section on county governments. Many of the problems of the cities, however, must be differentiated sharply from those of the counties and, as a consequence, the organization of this section cannot be, in all respects, identical with that followed in the section on county government.

Receipts of Municipalities

Historically the property tax has constituted the principal source of revenue for the support of municipal governments, but in recent years, its yield has not kept pace with needs of cities for funds. The combination of a relatively inflexible tax base and the tax rate limits in effect in most cities has seriously restricted the revenue raising possibilities of this tax. Moreover the rising cost of government during the last several years has greatly intensified difficulties which were already apparent and which arise from heavy reliance on the property tax.

Cities have resorted to a variety of sources to meet their needs for more funds. Among the more universally applied fiscal devices are, business licenses based on gross receipts or number of employees or, in the case of places of amusement, on number of admission (amusement taxes); charges for services such as garbage collection and sewage disposal previously financed out of property tax receipts; parking meters; transfers of the earnings of municipally-owned utilities for general city purposes; and, retail sales taxes. With the adoption of these methods of raising funds and with the sharing by cities in the proceeds of certain state collected taxes, the property tax has declined in relative importance, although it is still the largest single source of receipts in most cities.

The aggregate receipts of California's municipalities between 1929-30 to 1944-45 are shown in Table 14. The receipts included are those from (1) general property taxes; (2) other locally-collected receipts, such as licenses, fees, fines, rentals, and similar receipts; and (3) state subventions and grants. Total receipts as used in this report refers to the sum of receipts from these three categories. Receipts from public service enterprises,³ special assessments, bond sales, and trust transactions are excluded from Table 14. It is believed that this procedure gives a more useful picture of municipal finance. The City and County of San Francisco is considered separately in a later section of the report and is therefore excluded from Table 14.

Total Receipts

Total receipts from the three sources included in Table 14 were $95,918,143 in 1929-30. During the early thirties shrinking property valuations and declining levels of economic activity were reflected in reduced municipal receipts. The low point was reached in 1933-34 when receipts totaled $71,355,259 and were thus 26 percent below those of ³ Earnings of public service enterprises transferred for general city purposes cannot be determined with sufficient accuracy to warrant their inclusion in Table 14.

1929-30. Total receipts increased each year following 1933-34, reaching $98,032,446 in the last pre-war year (1940-41). This was approximately 37 percent above the low point of 1933-34 and 2 percent above 1929-30. The principal factors responsible for the increase in total receipts in the latter half of the thirties were (1) the addition of state assessed property to the municipal tax base in 1935-36 under provisions of the Riley-Stewart Amendment; (2) the improvement in economic conditions which was reflected in rising valuations of locally assessed property and in larger receipts from licenses, building and other permits, fees, and various other receipts; and, (3) the sharing by cities in the proceeds of state collected gasoline and motor vehicle taxes and liquor licenses.

Total receipts increased in every year except one after 1940-41 and reached a total of $119,140,711 in 1944-45 which was 22 percent above that of 1940-41. Both property tax and other locally collected receipts increased during the war years. State subventions decreased by over $3,500,000 in 1942-43 and then recovered moderately in the two following years. (Chapter IV, Section 1.)

General Property Taxes

General property tax receipts declined from $74,084,839 in 1929-30 to $55,625,982 in 1933-34, a reduction of 25 percent. Assessed valuations fell sharply during this period and in many cities tax rates were cut at the same time in response to the widespread demand of property owners for tax relief. Rising tax delinquency further reduced property tax collections.

The addition of state assessed property to the municipal tax base in 1935-36 under provisions of the Riley-Stewart Amendment and the upward movement of locally assessed property valuations with improvement in economic conditions were reflected in somewhat higher property tax receipts in the latter half of the thirties. In 1940-41 property tax receipts were $62,996,707, or 13 percent, above the low point of 1933-34. This was more than $11,000,000, or 15 per cent, below the 1929-30 figure.

During the war years assessed valuations generally increased, but as shown later these increases were moderate except in a few centers of war industry. Tax rates were also raised in many cities during these years. As a result, property tax receipts increased by $12,427,925, or 20 percent, between 1940-41 and 1944-45. Receipts from property taxes in 1944-45 were $1,339,793 above those of 1929-30.

Thus the principal source of funds for the support of general municipal government yielded approximately the same amount in 1944-45 as it had 15 years earlier. In the years since 1929-30, however, the population of most cities had increased substantially, particularly during the war period, and a great expansion of municipal services had occurred.

A study of 114 cities shows that only 22 had higher per capita property tax receipts in 1944-45 than in 1930-31. The following tabulation summarizes data for these cities:

The property tax has declined in relative importance as a source of municipal receipts in recent years. In many cities the combination of a relatively inflexible property tax base and tax rate limits has required increase of use of nonproperty tax sources. This together with the sharing by cities in state collected taxes has resulted in a decreasing proportion of total receipts coming from property taxes. This is indicated in the following table.

Table 16 shows that, for the cities as a whole, in the early thirties property taxes supplied about four-fifths of total receipts while less than two-thirds of total receipts came from this source in 1944-45.

The explanation of these changes in the yield of the property tax discussed above is to be found in the behavior of assessed valuation and tax rates. (Chapter IV, Section 2.)

A. Assessed Valuation

The predepression high point in assessed valuation of property subject to taxation by cities was reached in 1929-30, when the total of assessed valuation stood at $4,577,776,215. This figure represents an increase of over 134 percent in the decade of the twenties. While all the cities of the State shared in the increased valuations which occurred during the twenties, the increase was not distributed equally among them. On the contrary, the increase was heavily concentrated in the southern part of the State. Seventy-six percent of the increase from 1920-21 to 1929-30 in total net assessed valuation of property subject to taxation by cities occurred in the cities located in Los Angeles County and 48 percent of the increase occurred in the City of Los Angeles.

The general movement of net assessed valuations of property subject to taxation by cities during the early thirties was downward. They reached their lowest point in 1934-35 when the total stood at $3,368,819,100. A considerable increase in the total occurred in 1935-36 which is almost entirely explained by the addition of state assessed property to the municipal assessment rolls under the provisions of the Riley-Stewart Amendment. The total of assessed valuation of property subject to taxation by cities does not thereafter reach a level equal to, or in excess of, the 1929-30 level until 1944-45 when it stood at $4,732,658,085. This is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that this total includes state assessed property which did not appear as a part of the 1929-30 total. The assessed valuation of locally assessed property subject to taxation by cities did not reach a level equal to, or in excess of, the 1929-30 level until 1946-47. Table 17 presents a complete picture of the changes in aggregate net assessed valuations of the cities over the period from 1929-30 to 1946-47.

While it is true that, except for the recovery of the later war years, the declines in the total of assessed valuation of property subject to taxation by cities were never entirely recovered and the total remains less than that for 1929-30, it is by no means true that the several constituents of this total moved in similar directions. On the contrary, with respect to locally assessed property, it should be noted that the assessed valuation of land declined substantially while the assessed valuation of improvements did not show any such significant decreases during the thirties and reveals very considerable increases in the late thirties. This has had the effect of deposing the assessed valuation of land as the principal segment of the total of locally assessed property. In the twenties land typically was the most important component of the city assessment roll, accounting for one-half or more of the total assessed valuation while the value of improvements represented a little less than a third. This position is almost exactly reversed in later years with the value of improvements accounting for about one-half of the municipal assessment rolls and the value of land accounting for about one-third. While the principal impact of the fall in land values on the total of assessed valuations of property subject to city taxation was, naturally, the result of large decreases in the metropolitan areas, the movement was by no means confined to the large cities. A number of relatively small cities suffered significant declines in the assessed valuation of land during this period. It is generally held that decreases in the assessed valuation of land in cities is a phenomenon associated with the decentralization of business which is more or less typical of these later years. Detailed figures showing the steadily declining importance of land values in the total of assessed valuations are presented in Table 18.

Source: See Table 17.

In the cities in which valuations are determined by city assessors (172 cities in 1946), assessed valuations are generally higher than those placed on the same property by county assessors for county tax purposes. In the cities where assessment is performed by the county assessor for the city under contractual agreement (114 cities in 1946),⁴ the same valuation is used for both city and county tax purposes.

For those cities in which assessment is done by city assessors, it is incumbent upon the State Board of Equalization to ascertain the relationship between the county assessment level within the city and the city assessment level and to maintain the same relationship in its utility assessment levels. If a county assessed the taxable property within a city at one-half the city assessment of the same property, the State Board of Equalization is obliged to certify its assessments of utility properties to the city at twice the valuations certified to the county.

The State Board of Equalization publishes city ratios annually. These are the ratios between the assessed valuation of locally assessable property as equalized for city taxation and the assessed valuation of the same property as equalized for county taxation. A city ratio of 1.00 indicates that the city and county valuations are the same; a city ratio of 2.00 indicates that the city valuation is twice that placed upon the same property by the county assessor for county taxation. The following list summarizes the city ratios for 1946-47:

City ratios	Number of cities	City ratios	Number of cities

Of the 147 cities with a ratio of 1.00, there are 115 for which assessment is done for the city by the county assessor under contractual agreement. Accordingly, the valuations are the same and the ratio is 1.00. In addition, in 32 cities with their own assessors, valuations for city and county tax purposes are the same. In three cities—King City, Grass Valley, and Santa Clara whose city ratios are .95—property valuations for city taxation are lower than valuations placed upon the same property by county assessors for county tax purposes. In the remaining 136 cities, valuations for city taxation are higher than valuations placed upon the same property by county assessors for county tax purposes.

The net assessed valuation of locally assessable property as equalized for city taxation and the net assessed valuation of the same property as equalized for county taxation are shown from 1929-30 through 1946-47 in Table 19.

⁴ Excluding City and County of San Francisco.

In 1929-30 the net assessed valuation of locally assessable property as equalized for city taxation was 9 percent above the net assessed valuation of the same property as equalized for county taxation. In the early years of the thirties county valuation of property inside cities dropped more sharply than did city valuations of the same property, with the result that in 1932-33 city valuation was 16 percent above county valuation of the same property. In 1940-41 city valuation was 9 percent above county valuation of the same property and the 1946-47 excess is also 9 percent. Although only 114 cities have their assessments made under contractual arrangements with the counties, the property so assessed represents more than 80 percent of the total of locally assessed property subject to city taxation. This is, of course, the result of the fact that among the 114 cities which have their assessments determined by the county assessors under contractual agreement are to be found certain of the largest cities in the State, including Los Angeles, San Diego, Oakland, Fresno, Santa Monica, and Glendale. (Chapter IV, Section 2.)

Property Tax Rates in Cities

Property tax rates by funds have been secured from 55 charter cities, the City and County of San Francisco and 88 general law cities for the period 1929-30 through 1946-47. For an additional 41 general law cities, property tax rates by funds have been secured for selected years from 1929-30 to 1946-47. The general law cities have been selected from various size groups and geographic areas of the State.

Examination of city tax rates reveals that there has been no single pattern of behavior which would characterize all cities. This results from the fact that the two determinants of tax rates—the amount of revenue to be raised through ad valorem taxation and the assessed valuation of taxable property—have not followed a common course in all cities.

During the early thirties expenditures for general municipal purposes were reduced in many cities by more than enough to counteract the shrinkage in the valuation of taxable property, with the result that tax rates for general purposes declined. These expenditure reductions were effected in considerable part by curtailing or eliminating budgetary provision for replacement of equipment and for needed improvements and extensions of physical facilities. In other cities, however, the tax base shrank more rapidly than expenditures could be curtailed and tax rates for general purposes consequently moved upward. This was the case in a number of cities in which mandatory provision for libraries, parks, and other services were prescribed by charter. Tax rates for bond interest and redemption likewise followed no common pattern. In many cities reductions in bond service requirements, as outstanding issues were retired, were more than enough to counteract shrinkages in the tax base; in other cities bond service requirements continued to increase during the early thirties, with the result that reductions in tax rates for general purposes were more than offset by higher tax rates for bond interest and redemption. Total tax rates accordingly moved upward in these cities notwithstanding budget reductions for general purposes.

The summary below indicates the extent of changes in total tax rates for all purposes between 1929-30 and 1934-35:

	Number of charter cities	Number of general law cities
1934-35 total property tax rates higher than 1929-30 total property tax rates.....	19	44
1934-35 total property tax rates the same as 1929-30 total property tax rates.....	2	10
1934-35 total property tax rates lower than 1929-30 total property tax rates.....	34	75
	<hr/> 55	<hr/> 129

The addition of state assessed property to the city tax base in 1935-36 was reflected in varying degrees in the tax rates of cities. In 37 of the 55 charter cities, 1935-36 total tax rates were lower than those of 1934-35; in 12 cities the total rates were the same in the two years; and in six cities total tax rates increased notwithstanding the addition of state assessed property to city assessment rolls. In 72 of the 129 general law cities studied, 1935-36 total tax rates were lower than those of 1934-35; in 35 cities total rates were the same in the two years; and in 22 cities total rates increased. Further reductions in total tax rates occurred in a number of cities in the latter half of the thirties. An important factor contributing to this result was the reduction in bond service requirements as outstanding bond issues were retired.

Developments since 1940 have resulted generally in an upward movement in tax rates for general purposes. Many cities experienced substantial population growth during the war years and as a consequence the cost of providing general municipal services would have increased even if no other forces had been at work. But, in addition, wage and price increases have exerted a further upward pressure on municipal costs. Competition from private industry and from the Federal and State Governments has required upward readjustments of municipal salary scales and provision for employee retirement systems in order to hold personnel. The higher cost of municipal government resulting from these factors has been reflected in rising tax rates for general purposes, since typically costs have tended to increase more rapidly than the tax base has expanded. In some cities increases in general purpose tax rates have been offset by falling rates for bond interest and redemption as bond issues have been largely or completely retired. In other cities, however, bond issues recently approved by the electorate have added to tax rates for bond service and total tax rates accordingly have increased.

The changes in total city tax rates which occurred between 1940-41 and 1946-47 are summarized below:

	Number of charter cities	Number of general law cities
1946-47 total property tax rates higher than 1940-41 total property tax rates-----	42	84
1946-47 total property tax rates the same as 1940-41 total property tax rates-----	4	10
1946-47 total property tax rates lower than 1940-41 total property tax rates-----	9	35
	<hr/> 55	<hr/> 129

Notwithstanding substantial additions to city assessment rolls in 1946-47, total tax rates for this year are materially higher in many cities. Important contributory factors are, (1) rising pay rolls because of salary revisions and return of personnel from the armed services; (2) provision for employee retirement; (3) purchase of materials and equipment not available during the war years; and (4) higher bond service requirements because of bond issues recently approved by the electorate.

In 16 of the 55 charter cities and 24 of the 129 general law cities, studied total tax rates went down in 1946-47. These reductions resulted in the main from lower rates for bond service and were generally small in amount. In 12 charter cities and 54 general law cities total tax rates remained the same. Increases in total tax rates for 1946-47 in the remaining cities are summarized in Table 20.

There is considerable variation among cities in the total tax rates applying to each $100 of assessed valuation. This is indicated below for two recent years:

Charter cities			General law cities
	Range	Median		Range	Median
1940-41	$0.75 (Grass Valley, Roseville) to $2.091 (Vallejo)	$1 44		$0.30 (West Covina) to $2.70 (Oceanside)	$1 30
1946-47	$0.75 (Roseville) to $2.71 (Oakland)	1 85		$0.35 (West Covina) to $3.10 (Perris)	1 33

The rising costs of providing services financed from general fund revenues has created serious problems in those cities operating under tax rate limitations for general purposes prescribed by charter or general law. When the tax rate limit has been reached, any increase in ad valorem tax revenue for general fund purposes is dependent wholly upon rising assessed valuations. In 1940-41 a number of cities were at, or within, a few cents of their tax rate limits for general purposes. Pressure for general fund revenues since 1940-41 has brought many more cities to, or within a few cents of, the legal limit. In many of these cities, assessed valuation has not increased sufficiently to provide the additional revenue needed to balance budgets and various supplementary revenue sources, discussed elsewhere in this report, have been adopted to augment the flow of revenue for general purposes.

The following summary indicates the number of cities at, or within a few cents of, their tax rate limits for general purposes. Out of 55 charter cities studied,

Year	Charter cities		General law cities

1946-47	28	11	90	18

26 cities in 1940-41 and 39 cities in 1946-47 were at, or close to their tax rate limits for general purposes. Out of 129 general law cities studied, 75 in 1940-41 and 108 in 1946-47 were at or close to their tax rate limits. (Chapter IV, Section 2)

City Sales Taxes

The adoption of city sales taxes came about largely in 1946 and accordingly the receipts from this source do not appear in Table 14 above.

The Cities of San Bernardino and Santa Barbara pioneered the field of municipal sales taxation in California. The San Bernardino tax, originally enacted at the rate of 1 percent of the gross receipts from the sale of tangible personal property at retail, yielded $491,353 during the calendar year 1945. This was almost nine dollars per capita. The present rate in San Bernardino is one-half of 1 percent. The Santa Barbara tax, with a rate of 1 percent, yielded about $340,000, or almost nine dollars per capita, in 1945-46.

The pressure on city general funds arising from higher costs and property tax receipts limited by tax rate ceilings led many cities to adopt sales taxes in 1946. Such taxes have been adopted in 44 cities throughout the State (December 1946). The following list indicates the cities using

Municipal sales taxes follow the State Retail Sales Tax Act in exempting food products for human consumption. In the majority of these cities sales tax proceeds are available for General Fund purposes. In several cities, however, the proceeds are earmarked in whole or in part for capital outlays. Several cities, viz., Berkeley, Los Angeles, Oakland, Redlands, Richmond, San Leandro, and San Diego, have adopted use taxes to complement the city sales tax. (Chapter IV, Section 3.)

Other Locally Collected Receipts

This category includes the receipts from business and other licenses, permits, fines and penalties, privileges, rent and sale of property, interest on public money and fees and charges for services by municipal departments. Receipts from these sources were $21,747,710 in 1929-30. They declined in subsequent years to a low point of $14,036,735 in 1934-35, which was 35 percent below 1929-30. Nontax receipts increased each year thereafter during the remainder of the thirties, reaching $23,449,817 in 1940-41.

In many cities during the war years property taxes and receipts from other existing local sources were insufficient to meet rising expenditures. The need for additional funds was met by resort to business licenses based on gross receipts or on number of employees or on the number of admissions to places of amusement (amusement taxes), parking meters, and transfers for general city purposes of a portion of the earnings of municipally-owned utilities.

Nontax receipts rose from $23,449,817 in 1940-41 to $34,157,299 in 1944-45, an increase of 46 percent. Receipts from nontax sources in 1940-41 and 1944-45 are shown below:

In the last several years a number of cities have adopted ordinances imposing business licenses on places of amusement based on the number of admissions (amusement taxes). Among these cities are the following:

City	Amount per ticket	Yield
Bell	$0 02	$9,728 (1945-46)
Chico	03	11,427 (1945-46 8 months only)
Colton	03	10,683 (1945-46 11 months only)

San Diego	01	214,131 (1945-46)

Parking meters have been installed both to raise funds to help defray the cost of traffic regulation and to speed up the turnover of parking space in congested areas. Parking meters are now in operation in about 65 cities and contracts for installation have been awarded in more than a dozen additional cities. (Chapter IV, Section 3.)

Subventions and Grants

It will be noted in Table 14 above, that state subventions and grants represent a much smaller proportion of the total receipts of city governments than the totals of all subventions and grants constitute of the total receipts of county governments. It should be recognized, however, that when the matter is put in these terms it ignores certain subventions and grants to cities other than state subventions and grants. For example, it ignores county contributions from gasoline taxes for street purposes in cities (primarily in Los Angeles County), and grants from the Federal Government during the war period for a variety of purposes and confined to a relatively small number of major centers of war production. At no time, however, are these grants really significant in the total of receipts and, moreover, the great bulk of the grants was concentrated in a relatively few cities. It would, therefore, distort the figures and make them less usable for comparative purposes if subventions from government units other than the State were included in the totals.

State subventions and grants to cities did not become really important items of receipts until after the year 1933-34. They now include shared taxes and liquor license revenues apportioned to cities as a result of legislation beginning in 1933. The relatively small amounts which appear in the earlier years represent payments by the State to the cities to reimburse them for bond interest and redemption charges and arose out of the system of separation of sources adopted by constitutional amendment in 1910. The details of the movements in the total of subventions and grants can be observed in Table 14. (Chapter IV, Section 4.)

Summary of Expenditures

Municipal expenditures from 1934-35 through 1944-45 are shown in Table 22. For years prior to 1934-35 available expenditure data include capital outlays from the proceeds of bond sales and hence are not directly comparable with data for 1934-35 and subsequent years. Expenditures for public service enterprises, expenditures from proceeds of bond sales and from trust funds, and special assessment expenditures, are excluded from the totals in this table.

The total expenditures included in Table 22 were $90,621,497 in 1934-35. They increased each year following 1934-35, reaching $123,652,508 in the last prewar year (1940-41). This was 36 percent above 1934-35. Further increases occurred in each of the war years, with the exception of 1942-43. The figure of $139,174,223 for 1944-45 is $15,521,715, or 13 percent, above that for 1940-41. The figure for 1944-45, even though it is considerably larger than expenditures in prior years, does not reflect the full impact of the rising costs of goods and services on municipal expenditures nor does it include any significant outlays for deferred maintenance. The full effects of these factors will become more and more apparent in the expenditure totals for subsequent years.

As to the distribution of total expenditures among the various functions of city government, protection to persons and property is the most important function in terms of amount expended, accounting for about one-third of total expenditures in 1944-45. Street expenditures are next in importance, accounting for approximately 15 percent of the total, followed by general government which constitutes slightly less than 10 percent of the total in this same year. (Chapter IV, Section 5.)

CHAPTER 5

The City and County of San Francisco

The City and County of San Francisco represents a distinct type of governmental unit among the local governments of California. Because of the different organizational pattern of this unit, it is discussed separately from the counties and cities considered heretofore.

Total Receipts

Total receipts for the City and County of San Francisco from 1929-30 to 1945-46 (not including public service enterprises), are shown in Table 23. In 1930-31 total receipts amounted to $39,809,714, but the decline of the early thirties, principally in receipts from the property tax, brought the total down to $37,178,397 in 1933-34, or about 7 percent below the 1930-31 level. By 1940-41, the last prewar year, total receipts had risen to $52,707,383 and further increases during and since the war period brought the total to $64,870,873 in 1945-46, which was 63 percent above the total receipts for 1930-31.

The breakdown of total receipts by sources is shown for selected years in the following tabulation:

The proportions which each of these types of receipts comprise of the total receipts of San Francisco are indicated by the table below:

It is apparent from these data that property taxes have steadily declined as a percentage of total receipts in San Francisco even though the absolute amount of property tax collections were at their peak in 1945-46. Against this declining proportion of property tax receipts to the total, subventions and grants have steadily risen as a percentage of the total receipts of San Francisco City and County. (Chapter V, Section 1)

General Property Taxes

Receipts from property taxes declined by 20 per cent from a total of $33,176,706 in 1930-31 to $26,504,777 in 1933-34. Moderate increases in the remainder of the thirties brought the total to $35,054,385 in 1940-41. During the years since 1940-41 assessed valuations in San Francisco increased moderately while tax rates rose substantially, with the result that property tax receipts were $41,189,093 in 1945-46 or about 18 percent above 1940-41. These were the highest receipts from property taxes reported during the period under consideration, viz., from 1929-30 to 1945-46. (Chapter V, Section 2)

A. Assessed Valuations

The net assessed valuation of property subject to taxation in the City and County of San Francisco from 1929-30 through 1946-47 is shown in Table 25.

Locally assessed property declined by $79,311,280 from $807,459,060 in 1929-30, to $728,147,780 in 1936-37, or by approximately 10 percent. The addition of state assessed property to the tax base in 1935-36, however, brought the total net assessed valuation above the 1929-30 level. Locally assessed property increased slightly in 1937-38 and 1938-39 and then declined again in 1939-40 and 1940-41. The 1940-41 valuation of locally assessed property—$731,148,832—was less than 1 percent above the 1936-37 low-point and was 9 percent below the pre-depression peak of 1929-30. Even with the inclusion of state assessed property, the 1940-41 tax base was only $13,127,742 above that in 1929-30.

Locally assessed property increased each year following 1940-41. The 1946-47 valuation of such property—$775,622,071 was 6 percent above 1940-41, but was still $31,836,989, or 4 percent below the corresponding 1929-30 valuation. Total net assessed valuation in 1946-47, including both locally assessed and state assessed property, was $53,247,091 above total net assessed valuation in 1929-30.

The property tax base in the City and County of San Francisco has been adversely affected by a decline in land valuations which, like similar declines in other large cities of the State during the last decade and a half, occurred particularly in the older central core of the city. At the same time, however, new construction has not added to the tax base as substantially as it has in a number of other cities where more space for expansion is available. As a result, the tax base in the City and County of San Francisco has increased in recent years relatively less than that in most of the larger cities in the State. This is indicated in the following comparison of increases in total net assessed valuation between 1940-41 and 1946-47 in the City and County of San Francisco and in the 10 largest cities in the State.

The 1946-47 tax rate for general fund purposes, subject to the charter tax rate limitation of $1.65, is $1.606739 compared with $1.324581 in 1945-46.

Total tax rates in san Francisco reached a high point of $4.04 per $100 of assessed valuations in the early thirties and declined thereafter to their lowest amount of $3.48 in 1933-34. After a series of moderate increases and decreases between 1934-35 to 1940-41, the tax rates of this governmental unit began a sustained climb which carried them, with only one exception in 1943-44, to unprecedented levels. By 1946-47 the total tax rate of the City and County of San Francisco had reached the peak of $5.55 per $100 of assessed valuations (Chapter V, Section 2).

Other Locally-Collected Receipts

This category of receipts shown in Table 23 includes receipts from such sources as licenses, fines, rents, interest, and various departmental receipts. It is clear from this table that these receipts have never constituted a very significant part of total receipts in the City and County of San Francisco. In 1930-31, they comprised about 8 percent of total receipts. In subsequent years, they brought in almost 6 percent of total receipts in 1935-36, and 7 percent of receipts in 1940-41. The increase of receipts from these sources in 1945-46, raised their proportion of total receipts to 9 percent. Over the years between 1929-30 and 1945-46 they show a high degree of stability as a source of receipts (Chapter V, Section 3).

Subventions and Grants

Subventions and grants have risen from approximately $3,500,000 in 1929-30 to a total of almost $16,000,000 in 1945-46. This growth is a reflection of the state-local fiscal interrelationships discussed in earlier sections.

A comparison of the principal subventions and grants to the City and County of San Francisco for 1935-36 and 1945-46 is shown below :

Summary of Expenditures

Total expenditures (not including public service enterprises) and departmental expenditures included in that total are shown in Table 29. This table lists both the total and departmental expenditures of the City and County of San Francisco over the period from 1929-30 to 1945-46. With the exception of a decrease in 1942-43, departmental expenditures increase steadily after 1933-34 to a maximum of $48,402,477 in 1945-46. Table 30 compares the departmental and other expenditures comprising the total for the two years, 1935-36 and 1944-45. It also indicates the percentages of total expenditures which each item involves. Departmental expenditures increase from 70.97 percent of total expenditures in 1935-36 to 79.99 percent in 1944-45 primarily because of increased departmental expenditures for hospitals and charities (Chapter V, Section 5).

CHAPTER 6

Exemptions From County and City Property Taxation

The State Constitution of 1879 provided the basic pattern of exemptions from property taxes. It states that "growing crops, property used exclusively for public schools, and such as may belong to the United States, this State, or to any county or municipal corporation within this State, shall be exempt from taxation." However, subsequent constitutional amendments, approved by the electorate, have additionally narrowed the property tax base during subsequent years. These amendments have exempted various additional kinds of property from ad valorem taxation.

This continued expansion in the granting of exemptions to property under various conditions of ownership has more and more undermined the tax base of local government. Between 1945-46 and 1946-47, the aggregate of county gross assessed property valuations of locally assessed property increased by only 9 percent, while the aggregate amount of exempted property in the counties increased by 41 percent. Clearly, these relative rates of increase cannot continue at rates which are anything like the figures just quoted without serious depletion of the property tax base and serious inroads upon property tax revenue for both counties and cities. Yet there are no indications that the growth in the amount of exemptions as a proportion of total gross assessed valuations will level off or decline in the years immediately ahead.

It is impossible to determine with complete accuracy the total amount of property exempt from ad valorem taxation. In very few jurisdictions are any figures available as to exempt public property and in the case of property in private ownership partial data only are available. Because of the limitations of available data, it is necessary, in determining the total amount of exempt property, to estimate various components of this total. The resultant figures, therefore, does not represent a complete and actual inventory of tax-exempt property, but it is nevertheless indicative of the nature and extent of the problem.

In 1932 the California Tax Research Bureau published an estimate of the total assessed value of tax-exempt property classified by ownership. To the extent that available data permit, a similar estimate has been made for 1946-47. Both of these estimates are shown in Table 31. All of this property is exempt from county ad valorem taxation and such of it as is located within incorporated cities is also exempt from ad valorem taxation for municipal purposes.⁶

In 1932-33 the assessed value of tax-exempt property was estimated at $1,326,055,000, of which 77 percent was in public ownership and 23 percent in private ownership. In 1946-47 the assessed value of tax-exempt property is estimated at $1,911,833,206, an increase of 44 percent over 1932-33. Between 1932-33 and 1946-47 exempt property in private ownership increased by 62 percent and exempt public property increased by 39 percent. Property in public ownership accounts for 74 percent of total exempt property in 1946-47 and property in private ownership accounts for 26 percent.

⁶ The same is the case with respect to various other units of local government.

Property in Public Ownership Exempt from Property Taxation

The estimated total of public property exempt from ad valorem taxation in 1946-47 is $1,405,977,252.⁶ City property accounts for 45 percent of this total; federal property for 23 percent; school property for 16 percent; state property for 11 percent; and county property for 5 percent. It should be noted that federal holdings are the second largest among these categories of publicly-owned exempt properties. A detailed consideration of the extent and distribution of federal land holdings in the counties, and estimates of the loss of ad valorem tax revenue as a result of their exemption are presented in the Fact-Finding Report of the committee in an appendix to the section dealing with the exemption problem.

Property owned by the City and County of San Francisco, exclusive of school property, is included under cities. School property in the City and County of San Francisco is included under schools. Value of property owned by governmental units as reported to the State Controller has been reduced by 50 percent to conform roughly to the level of assessed valuation of property in private ownership.

Property in Private Ownership Exempt From Property Taxation

Table 32 shows the estimated amount of property in private ownership exempt from ad valorem taxation in 1946-47. The largest single item in the total of $505,856,005 is the property of veterans or their qualified relatives, which accounts for 38 percent of the total. The State's remainder interest in property sold by the Veterans Welfare Board accounts for 2 percent of the total. The householder's exemption accounts for 30 percent of the total; growing crops for 11 percent; church property for 8 percent; college property for 5 percent; welfare property for 4 percent; and cemetery property for 2 percent.

Property of Veterans Exempt from Property Taxation

The amount of property of veterans exempt from property taxation and the number of claimants involved, as reported to the State Board of Equalization, is shown in Table 33. In 1915 there were 15,647 claimants and the total property exempted amounted to $10,942,175. By 1930-31 the number of claimants had risen to 176,218 and the total property exempted to $108,677,494. In the early thirties the number of claimants increased substantially; but the amount of property exempted, even with the larger number of claimants, did not rise materially. In 1940-41 there were 152,436 claimants compared with 176,218 in 1930-31 and the amount of property exempted was $103,597,571 compared with $108,677,494 in 1930-31. Since 1940-41 both the number of claimants and the amount of property exempted have increased, with the largest increases coming in the last two years. Between 1944-45 and 1945-46 the number of claimants rose from 175,006 to 210,198 and the amount of property exempted increased from $137,393,891 to $161,713,527, or by 18 percent. In 1946-47 a further increase of 67,147 in number of claimants is shown and the amount of property exempted rose by $31,072,567, or by 19 percent.

There is considerable variation among counties in the impact of the recent increases in veterans' exemptions. In six counties 1946-47 veterans' exemptions were lower than those of 1945-46: Alpine, —4 percent; Inyo,

Among those counties, the range in percentage increase in veterans' exemptions is from 5 percent in Marin County to 53 percent in Contra Costa County. In the latter county between 1945-46 and 1946-47 the number of claimants increased from 2,961 to 4,057 and the amount of property exempted rose from $2,275,900 to $3,493,025. In addition to Contra Costa County, the following counties showed substantial percentage increases over 1945-46:

Counties showing an increase of less than 10 percent were Marin, 5 percent; Lassen, 7 percent; and Mono, 9 percent.

There is also considerable variation among counties in the average veterans' exemption. In 1946 the range was from $438 in Trinity County to $941 in San Mateo County. Data showing average exemptions for all counties are summarized below:

Counties with average exemptions of less than 600 are Trinity, $438; Lake, $493; Colusa, $510; San Luis Obispo, $576; and Lassen, $581.

It is estimated that the State's remainder interest in property of the Veterans Welfare Board amounted to $11,000,000 in 1946-47 (Table 24). If this exemption of the State's remainder interest continues, the amount involved is likely to increase substantially in light of the approval by the electors in November, 1946, of the Veterans Bond Act of 1946 authorizing a state bond issue of $100,000,000, the proceeds of which are to be made available for loans to veterans to help them in purchasing homes and farms in accordance with the provisions of the Veterans Farm and Home Purchase Act of 1943.

Church Property Exempt from Property Taxation

In 1946 church exemptions numbering 6,211 and amounting to $38,573,902 were reported to the State Board of Equalization. The largest exemptions were in the following counties:

Welfare Exemption

The welfare exemption, first reported to the State Board of Equalization in 1946, totals $22,826,614, with 588 claimants. The largest exemptions are in the following counties:

Tax Exempt Property as Shown on County Assessment Rolls

County assessment rolls show only a portion of the property exempt from county ad valorem taxation. Exempt property in public ownership typically is not shown on county assessment rolls and a large amount of exempt property in private ownership likewise is not shown on the rolls. As indicated above, the assessed value of these properties must be estimated to determine the total of exempt property. Examination of county assessment rolls indicates that there is some variation among counties in the types of exemptions shown on assessment rolls, with the result that inter-county comparisons must be made with qualification because reported exemptions in one county may contain types of exempt property not shown on the roll in another county. In the case of any given county, however, the same constituent items generally appear to be included in reported exemptions from year to year. Accordingly, comparisons of exempt property in a given county over a period of years are not subject to the same extent to the limitations encountered in inter-county comparisons.

It should be noted that the figures in this section are the assessed values of property entered on county assessment rolls and exempted upon proof of qualification for exemption. Accordingly, they greatly underestimate the extent of the exemption problem; but notwithstanding their limited coverage and varying composition, it is believed they are indicative of certain significant developments. They are presented, however, subject to the limitations previously noted.

Tax-exempt property as shown on county assessment rolls from 1936-37 to 1946-47 is presented in Table 42. In 1936-37 this property, as shown on county assessment rolls, amounted to $151,343,829 or 2.9 percent of the gross valuation of county assessed property. By 1945-46 tax-exempt properties constituted 3.2 percent of the gross valuation of county assessed property and amounted to $224,126,453. Between 1945-46 and 1946-47 tax-exempt property increased by $91,401,198, or by 41 percent. This increase raised the total of tax-exempt properties to a point where it amounted to 4.2 percent of the gross assessed valuations of the counties. The bulk of the increase may be explained in terms of a continued rise in veterans' exemptions and the welfare exemptions first granted in 1946-47.

There was considerable variation among the counties in the impact of exemption increases in 1946-47. Two counties—Alpine and San Benito—reported smaller exemptions in 1946-47 than in 1945-46. Data for the remaining 55 counties are summarized below:

Among the counties with the largest percentage increases were Los Angeles with 64 percent; Mono, 48 percent; Napa, 46 percent; and Marin, 40 percent. Counties with percentage increases of less than 10 percent were Plumas and Solano with increases of less than 9 percent; Lassen, Orange and San Mateo with increases of 7 percent; and San Bernardino with only a 6 percent rise in exemptions.

During the years from 1936-37 through 1946-47 approximately three-fourths of the exempt property shown on county assessment rolls was located inside incorporated municipalities. Exempt property constitutes a larger percentage of the gross valuation of county assessed property inside incorporated municipalities than outside municipalities. In 1946-47 tax exempt property was 5.1 percent of the gross valuation of county assessed property inside incorporated municipalities. The corresponding percentage outside incorporated municipalities was 2.6.

Tax Exempt Property as Shown on City Assessment Rolls

Available data are not sufficient to permit determination of how much of the estimated $1,911,833,206 of tax exempt property in 1946-47 was located within incorporated municipalities and was therefore exempt from city ad valorem taxation. City assessment rolls, like those of the counties, typically do not show exempt property in public ownership or various types of exempt property in private ownership. Accordingly, exemptions shown on city assessment rolls greatly underestimate the extent of the exemption problem. Inter-city comparisons, because of variations in the types of exempt property shown on assessment rolls, are subject to the same qualifications as noted previously in the case of inter-county comparisons.

Tax exempt property as shown on city assessment rolls (or on county assessment rolls where the county assesses for the city under contractual agreement) from 1936-37 to 1946-47 is presented in Table 43.

Source: Recapitulations of County and City Assessment Rolls; State Board of Equalization, Biennial Reports; State Controller, Annual Report of Financial Transactions of Municipalities and Counties.

In 1936-37 tax exempt property as shown on city (or county) assessment rolls amounted to $92,893,216, or 2.6 percent of the gross valuation of locally assessed property. In 1945-46 tax exempt property amounted to $170,572,464, or 3.7 percent of the gross valuation of locally assessed property. Between 1945-46 and 1946-47 tax exempt property as shown on city (or county) assessment rolls increased by $100,720,752, or 59 percent.⁸ The bulk of this increase is accounted for by rising veterans' exemptions and the welfare exemption.

The impact of exemption increases in 1946-47 has not been uniform among cities because of the concentration of exempt property in certain localities. This concentration is particularly serious with respect to veterans' exemptions. Certain localities with advantages of climate or in which veterans' hospitals or other facilities are situated have experienced a disproportionately large reduction in their tax base in comparison with other localities where similar factors are not present to the same extent.

Generally, however, veterans' exemptions are typically the most important single item in the total of exempt property as shown on city and county assessment rolls. A study has been made of 1946-47 exemptions in 140 cities with independent assessors whose total exemption of property in private ownership as shown on the assessment rolls, is $57,528,966. This total was distributed by types of exemption as indicated below:

TABLE 44
Exemptions in 140 Selected Cities, 1946-47

Type of exemption	Amount of exemption	Percentage of total
Veterans -----	$28,869,475	50
Veterans Welfare Board Property -----	1,743,253	3
Church -----	12,795,522	24
College -----	7,468,420	13
Welfare -----	3,787,156	7
Householders -----	1,865,140	3
	$57,528,966	100

Veterans' exemptions constitute 50 percent of the total burden of exemptions in these counties and are more than twice as large as the second largest amount—that given to church property. (Chapter VII, Section 1)

CHAPTER 7

Recommendations of the Committee

On the basis of an analysis of the facts collected in the Fact-Finding Report, a summary of which has been included herein, and on the basis of information gathered at its public hearings, the committee makes the following recommendations regarding certain aspects and phases of the fiscal structures of these various governmental units in California.

I. Liquor License Fees

That liquor license fees be increased and that from the proceeds of all such fees, including the full amount of this increase, there shall be deducted, (1) the costs of collection up to a maximum of three (3) percent of the proceeds, and (2) the costs of administration and present enforcement by the State; and that the remainder of the proceeds be apportioned to the cities and counties on the present basis of distribution.

⁸ See Table 43, footnote 1. If the City of Oakland is excluded in 1946, the increase is $92,189,377, or 54 percent.

II. Motor Vehicle In Lieu Tax

1. That the administration of the motor vehicle in lieu tax remain with the Department of Motor Vehicles until such time as there may be established a single and central state agency responsible for the administration of all state taxes.

2. That the rate of the motor vehicle in lieu tax be established annually to equal to the nearest cent, one-half ($\frac{1}{2}$) the average state-wide rate applicable to tangible property as determined from the actual annual tax rates set by local legislative bodies.

3. That from the proceeds of the motor vehicle in lieu tax there shall first be deducted the costs of collection not to exceed three (3) percent of such proceeds and that the remainder shall be returned to the counties and cities on a per capita basis.

III. Exemption of Property from Ad Valorem Taxation

1. The committee endorses the granting of tax exemption in accordance with the present constitutional and statutory provisions as a recognition of the obligation of the people of the State to veterans. But, because of the unequal distribution among the counties and cities of veterans' properties and the consequent inequality in the distribution of the cost of exemption in loss of tax revenue, the Legislature should enact provisions to reimburse counties and cities for such loss of revenue resulting from the exemption of veterans' property from ad valorem taxation.

2. Because of the unequal distribution among the counties and cities of welfare properties and the consequent inequality in the distribution of the cost of exemption in loss of tax revenue, the Legislature should enact provisions to reimburse counties and cities for such loss of revenue resulting from the exemption of welfare property from ad valorem taxation.

3. In order that the total amount of property in private ownership exempted from ad valorem taxation may be determined annually, it is recommended that all such property be entered on county and city assessment rolls in the same manner as taxable property with appropriate indication of its exemption.

4. That where property, which is owned by the State and which is, therefore, exempted from ad valorem taxation, is rented and income is derived therefrom by the State, provisions should be made to reimburse counties and cities in an amount equivalent to the property taxes which would be derived from such property were it held in private ownership.

5. That the Legislature, by resolution, urge Congress and the President of the United States:

- (a) To dispose immediately of all surplus property acquired for the prosecution of the war.
- (b) To refrain from the acquisition of additional property not essential to the conduct of permanent and established functions of the Federal Government.

- (c) To reimburse the state and local governments for the loss of tax revenue on property acquired by the Federal Government in an amount equivalent to that which would have been derived had such property remained subject to state and local taxation, or to dispose of such property in order that it may be returned to state and local taxation.

IV. The Assessment of Property

The property tax has been and will continue to be a major source of revenue to local governments. In view of the fiscal importance of this tax to local government, the equitable assessment of property for property tax purposes is a matter of primary interest to all local governments. At the same time, there is a state interest in property assessment because of the responsibility placed upon the State Board of Equalization to value the property of public utility enterprises and to equalize such valuations in relation to locally assessed property and in connection with the use of state funds for equalization purposes. The committee therefore recommends that:

1. Assessors be provided with staff and facilities essential to the efficient performance of the complicated task of valuation now confronting them.

2. Counties be permitted to undertake on a cooperative basis, provision for temporary or permanent assistance of a technical nature, in those cases in which, in the opinion of the boards of supervisors, such cooperative arrangements will facilitate more efficient and economical assessment practice.

3. Provisions should be made to stimulate the counties to undertake more frequent general reassessments of property, not only to secure a proper relation between assessed and actual value under changing conditions, but also to maintain that equalization of assessments within the county. The procedure to be followed should be in general conformity with the present procedure for county reappraisal commissions.

4. That the Division of Assessment Standards of the State Board of Equalization be provided with staff and equipment adequate to assist assessors in achieving a greater standardization of their procedures and practices.

5. At the present time the State Board of Equalization has authority to equalize assessments between counties only by raising or lowering the assessment as a whole. It seems desirable to extend this authority to permit equalization within counties in those cases where one type or class of property only requires equalization.

6. That all reserved mineral rights be entered on local assessment rolls and that legislation be introduced for the development of a standard procedure to be followed in the assessment of such rights.

7. That the assessment of personal property for retail sales be made on the basis of one-twelfth of the annual value of the inventory of such personal property.

V. Personal Property Taxes

1. That all personal property taxes be unsecured.
2. That the delinquent date for such personal property taxes be the same as the delinquent date for the first payment of real property taxes.
3. That all unsecured personal property taxes be collected by the tax collector.

VI. Tax Statements

That the last date for filing statements by the taxpayer be changed from the last Monday in June to the last Monday in May in order to relieve the pressure under which the assessor now operates in completing the assessment roll.

VII. County Business Licenses

That counties be given authority to impose licenses for the privilege of doing business in unincorporated areas.

VIII. State General Fund Surplus

1. That out of such surplus as may arise from the excess of State General Fund revenues over State General Fund expenditures, there shall be set up, first, a sinking fund sufficiently large to retire the entire outstanding state indebtedness.

2. That if, after the establishment of such a sinking fund sufficiently large to retire the entire state indebtedness, there remains any unbudgeted surplus, this surplus amount be placed in a stabilization fund to be used only when the revenues of the State, from present sources, are not adequate to balance the State Budget.

IX. State Tax Administration

The complexity of the tax system of the State and the distribution of the administration of this system among several different agencies, leads the committee to recommend that the question of consolidating all revenue administrations in one agency be studied with a view to determining whether such consolidation would be in the interest of greater economy and efficiency in State Government as well as greater convenience to the taxpayer. As part of this problem the committee further recommends that particular attention be given in this study to the question of the separation of liquor law enforcement from this tax administering agency.

X. Ad Valorem Taxation of Property by the State

The committee recommends the repeal of that portion of Section 34A of Article IV of the Constitution relating to the levy of an ad valorem tax on property by the State. The committee strongly holds to the opinion that the State should never have recourse to ad valorem property taxation in order to balance any future State Budget. While the committee believes that such a property tax would never be used by the Legislature, nevertheless the existence of such power is an ever-present threat to the property taxpayer. The possibility of a state tax upon property must surely be recalled by many county assessors and boards of supervisors when they consider such problems as a reappraisal of property to a higher level of assessed valuation and the equalization of assessments. The committee is of the opinion that the repeal of this portion of the aforesaid section of the Constitution and the prohibition thereby of state ad valorem taxes would constitute a desirable incentive to improved assessment practices.

In summary, the recommendations submitted herewith indicate that while the State is currently in excellent financial condition, the committee nevertheless feels that the present surplus of General Fund revenues represents the prepaid taxes of many business enterprises and individual citizens and it strongly urges that, while the present revenue structure of the State should be retained intact, the surplus of General Fund revenues should be placed in a Stabilization Fund to provide financial assistance to the state and local government units during future lean years. In the interests of distributing the burdens of ad valorem property taxes more equitably, and at the same time perhaps, enlarging the receipts of local governments from this source, the committee recommends certain adjustments to the property tax base by way of assessment procedure and the granting of exemptions. Other recommendations regarding the motor vehicle in lieu tax, liquor license fees, and county business licenses are also designed to bolster the receipts of counties and cities. The committee recognizes that its recommendations do not provide for complete and permanent relief from the financial problems which have beset local government, but the assistance they provide in addition to the increased revenues from property taxes which may be expected, and rightly so with a continuance of current levels of employment and economic activity, should considerably lessen the seriousness of the problem. In addition to the specific recommendations set forth above which are designed to provide financial assistance to units of local government, the committee urges the Legislature to consider the reimbursement of local units for additional costs imposed upon them and for any loss of revenue they may have suffered through the depletion of the local tax base by legislative action. The committee further suggests that no future legislation be enacted which would have either the effect of adding to the costs of local government or depleting local tax revenues without first carefully analyzing the extra burden that such legislation would impose, and, secondly, providing for the reimbursement of the local government units concerned for any additional expenditures they may be required to make, or for the loss of tax revenue which they may be forced to endure.

Moreover, the foregoing recommendations do not provide for major alterations in the revenue structure of either the state or the local governments. The committee feels that considerable additional study and research is both necessary and desirable regarding certain of the problems within the scope of its inquiry. Among these, the financial operations of school districts and other special districts take precedence in its attention. Temporarily, at least, some of the financial problems of the former have been mitigated by the increased state apportionments to schools contained in the constitutional amendment adopted as an initiative measure in November, 1946. However, this does not imply that such a study should be postponed. On the contrary, the heavy burden that fixed charges of this nature, which derive either from the Constitution or from an action of the Legislature, place against the revenues of the State, make an inquiry into the fiscal administration of districts imperative and urgent. A second matter which, in the judgment of the committee, ought to receive further and careful analysis is the impact of federal tax collections upon the State's economy and their ultimate effects upon the state and local revenue systems. In 1945-46, total taxes collected by the federal, state and local governments in California amounted to approximately $4,360,000,000, or about one-third of the income payments in the State for that year. The share of the Federal Government amounted to better than three-fourths of these total collections. The committee strongly urges a thorough study of this problem and the broader problem of the effects of federal, state and local taxes upon business enterprise, individual incomes and general economic development in California.

With a view of expanding the investigation beyond the limits which time, funds and staff have imposed up to this point so that the Legislature may, (1) secure more complete information regarding the fiscal administration and operation of school and other districts, (2) carefully and thoroughly study the assessments of the public utility properties set forth in Article XIII, Section 14 of the Constitution which are now assessed by the State Board of Equalization, (3) maintain, on a current basis, the present compilations of data which have been developed on the finances of counties, cities and districts, (4) further investigate and analyze federal, state and local fiscal relationships in California to secure a more complete and comprehensive view of these relationships and their impact upon the economy of the State, and (5) seek more permanent and long-run solutions to many of the problems of government finance in California than have heretofore been suggested and adopted by many units of government in periods of financial stringency, the committee believes that the present inquiry should be extended. The following recommendation embodies this proposal.

XI. Continuation of the Study of State and Local Government Finance in California

1. That the Legislature, through the creation of a committee for this purpose, continue this inquiry into the fiscal affairs of state and local government in California. This committee should be assisted by a tax counsel responsible for the direction of all research required by the committee.

2. Since traditionally the Legislature has a fundamental and major responsibility to provide funds by the enactment of revenue laws which are fair and equitable in the distribution of their burdens among taxpayers, and to apportion these funds to the proper authority for their expenditure, it is recommended that upon the completion of the work of this committee, the Legislature establish a permanent legislative committee to be known as the Legislative Revenue and Taxation Research Committee. The committee would be charged with maintaining on a current annual basis the data and analyses submitted by prior and current committees and would report annually to the Legislature on all matters pertaining to revenue and taxation and the allocation of funds derived therefrom by the state and local units of government. This standing committee would be assisted by a permanent Legislative Tax Counsel who would be charged with the maintenance and continuance of all research pertaining to these problems.
